FOND DU LAC (Wis.) April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It will be absolutely impossible to describe, or even attempt to describe, the scene when the vessel sank on which so many of us had started so happily on what we anticipated would be our honeymoon voyages.

There were more than a score of people in our party, coming back in celebration of their happy honeymoon spent abroad. We brought many of them, widowed by the terrible catastrophe, to homes of mourning that were instead of happiness and joy.

Everything seemed to be in confusion and it is difficult to relate the events in their sequence. We were all on deck in the evening enjoying the cool air and the starlit night. The sea was the smoothest we had ever seen. Old sailors told us that it was not only smooth but calm and glassy. About 1:15 o'clock the atmosphere changed a trifle, a sudden drop which drove many inside their cabins. We could have been going at a terrific speed in the direction of the icebergs, for the air became so chilly in a very few minutes that we found it impossible to keep warm even when we put our wraps and blankets around us.

We had retired, when there was a dull shaking of the Titanic which was not so much like a shake as it was a slowing down of the massive craft. It indicated that our boat had come to a standstill, and then we heard the orders of the captain and went on deck to see what it meant.

COMPOSURE AND BRAVERY.

I never saw such calm composure and cool bravery in my life as the men of the first and second cabin displayed. Col. Astor seemed to be the controlling figure, and he, Maj. Butt, Mr. Guggenheim, Mr. Widener and Mr. Thayer clustered in a group as if they were holding a quick consultation as to what steps to be taken next.

Then Col. Astor came forward with the cry: "Not a man until every woman and child is safe in the boats."

Then many of the women did not seem to want to leave the vessel. Mrs Astor clung to her husband, begging him to let her remain on board the Titanic with him. When he insisted that she save herself, she threw her arms around him and begged him with tears to permit her to share his fate. Col. Astor picked her up bodily and carried her to her boat which was the one just ahead of ours and placed her safely in it.

I lingered with my brother and his wife, loath to leave them, although we all knew that the ship was sinking and that the ocean would soon swallow up all that remained of the proud steamer and her hundreds of ill-fated passengers. We both begged my brother to come with us but he said:

"No, I will remain with the others, no matter what happens."

Then when it was time to go, when the last boat was being lowered to the waterline, we were hurried into it by my brother who bade us good-by and said calmly but with feeling:

"Be brave, no matter what happens, be brave."

Then he waved his hand and our boat shot out from the steamer just in time to escape being borne down by the suction, for we were among the last to leave.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

As the ship settled there was a terrific explosion which rent it in two, and, as it sank beneath the waves, we could see my brother waving his hand toward us in the dark, although it is hardly possible that he could see us for none of us had a light on our boat. In fact we had nothing but the clothes we had hastily donned when we were informed that the vessel had been wrecked. None of us thought of putting any provisions or water on the boats, for we knew the Carpathia had been signaled to come to our rescue and was on its way.

Our greatest terror, outside of the bitter cold which benumbed us, was the fear that the Carpathia would be unable to see us and would run us down. We did not attempt to row our boats any distance, as many people seem to think. We wanted to keep the boats together as closely as possible, and the only rowing that was done was to get away from the suction of the Titanic when it sank and to keep warm when we felt about to be overcome by the bitter cold.

After the ship had sunk, everything became as quiet as the grave. Nobody talked, not a word was spoken during the long vigil until the Carpathia hove in sight about 7:30 o'clock, when it was broad daylight. The only words uttered as we stood huddled in our little craft were those of a little boy of 6, who looked up innocently into his mother's face every now and then and said:

"Mamma, why didn't we stay on the big boat? I don't like this little boat."

NUMBER OF SHOTS.

We heard a number of shots as the boats were being lowered, but we were told it was the officers who were keeping discipline.

PRESIDENT MAY DISPATCH A WARSHIP TO MEXICO.

State Department Says Action Is Considered for the Purpose of Extending Relief to Americans Isolated on West Coast of Republic—Cruiser Maryland Is Likely to Be Vessel Selected.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—President Taft probably will send a warship soon to the West Coast of Mexico to enable United States citizens, isolated in Sinaloa and other States, to leave the disturbed districts. A State Department announcement tonight declared this action likely in view of the general anxiety for Americans in those localities.

State Department officials pointed out tonight that with the suspension of railroad communication and the interruption of telegraph service, American citizens on the West Coast of Mexico, especially in Los Mochis, in Sinaloa, where there are many Americans, as well as in the vicinity of Mazatlan are isolated. This fact, together with many reports of increased lawlessness on the West Coast, is causing much anxiety to Americans in the region affected, and their friends in the United States.

Many requests and expressions of anxiety have reached the State Department, and in order to obtain news of the Americans in the affected localities, President Taft, it is expected, will send a vessel within a few days to afford an opportunity to leave the disturbed districts to those who may wish to do so.

State Department officials declared this action necessary, because otherwise there was no way to learn of the safety of those Americans entirely cut off from communication with the outside world.

The sending of a United States vessel to the coast of Mexico sets a precedent in the present revolutionary disturbances, as heretofore the United States navy has refrained from cruising in Mexican waters. A British vessel, last year, however, landed marines on the western coast of Mexico, to enable foreigners to escape the effects of a threatened attack by rebels.

The armored cruiser Maryland is at San Diego, Cal., the gunboat Yorktown is en route north from Guatemala to San Diego, the gunboat Vicksburg is at Panama. It is likely the Maryland will be the vessel selected.

They brought with them a number of men who were drafted into the army in the southern portion of the State.

Young Escobosa, who has been leading a band of bandits in the Rio Sonora Valley for the past six weeks, is reported by the officials to now be in the United States, having crossed the line a few days ago. The soldiers and rurales have led him a merry chase for the past month.

Five Americans, who have been in jail at Altar, in the district of that name, Sonora, charged with bearing arms against the government, were liberated this week by the judge of the first instance at Altar. The men give the names as follows: G. T. Smith, Roy Kyle, Ed. Lang, Thomas Lubie, Dell Douglas. The men said they were looking for their pack animals when they were arrested by Federal soldiers. They had been prospecting in Arizona, near the boundary line and they thought their pack animals had strayed south. They followed them on foot, all being heavily armed.

The first mail from Culiacan arrived today, having been sent by boat to Guaymas and thence by rail.

AMAZED BY REVELATIONS OF WIRELESS OPERATOR.

Bride Admits Peevishness of Chief Let Nearest Ship to Titanic Get Away.

United States Senatorial Committee Lays the Foundations for Sweeping Reforms in the Conduct of Marconi Telegraphy on Ocean Liners—Ismay Pleads to Be Excused, but Is Held to Appear in Washington.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—With dramatic suddenness the Senate investigation of the Titanic disaster came to an end today, so far as the New York hearing was concerned. It will be resumed, however, in Washington on Monday, when J. Bruce Ismay and P. A. S. Franklin, the chief officers of the White Star Line, and more than a score of the officers and crew of the sunken vessel will appear before the committee.

Incident to the sudden close of the hearing here was the story of Harold S. Bride, the second and only surviving wireless operator of the Titanic. His tale was one of suffering and death. He told of the final plunge of the vessel to its ocean burial. Its captain's end also was revealed. He leaped from the bridge when the waters were closing over the ship.

In connection with the transfer of the hearing to Washington it was intimated that the power of the Senate on Federal territory would be undisputed in getting at the real facts and no question of State rights could rise to interfere. Throughout the hearing officers of the White Star Line had portrayed the dangers of sailors boarding houses in New York as a reason why those detained by the committee should be allowed to sail on the Lapland, which left today.

A CRIPPLED YOUTH.

Wireless Operator Bride, crippled as a result of his experiences, and seated in an invalid's chair, told his story of the last moments of the Titanic. His narrative, drawn from him piecemeal by Senator Smith, of Michigan, chairman of the committee, held enthralled the committee and the audience. When his ordeal ended he was almost on the verge of collapse.

After the hearing was resumed in the afternoon, announcement of the change of base was made. Herbert J. Pittman, the third officer of the Titanic, had been called to the witness chair. Senator Smith directed one question to him, relating to the whereabouts of the ship's log. The witness said he did not know. Promptly Mr. Smith announced the committee's decision to resume the inquiry in Washington on Monday. Later he issued a statement giving in detail his reasons for the sudden change in plans.

The committee devoted its entire day to an investigation of the connection of the wireless with the disaster. H. T. Cottam, the operator on the Carpathia, was the first witness. Senator Smith sought to establish certain testimony he had given on the stand yesterday and this soon was ended.

THE STAR WITNESS.

Then came Bride, the "star" witness of the day. He was hollow-cheeked and had just come from a physician's care. He locked and interlocked his fingers incessantly.

Like Cottam, who is 23 years old, Bride is merely a boy. Neither had any telegraphic experience previous to taking up wireless telegraphy and both told tales of long hours at low wages and days and nights spent without sleep.

This inexperience and the mental condition of the young operators were the two points on which Senator Smith bore persistently. He had put Cottam through a gruelling examination, in which the youth testified that he had not slept more than eight or ten hours between Sunday night, when the Titanic called for help, and Thursday night, when the vessel docked here. Bride's story was one that bore out virtually all that Cottam's had established, except that his was one of nervous strain and worry and high-keyed suspense.

Bride was questioned closely as to the first call for aid sent out by the Titanic. He said the first vessel to answer was the Frankfurt of the North German Lloyd line. The operator on the Frankfurt, according to the witness, apparently considered the call more or less trivial, for an hour after receiving the imperative appeal of the sea he called the Titanic to inquire specifically just what was wrong.

"Mr. Phillips said he was a fool," Bride testified, referring to the chief operator on the Titanic, who lost his life, "and told him to keep out."

No effort was made to re-establish communication with the Frankfurt, although Phillips felt certain that the vessel was much nearer than the Carpathia, with which communication had been established.

This, Bride said, Phillips judged by reason of the greater power of the Hertzian waves.

Senator Smith expressed astonishment at the statement. He repeatedly pressed the witness to answer why the aid of a vessel many miles nearer a sinking ship was not invoked. Bride evaded a direct answer by saying he did not know, that probably the Frankfurt operator could not understand and that Phillips, his superior, had used his own judgment.

WIRELESS LAXITY.

Another phase of the laxity of the wireless, so far as man is concerned, was developed by the chairman. He drew from the witness an acknowledgement that on Sunday evening Bride was sitting with the telephonic apparatus strapped to his ear, adjusting his accounts, while the steamship Californian, seeking to warn the Titanic that icebergs were invading the lanes of ocean travel, called incessantly. Bride said he heard the call, but did not answer because he was "busy." It was not until a half hour later that the Californian, striving to reach the steamship Baltic, reached the Titanic, whereupon the warning that three huge icebergs had been sighted, was noted by Bride and verbally communicated to the liner's captain.

Senator Smith established by Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless system bearing his name, that both the Titanic and the Frankfurt operated virtually the same type of instruments.

In the opinion of the inventor, there existed no reason why communication between the two vessels should not have been perfect, provided weather conditions were favorable. The night, it previously had been established, was clear and there

ISMAY SAYS COMMITTEE IS SHOWING INJUSTICE.

[A. P. Night Wire to The Times.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—J. Bruce Ismay discussed today with interviewers the work of the Senate investigating committee, which he characterizes as "brutally unfair." He said:

"I cannot understand this Senatorial inquiry. They are going at it in a manner that seems unjust, and the injustice lies heaviest upon me. Why, I cannot even protect myself by having my counsel ask questions. Don't misunderstand me by thinking I mean questions calculated to twist witnesses up; on the contrary, questions tending to simplify involved meanings."

Discussing his departure from the Titanic, Mr. Ismay said:

"I have searched my mind with deepest care. I have thought long over each single incident that I could recall. I am sure that I did nothing I should not have done. My conscience is clear and I have not been a lenient judge of my acts.

"I tell you that if I thought that in the slightest way I had done anything wrong I would never have another happy moment. I took the chance of escape when it came to me—I did not seek it. Every woman and child had been cared for before I left the boat.

"And moreover, all the men within reach had been taken care of before I took my turn. And why shouldn't I take my turn? There are only two classes on a ship—the crew and the passengers. I was a passenger. It is true I am president of the company, but I didn't consider myself anything different from the rest of the passengers. I took no other man's place."

FIGHT CENTERS ON BAY STATE.

Taft Leaders Determined to Take Massachusetts.

President Said to Be Preparing Stump Speeches.

Expected to Make Stirring Roosevelt Disclosures.

BY SUMNER CURTIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Results at the primaries in Nebraska and Oregon yesterday, as indicated by the returns at hand tonight, impress the Taft leaders more than ever with the necessity of making a terrific fight in Massachusetts. Only such Taft supporters as are inclined to rainbow chasing had counted on victories in Nebraska and Oregon, although it was realized by the rest that some accidental turn in the President's favor in those States would counteract the Illinois and Pennsylvania losses to a considerable extent.

An unbroken succession of preferential and ordinary primary victories, after the pleasicite in North Dakota and Wisconsin, where La Follette captured the delegates, has inspired the Roosevelt folk with tremendous enthusiasm and they are boasting of a clean sweep in other States that are of vital consequence. It is to check this that the Taft forces are concentrating efforts on Massachusetts.

Reports from the Bay State are to the effect that both sides are making fights of unparalleled vigor. All the Massachusetts Republican members of Congress in the lower house have gone to the scene of action, and are lined up behind the Taft banner. Yet it is admitted the situation is so complicated that guesses on the outcome are vain at this time.

President Taft cancelled all his engagements at the White House today. It was announced that he was keeping to his private library in order to devote the day to consideration of Mexican affairs, the Magdalena report, and the rejuvenation of the peace treaties, in consultation with Secretary Knox. Secretary Knox, however, spent only about two hours with the executive, and it is surmised that much of the President's time was given to preparation of speeches he will deliver on the stump next week.

"Some bombs will be placed under Roosevelt," is the whispered word coming from certain friends of the President, who speak with reference to his speeches in Massachussetts next Thursday.

Whatever the President may say when he goes into the fight, it certainly will be a great disappointment to all the close friends and political managers if he does not assume a line of attack that will involve some veritable sensation. Certain of these friends are declaring that the President knows Roosevelt's record and that he has evidence of perfidy and misrepresentatin in his possession that will "blow Roosevelt skyhigh" if he only makes it public.

The evidence which President Taft's friends are urging him to make public, it is understood, consists of correspondence relating to the Lorimer case, to Cannonism, to Canadian reciprocity and to other matters that have been dragged into the pre-convention campaign.

LA FOLLETTE ARRIVES.

Heavy and Worn from Oregon Campaign, He Starts Right in on the California Fight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator La Follette and Mrs. La Follette arrived in San Francisco this morning from Portland, unaware of the result of the primary election there yesterday, but hopeful that the official canvass would disclose a La Follette victory. They went immediately to the Palace Hotel, where Walter L. Houser, La Follette campaign manager, had made reservations.

The Senator came into the city worn and worn by the trip and the arduous campaign in Oregon. He and Houser received a number of the California campaign managers and for more than two hours remained in conference with them.

None of those at the conference would say what had been discussed, further than to admit that the itinerary of the Presidential candidate had been talked over informally. No active work will be taken up by La Follette until Monday. The intervening time will be given to organization work.

OREGON RETURNS.

FOUR-FIFTHS COUNTED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) April 20.—Nearly four-fifths of the primary vote of the State of Oregon on President and United States Senator has been counted and reported. These returns indicate that Roosevelt carried Oregon by about 7000 votes, and has obtained a plurality over La Follette of about 5000. Ben Selling has carried Oregon over Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., by at least 8000, according to indications.

On the Democratic ticket it seems certain that Wilson has received the preference of the Oregon voters for President, and that Harry Lane of Portland will be the Democratic candidate for Senator Returns on the Democratic ticket are meager, however, and no estimate can be made of the total vote cast, so that estimates of pluralities are impossible.

ROOSEVELT GETS OREGON.

Carries Two-thirds of Counties—La Follette Second—Woodrow Wilson Leads Clark.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) April 20.—Under the Presidential preference primaries Theodore Roosevelt is the choice of the Republican voters of Oregon. He has carried two-thirds of the counties of the State.

Senator Robert La Follette carried Multnomah county, where one-fourth of the votes and population of the State is located. President Taft carried but ten of the thirty-four counties, running poor third in Multnomah.

Under the Oregon system, the ten delegates sent to the Republican National convention in Chicago are instructed to vote for Roosevelt. Thomas McCusker, La Follette's campaign manager in Oregon, leads the ticket among the candidates for delegates.

It was in the "cow counties" that Roosevelt made his strongest run, with La Follette second. Through the thickly populated Willamette Valley district Roosevelt also led.

In Portland, where the labor vote is strong, La Follette was the choice. Wherever La Follette spoke during his five days in the State, he made a remarkable showing.

For the Democratic indorsement, Woodrow Wilson and Champ Clark are running closely, with Wilson in the lead. The Harmon vote is practically nil in a majority of the counties.

In the Republican Congressional race W. C. Hawley, now representing the First District, has been renominated. He had no opposition. N. J. Sinnott, progressive, has been nominated in the Second District over W. R. Ellis, his closest opponent. Ellis has served several terms in Congress.

The result in the Third District is still in doubt, with the contest between A. W. Lafferty (incumbent) and C. U. Gantenbein. This district comprises Multnomah county.

Benjamin Selling had established a first lead over Jonathan Bourne (incumbent) for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, and the race between Dr. Harry Lane, O. P. Coshow and Walter M. Pierce for the Democratic nomination apparently was any man's fight at noon today.

In Multnomah county Bourne was far ahead of Selling, but in the outside counties Selling made the best showing, on the whole, to date. The returns from the towns favor Selling, as a rule, but the remote precincts in the mountains, the ranges and the mining sections are not reporting. It is in the remote places that Bourne heretofore has held his strength.

NEBRASKA'S RETURNS SLOW.

Roosevelt Leads Among Republican Candidates and Clark Among Democrats on Light Vote.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) April 20.—With a little more than one-seventh of the vote outside of Douglas county, and two-thirds of the returns for the county, which includes Omaha, reported Roosevelt and Clark continue to lead in the Presidential preference race.

The returns at 1 o'clock today showed the following results:

Republicans—Roosevelt, 19,350; Taft, 4374; La Follette, 3900.

Democrats—Clark, 4019; Harmon, 3715; Wilson, 2081.

Indications are that Harmon will carry the city of Omaha by possible 1000.

Early reports gave former Governor Shallenberger a lead over his three opponents for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. The two Republican aspirants for the Senatorial nomination, Norris Brown and George W. Norris, insurgent leader of the last House, seemed to be running neck and neck.

Meager returns received on the gubernatorial nominations indicate that Chester H. Aldrich, the incumbent, is leading Jesse S. Newton for the Republican nomination. Richard L. Metcalfe and John H. Morehead, rival Democratic candidates, showed about equal strength.

Indications are that William J. Bryan and Senator Hitchcock have been named as two of the Democratic delegates-at-large to the national convention.

It is estimated that only about one-half the registered vote was polled.

It was the first Presidential preference primary ever held in Nebraska and the clerks and judges of elections found the totaling of the ballots, ranging from two to eight feet in length, a trying task.

Candidates for Congressmen were nominated as follows:

First—John A. Maguire, Democrat, renominated.

Third—Joseph C. Cooke, Republican; Dan V. Stephens, Democrat, renominated.

Fourth—Charles H. Sloan, Republican, renominated; Charles M. Skiles, Democrat.

Fifth—Roderick D. Sutherland, Democrat.

Sixth—Moses P. Kincaid, Republican, renominated.

Only one of the present Nebraska Congressmen, George W. Norris of the fifth district, an insurgent leader of the last House, was not a candidate for renomination. He opposed Norris Brown for the Senatorial nomination.

Advertising in "The Times" Continues to Exceed That of Any Newspaper in the World.

The subjoined exhibit containing authentic figures for March of the newspapers making the best advertising record in the cities named shows that The Times led every paper in America by a wide margin.

The preference of merchants, business men and the general public for The Times as an advertising medium is not whimsical or capricious, but is purely a business matter and due to the fact that this paper gets its advertisers better results and quicker returns than any other paper published on the Pacific Coast.

The Times is not only an appreciated and progressive journal, but it is delivered to more homes in Los Angeles and suburbs than any other local paper, and it is the paper that reaches the buyers.

LAST MESSAGE OF GUGGENHEIM.

BANKER GOES TO DEATH IN EVENING CLOTHES.

Tells Steward at Parting He Meant to Meet His Fate Like a Gentleman—Hydro Aeroplanes May Be Engaged to Search the Sea for His Body.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—"If anything should happen to me, tell my wife in New York that I've done my best in doing my duty."

That was the last message of Benjamin Guggenheim, of the famous banking family, dictated to a steward only a short time before the banker sank to his death with the Titanic.

It was not until today that the message was received by Mrs. Guggenheim. It was delivered by James Etches, assistant steward in the first cabin of the Titanic, to whom Mr. Guggenheim communicated it. Etches appeared at the St. Regis Hotel and inquired for Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim. He said he had a message from Benjamin Guggenheim and it had to be delivered in person.

Mrs. Guggenheim was in the care of Daniel Guggenheim, whose apartments are in the St. Regis. The steward was admitted, but was not permitted to see Mrs. Guggenheim, who is prostrated with grief. He insisted that he must see her personally, but finally consented to transmit the message through her brother-in-law.

"We were together almost to the end," said the steward, "I was saved. He went down with the ship. But that is not what I want to tell Mrs. Guggenheim."

Then the steward produced a piece of paper. He had written the message on it, he said, to be certain that it would be correct. The message was as given.

"That's all he said," added the steward. "There was not time for more."

Little by little Mr. Guggenheim got the story of his brother's death from the steward. It was the first definite news he had received of his brother.

Mr. Guggenheim was one of my charges," said the steward anew. "He had his secretary with him. His name was Giglio, I believe, an Armenian, about 24 years old. Both died like soldiers.

"When the crash came I awakened them and told them to get ready. A few minutes later I went to their rooms and helped them to get ready. I put a life preserver on Mr. Guggenheim. He said it hurt him in the back. There was plenty of time and I took it off, adjusted it and then put it on him again. It was all right this time.

"They wanted to go on deck with only a few clothes on, but I pulled a heavy sweater over Mr. Guggenheim's disbelt and they both went out. They stayed together and I could see what they were doing. They were going from one lifeboat to another, helping the women and children. Mr. Guggenheim would shout out 'Women first,' and he was of great assistance to the officers.

"Things were not so bad at first, but when I saw Mr. Guggenheim in half an hour after the crash there was great excitement. What surprised me was that both Mr. Guggenheim and his secretary were dressed in their evening clothes. They had deliberately taken off their sweaters and as nearly as I can remember, they wore no lifebelts at all.

"'What's that for?' I asked.

"'We've dressed up in our best,' replied Mr. Guggenheim, 'and are prepared to go down like gentlemen.' It was then he told me about the message to his wife and that is what I have come here for.

"Well, shortly after the last few boats were lowered and I was ordered by the deck officer to man an oar. I waved good-by to Mr. Guggenheim and that was the last I saw of him and his secretary."

Efforts to find the body of Benjamin Guggenheim, who was the fifth of the seven Guggenheim brothers, as well as the bodies of other victims, will be made by the six surviving brothers.

Aside from scouring the seas with small steamers, it was considered probable tonight that hydro-aeroplanes would be rushed to the scene of the disaster. An aviator named F. C. Dittmar, who has attained some fame on the Pacific Coast, telegraphed to Robert Guggenheim yesterday from San Diego, suggesting the sending of four aviators and as many hydro-aeroplanes there on steamers.

He would have the aeroplanes equipped with calcium phosphate signals and make them scout for 100 miles in all directions from the death-bed of the Titanic, with a view of locating floating bodies. Mr. Guggenheim is understood to be considering this proposal.

ASTOR SELECTED HEROES.

Names of New York Policemen Being Engraved on Tablets Were Picked Out by Colonel.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—A squad of men are at work today in the marble hall of New York's new police headquarters, engraving on tablets of bronze the names of the last year's police heroes—officers who died in the performance of their duty during 1911. One of the last public acts of Col. John Jacob Astor was to select and approve the heroes. He was a member of the official committee of citizens delegated to perform this duty.

At the last meeting of the committee, Col. Astor stopped in the hall to survey the tablets. He stood there for several minutes, in his hand the list of the year's heroes and their acts of heroism.

"They were brave men," he said to an official of the police department who stood at his elbow. "They leave a handsome lesson for all of us."

Titanic Was Unit in Greatest Armada on Seas.

Owning Company Planned by Morgan and Others.

Capitalized at Hundred and Twenty Million Dollars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The "Titan of the seas," named Titanic by reason of its immensity, which sank beneath the waves of the Atlantic Ocean following its collision with a huge iceberg was one of a mighty fleet of vessels, sailing under the colors of various companies, but all owned by the International Mercantile Marine Company. This is shown, together with much historical data and figures, in manuals of statistics published in this country and in England.

Official figures showed that the armada of the big marine company comprises 126 steamships in service, one training ship and three tenders, with tugs, barges and other floating equipment, representing a gross tonnage of 1,653,238 tons. The company was incorporated June 6, 1893, in New Jersey, as the International Navigation Company, which owned and operated at that time the American and the Red Star lines, and the name was changed in 1902, when there was an increased capitalization of the company, in pursuance of a plan to unite the ownership of a number of the principal companies carrying on a trans-Atlantic steamship service. The plan was financed by a syndicate of American and British capitalists headed by J. Pierpont Morgan.

WHITE STAR A SUBSIDIARY.

Properties acquired included the entire capital stocks of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company or White Star line, under the colors of which, less than a week ago, the Titanic sailed to her doom; the Atlantic Transport Company, Limited, and the Atlantic Transport Company (of West Virginia;) the International Navigation Company, Limited (Dominion Anonyme de Navigation Belge-Americaine (American and Red Star lines;) the Mississippi and Dominion Steamship Company, Limited, and the British and North Atlantic Steam Navigation Company, Limited (Dominion line,) and a controlling interest in Frederick Leyland & Co., Limited (Leyland line,) together with the shipping business of Ismay, Imrie & Co., and Richards, Mills & Co. Control of the National Steamship Company, Limited, is held by the Atlantic Transport Company, Limited.

The figures of the company with reference to its stock, as set forth in the Manual of Statistics for 1911, show that common stock to the sum of $49,931,735 has been issued, and preferred stock to the value of $51,730,975; while $60,000,000 was the sum authorized for each. The par value is $100 per share.

The preferred stock is six per cent. cumulative. It is provided that dividends upon the common stock of the company shall be limited to ten per cent a year, as long as any of the collateral trust debenture four and one-half per cent bonds remain outstanding. These were created in 1902, and issued in 1902 and 1905, in connection with the plan for the formation of the company.

All but a small amount of the stocks are held in a voting trust, which was renewed in 1907, until October 1, 1912, unless it is terminated sooner by the trustees who are J. Pierpon Morgan Jr., Charles Steele, J. Bruce Ismay, Peter A. B. Widener and Lord Pirrie. Ismay, who survived the Titanic disaster, is now being "investigated," by a Senatorial committee. Mr. Widener's son, George D. Widener, perished in the shipwreck.

THEME FOR MANY SERMONS.

Hundreds of Churches Throughout Country Will Devote Services Today to Titanic Loss.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Titanic disaster will be the theme of sermons in hundreds of churches throughout the United States tomorrow. In New York the principal memorial services will be held in the magnificent new cathedral of St. John, the Divine. Bishop Greer, head of the Episcopal diocse of New York, will officiate.

In Old Trinity Church, a similar memorial service will be held. Trinity is to be the scene on Tuesday next of an official memorial service under the auspices of the British Consul-General and the St. George's Society.

The musical programmes in most of the New York churches tomorrow will reflect the feeling of sorrow and grief over the greatest marine disaster of history. The hymns, "Nearer, My God, To Thee" and "Guide Me, O, Thou Great Jehovah," played by the Titanic's band just before the boat sank, will have prominent places. Requiem music and such numbers as Gounod's "Messe Solennelle," Chopin's Funeral March and Handel's "Dead March" will be heard in many churches.

How thoroughly the day's sermons will be devoted to the Titanic may be judged from scanning subjects announced by the pastors of the ten biggest New York churches today.

They are as follows: "The Great Catastrophe;" "Lessons from the Disaster;" "The Cry of Peril;" "Heroism of Private Life;" "Reflections on the Loss of the Titanic;" "Lost;" "God's Voice in the Disaster;" "Sympathy;" "The Modern Mind in the Presence of a Great Calamity," and "The Sorrow of the Sea."

HARROWING HONEYMOON.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN AND BRIDE ESCAPE DEATH.

Asleep When the Titanic Struck, Snyder and His Young Wife Managed to Get on Deck in Time to Enter the First Lifeboat Lowered. Watch Boat Go Down.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mr. and Mrs. John Pillsbury Snyder of Minneapolis, who are journeying homeward in company with Mrs. Walter D. Douglas, are on the last lap of a most terrifying honeymoon trip.

Mr. Snyder says he was ordered into one of the lifeboats when no women were about. He is a nephew of the late Gov. Pillsbury, millionaire founder of the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company. Mrs. Snyder is a daughter of T. W. Stevenson, millionaire hat maker of Minneapolis. She is in an extremely nervous state because of her experiences.

"Mrs. Snyder and myself were both asleep at the time we struck the iceberg," Mr. Snyder said. "Mrs. Snyder awakened me. I did not think anything was wrong, but yielded to my wife's plea that I investigate. We went on deck. The excitement already was great.

"'Put on your lifebelts,' was the first order I heard. There was no panic at that time. A short time later the order was given, 'Get into the lifeboats as fast as you can.' When the crowd in front turned aside, my wife and I were left in front. We were both assisted into a boat.

"We all felt that entering the lifeboats was merely a matter of extra precaution. Twenty-six passengers were in our boat, with three of the crew to row. Even at that the boat was so crowded that the men handled the oars with difficulty. Our boat was the first to be lowered on the starboard side. In the boat were sixteen men and ten women.

"The sailors pulled away leisurely. There was no weeping or wailing in our boat. We first knew the Titanic was sinking when the bottom row of port-hole lights went out. We had no lights and were in danger of collision with other boats.

"Just before the Titanic went down there were terrific explosions. A short time later the dark hulk disappeared and the sky line was unobstructed.

"I will never forget the hours of suffering. I thank God for our deliverance and can not utter words of sympathy too deep for those who now lie on the bottom of the sea."

TITANIC AFIRE UNTIL SHE SANK.

Survivor of the Crew Says They Made No Headway Against the Flames, but He Is Quite Sure, Sir, the Ice Water Quenched Them. Passengers Not Told of Fire.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The White Star liner Titanic was on fire from the day she sailed from Southampton. Her officers and crew knew it for they had fought the fire for days.

This story, told for the first time today by survivors of the crew before they were sent back to England on board the Red Star liner Lapland, was only one of the many thrilling tales of the first—and last—voyage of the Titanic.

"The Titanic sailed from Southampton on Wednesday, April 10, at noon," said J. Dilley, fireman on the Titanic, who lives at No. 21 Milton road, Newington, London, North, and who sailed with 150 other members of the Titanic crew today on the Lapland. "I was assigned to the Titanic from the Oceanic where I had served as a fireman. From the day we sailed the Titanic was on fire and my sole duty, together with eleven other men, had been to fight that fire. We had made no headway against it.

"Of course, sir," he went on, "the passengers knew nothing of the fire. Do you think, sir, we'd have let them know about it? No, sir. The fire started on bunker No. 6. There were hundreds of tons of coal stored there. The coal on top of the bunker was wet as all of the coal should have been, but down at the bottom of the bunker the coal was dry. The coal at the bottom of the bunker took fire, sir, and smouldered for days.

"The wet coal on top kept the flames from breaking through, but down in the bottom of the bunker, the fire was raging. Two men from each watch of stokers were told off to fight that fire. The stokers, you know, sir, work four hours at a time, so twelve of us were fighting the flames from the day we put out of Southampton until we hit the damned berg. No, sir, we didn't get that fire out. And among the stokers there was talk, sir, that we'd have to empty the coal bunkers after we'd put our passengers off in New York and then call on the fire boats to help us put out the fire. But we didn't need such help. It was right under bunker No. 6 that the iceberg tore the biggest hole in the Titanic and the flood that came through the Titanic put out the fire that our tons and tons of water hadn't been able to quench. The stokers were beginning to get alarmed over it, but the officers told us to keep our mouths shut as they did not want to alarm the passengers."

ington, several days ago, Gen. Pascual Orozco has directed a reply transmitted to the President.

In the telegram Orozco endeavors to make clear his attitude toward the Americans and to foreigners in general, both as regards their lives and interests, which he guarantees on behalf of himself and his subordinates.

He mentions that all public service instruments, the postoffice department, railroads and telegraph lines, are being operated faithfully; that the troops allied with the Liberal cause are organized and disciplined and subject to the laws and customs of war; that in the territory occupied by them reigns perfect order and morality and with respect for life and property, as can be certified to by the various consuls; pointing out, also, that no anarchy or abnormal conditions exist and that every city and town in the rebel territory is presided over by capable political officials, civil and judicial judges, who expedite justice.

The note by Orozco is more or less submissive and at the same time Gen. Orozco makes the request that recognition be given his cause.

CHARTERS A SHIP TO RELIEVE AMERICANS

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Responding to an appeal for help from thirty Americans whose lives are declared to be in imminent danger at Navolato, Sinaloa, Nelson Rhoades, Jr., and several other Americans have chartered a boat in Guaymas and are hurrying south to Altata, the nearest port at which the Americans may be reached.

Rhoades, who owns the large sugar refineries in Navolato, returned to Mexico to ascertain conditions, after learning women and children had been taken on a special train to Mazatlan. Upon arrival in Guaymas he received a startling message from one of his chief employees stating that the lives of all Americans there were in grave danger, that the Mexican guards were without arms, and that the rebels are heavily armed. The message stated that the Americans have few arms, probably enough to protect them in withstanding a foe for a reasonable time, or until help arrives. The sender of the message considered the further importation of arms for the Americans dangerous and said it is impossible to depend on the established government for protection, while no effort is being made to establish, or maintain, a stable government in that vicinity.

The Americans in Navolato, in case of sudden necessity, will try to escape to an island off Altata and there await the arrival of the rescue ship, which is speeding toward that port. Rhoades, in wiring the Americans in Navolato that he had engaged a ship well provisioned for the relief of the Americans and other foreigners in that section who desired to escape from the country, closed with an impulsive "God bless you."

Word is flashed from Culiacan that Pilar Quintero and Vega, leaders of rebel bands estimated at from 1000 to 1500 men, are looting Culiacan of money, clothing and provisions and that already the people in that city are facing famine. With the food supplies short, a wholesale invasion of outlying plantations, many of them owned by Americans and other foreigners, is feared.

The Americans in that city and Federal forces that are in the vicinity are declared to be either poorly armed or without arms.

While messages conveying this information were being sent out, wire communication with Teplo ended abruptly and it is believed bandit bands, which have been harassing that section for weeks, are continuing their work of pillage and looting.

From Culiacan it is reported that nothing has been heard from the Federal force which was driven from the capital city, retreating to Alta, a small port some fifty kilometers distant.

DEMANDS RELEASE OF AMERICAN CITIZENS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Demands have been made on the rebel authority in Chihuahua by United States Consul Letcher for the immediate release of two United States citizens imprisoned there. HUERTA WILL SEND A PART OF ARMY NORTH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JIMINEZ (Mex.) April 20.—That Gen. Huerta has not abandoned his plan of sending at least a portion of the Federal army north is indicated by the presence of 1500 troops seven miles south of Conejos, who are acting as escort to a track repair crew. The rebel front remains at Escalon.

STATE OF SINALOA IN HANDS OF REBELS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) April 20.—According to advices a week old, but just received here, the entire State of Sinaloa, like that of Chihuahua, is now in belligerent hands.

The fear of the Americans at Navolato that there would be fighting there was justified, for on the ninth, 500 rebels attacked the town and drove out the garrison of thirty-five Federals, fourteen of whom were captured. The rebels were holding an orgy of drinking and looting when a Federal column from Culiacan arrived. There was hot fighting, and the rebels fled. It is reported that thirty-eight of them, including two women, were killed.

Shortly after this fight, President Madero recalled all his troops from the State to the City of Mexico, and the entire district was left without a government, as every policeman and office-holder resigned. Almost the last act of the garrison was to release the prisoners from the jail.

Jones, with another San Francisco, George Burt, who was driving, and two women, whose names have not yet been learned, was headed for San Jose at 5 o'clock this morning after a night spent at the various road houses when the machine, at the curve near Mountain View, plunged through a fence, overturned and threw Jones to his death.

Burt was badly hurt and is at the Palo Alto Hospital, where the two women also are being treated for serious injuries.

Thus far they have refused to give their names. It is said that Jones' wife is not one of them.

According to all accounts the party left a road-house called "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for a run to San Jose and were speeding along when, without warning the machine swerved and plunged through the fence.

The accident occurred near the Junction house, the screams of the women being heard there. Help immediately was rushed to the scene.

Dr. A. H. MacFarlane of Mountain View, arrived in a short time, but found that Jones was beyond aid. He had evidently been almost instantly killed.

Jones lived in Berkeley. He was a native son and popular in business circles.

SAYS CAPTAIN TRIED TO SAVE SMALL BOY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—Telling refugee on the bridge of the ill-fated Titanic, two little children remained by the side of Capt. Smith until that portion of the big ship was finally swept by water. Survivors of the crew who went down with the Titanic, but were saved by clinging to an overturned lifeboat, told today of their gallant commander's efforts to save the life of one of the children. He died a sailor's death and the little girl who had entrusted her life to his care died with him.

"He held the little girl under one arm," said James McCann, a steward, "as he jumped into the sea after we had endeavored to reach the nearest lifeboat. I took the other child into my arms as I was swept from the bridge deck. When I was plunged into the cold water I was compelled to release my hold on the child, and I am afraid that the same thing happened to Capt. Smith.

"I had gone to the bridge deck to assist in lowering a collapsible boat. The water was then coming over the bridge and we were unable to launch it properly. It was overturned and was used as a life raft, some thirty or more of us, mostly firemen, getting to it. —Capt. Smith looked as if he was trying to keep back the men as he thought of the doomed ship.

"He turned to the men fighting to get aboard and shouted, 'Well, boys, it's every man for himself.' He then saw one of the children standing by him on the bridge and jumped into the sea. He endeavored to reach the overturned boat, but did not succeed. That was the last I saw of Capt. Smith."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Death still sits at the wheel with joy riders. Early this morning it claimed as one of the victims of the spring William L. Finn, well known in the commission district and a member of the firm of Finn & Pettigrew, No. 130 California street.

Finn, with another San Francisco man, George Burt, who was driving, and two women, whose names have not been learned, was headed for San Jose at 5 o'clock this morning, after a night spent at the various road-houses, when the machine, at the corner near Mountain View, plunged through a fence, overturned and threw Finn to his death.

Burt was badly hurt and is at the San Jose Hospital, where the two women also are being treated for serious injuries.

So far they have refused to give their names. It is said that Jones's wife is not one of them.

According to all accounts the party had a road-house called "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for a run to San Jose and were speeding along when, without cause, the machine swerved and plunged through the fence.

The accident occurred near the Santa Clara house, the screams of the victims being heard there. Help immediately was rushed to the scene.

Dr. A. H. MacFarlane of Mountain View arrived in a short time, but found that Jones was beyond aid. He died evidently almost instantly.

Finn lived in Berkeley. He was a native son and popular in business circles.

SPEAKERS AT A PICNIC.

Members of the Arizona Legislature Enjoy a Half Holiday in Phoenix with Missouri Society.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 20.—Fifty citizens of Williams appeared before the Senate Committee on County Affairs today and urged that Coconino county be divided in half, one part to be named Hunt county, after the Governor, and of which Williams would be the county seat.

Senator Levin of Mohave county introduced two bills, one providing that persons speeding or advising, directly or indirectly, the violation of any law would be guilty of a misdemeanor, and the other providing against flag desecration, and prohibiting its use for advertising purposes.

The house adjourned early this afternoon and most of the members joined the picnic of the Missouri Society of Arizona.

TWO KILLED BY MOTOR.

CAR HITS AUTOMOBILE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICO (Cal.) April 20.—Two persons were instantly killed at Hockheimer crossing, about a mile north of town, last night by the collision of the Chico motor, due here at 7:30, and an automobile driven by Walter Dimmick of Fall River Mills, Shasta county. The dead are William Dimmick and Miss Inez Floring. Mrs. Dimmick who was in the car, was so badly injured that her life is in danger. Dimmick had recently purchased a stage line in Shasta county and had been in San Francisco with his brothers for automobiles as he proposed to inaugurate auto service over the new line. Dimmick's father lives in Santa Rosa and the party had visited there on their trip.

MILLIONAIRE BEGINS TERM.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) April 20.—James Dayton Hillman, the multi-millionaire real estate dealer, was released today from the City Jail, where he spent last night, to the Federal prison on McNeill's Island to serve a sentence of two and one-half years' imprisonment for using the mails to defraud. Hillman asked that he be taken from Seattle to Tacoma in an automobile, but the deputies declined to do this and the trip was made on an interurban train. Hillman had shaved off his heavy beard, trimmed his hair was dressed. Although he was at liberty yesterday under $215,000 bail, Hillman was closely shadowed during the last few days by special agents of the Department of Justice.

Inventor De Forrest and His Wife Terminate Fight.

Action Against Suffragist Is Withdrawn by Husband.

Follows Recent Call on Mrs. De Forrest and Baby.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Lee de Forrest, the wireless inventor, residing in this city, and his estranged wife, Nora Blatch de Forrest, New York suffragette, both of whom have indulged in acerbic recriminations in a spectacular long-distance divorce suit, are to be reconciled. De Forrest is now under $5000 bonds to appear in this State at a specified time to stand trial on a charge of using the mails to defraud. The doctor is now in Palo Alto.

It is said he is planning a trip East soon. The harassed inventor, whom his mother-in-law called a "troubler in Israel," today filed an order in the local Superior Court directing the dismissal of his suit for divorce from the well-known suffragist, and also asked for a dismissal of the suit for the custody of the infant daughter, Harriet de Forrest, the child, who De Forrest said was taught to lisp "Votes for Women" before she could say "Da da."

To make assurance doubly sure the typewritten request for a dismissal is inscribed across the face with the words, "And the same is hereby dismissed" written in ink.

The case has many angles and has been of peculiar interest on account of the prominence of both parties. Mrs. De Forrest is the inventor's second wife. He alleged that she deserted him after the birth of their child two and a half years ago. He said that he realized that he had been tolerated up to that time only because he was a "biological factor," and blamed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, the famous New York suffrage leader, for alienating his wife's affections.

Mrs. De Forrest replied with a denial of all allegations and charged her husband with non-support.

De Forrest, as inventor of the radio telegraph and a director of the De Forrest Wireless Telegraph Company, went East on business connected with the government investigation of the company. He called upon the child of which he was the biological factor, met and conversed with his wife.

FORTY-NINER IS DEAD.

Man Who Operated with Hearst and Haggin and Was Interested in Comstock Passes Away.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George Grayson, one of the most widely known of the California pioneers who crossed the plains in '49 and again in '51, died this morning at 4 o'clock at a local hotel. Heart failure was the cause of death.

Grayson had been ill only a few days and his recovery was looked for by his physicians. He was in fifteen days of being 83 years old. Two daughters, Mrs. G. Hinckley and Mrs. W. C. Ralston, survive Mr. Grayson.

Grayson was interested with Haggin and Senator Hearst in the early days and was a large operator in the Comstock mines. He left a large cattle ranch in Nevada, to which he had been giving most of his attention in later years. The funeral will take place Monday morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be in Mountain View Cemetery, Oakland. The Society of California Pioneers will attend the funeral.

SAN FRANCISCO RENDERS TRIBUTE TO MR. TAFT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] San Francisco paid a great tribute tonight to the man who assisted most in the efforts for this city the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Five thousand persons besieged for entrance to the Festival Pavilion, where the dinner under the auspices of the Republicans of California was the largest since so great a political event has been manifested, and the demonstration was converted to justify the claim that President Taft will be given a majority within the confines of this city and county on election day.

Many gratifying features marked the presence of hundreds, who cheered and applauded the remarks of former Gov. Gillett and Samuel M. Shortridge, principal speakers of the evening.

The toast of Gov. Gillett included a caustic charge or indictment that has been made by supporters of Roosevelt and La Follette, that enemies of Taft to the Republican ticket, in one instance wherein the Republican organization had shown discrimination in favor of trusts or monopolies. He asserted that the rule of the people had been supreme throughout every month of every year since the Taft administration assumed the reins of government. He enumerated the instances in which the President had directly attacked great moneyed interests and demonstrated by comparison that the efforts of Roosevelt in this direction had come to little or nothing.

He charged the defeat of Taft in Pennsylvania to the interference of the steel trust, which he designated as the sponsor for Roosevelt.

"California," he said, "will display the blackest ingratitude if its people do not distinguish above all other candidates the man who manifested more than a political interest in this city on two occasions—one during the trying ordeal by fire, and the other at a time when only the intervention of the executive department could have obtained for California the Panama-Pacific Exposition, already proven a magnificent stimulant to the State and all its interests."

Mr. Shortridge declaimed against the tactics of the Roosevelt supporters, charging that they had presented no real issues to the people and asking the voters to decide between Taft and Roosevelt upon comparison of actual performance.

GERMANY STIRS ITSELF.

Government Discusses and Is Ready to Act in Regard to International Shipping Rules.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, April 20.—The motion introduced in the Reichstag yesterday requesting the Imperial Chancellor to order an investigation as to whether German steamships are equipped with sufficient lifesaving apparatus for all the passengers and crew, was considered today and withdrawn.

Clemens Duebrueck, Vice-Chancellor of the empire, said the government was in communication with the shipping companies and would see that everything necessary and possible should be done.

The question as to whether international regulation of the passenger ship traffic is advisable has been discussed by the German government and Germany is ready to act on any proposal with this end in view.

The Hamburg-American line decided to increase the number of lifeboats on its steamers, although they already carry more than are required by the German law. It also will improve all its life-saving apparatus.

POSTAL CLERKS HEROES.

Three Americans and Two Englishmen on Titanic Protect Mail Until Vessel Goes Down.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Five postal clerks abandoned on the ill-fated Titanic died like heroes. Three of them were Americans and two were Englishmen. They were Oscar S. Woody of Washington, D. C.; John S. Marsh, Newark, N. J.; W. L. Gwynn, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Jago Smith and Ed Williamson of England.

According to official advices today to Postmaster-General Hitchcock, these men, after the Titanic had crashed into the iceberg, disregarded their personal safety and began to convey the 200 sacks of registered mail, containing 400,000 pieces, to the upper deck, where it might be saved.

As the situation became more desperate, they appealed to the vessel's stewards to assist them in carrying the valuable mail to the upper deck. They continued in this work until the disaster.

OLD WHITE STAR MAN SAYS BOATS ARE TOO BIG.

A Citizen of Santa Barbara Who Might Have Been in Capt. Smith's Place on the Titanic if He Had Remained in the Service Tells Why the Commanders Always Desire to Go Down With Their Fine Ships.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt E. Pryce Mitchell of this city, who was fourth officer on the old White Star liner Arabic, and who would now, had he remained in the service, have been entitled by seniority to command either the Olympic or Titanic, said today:

"The papers mentioned three factors that may have contributed to this disaster, viz.: careless navigation, taking the northern route and an insufficiency of boats, life rafts and life preservers.

"The first, careless navigation, may be safely eliminated, as no sane man in charge of a liner off the banks and in the fog zone, with ice around, is careless, but in that course of the Atlantic passenger trade, hurry and speed are alway present. We get our written orders before leaving port to put "safety" before anything else, but we also know that we are expected to arrive on time, in order to keep up the prestige of the company. We know that a delay caused by heavy weather and high seas is beyond our control, and therefore excusable, but a delay caused by feeling our way at a reduced speed through a dense fog on the banks, or through a zone where ice is known to exist, brings a reprimand and if persisted in a quiet dismissal.

HOW IT FEELS.

"No one except those who have experienced it can know what it feels like to have the responsibility of many persons and vast wealth hanging on his judgment and experience. I have spent twenty-seven hours on a bridge in a dense fog and during that time might have had an accident through an error of judgment, but never through carelessness.

"For many years there has been a consensus of opinion amongst navigators that the northern route on the North Atlantic should be abandoned during the foggy season, when icebergs are usually drifting south. We use this route to shorten the distance, knowing full well the danger we run for the sake of shortening the passage half a day or so. No captain, if left to his own judgment, would risk his passengers and vessel by taking this route at this season, but his berth depends on obeying orders, and thereby making a quick passage.

"The remedy is obvious—an agreement among all the companies to abandon the short and dangerous route during certain months and take a more southerly route, even if it means a few more hours and a little greater expense in coal.

"Twenty-odd years ago the Arizona, at that time the ocean greyhound, full of passengers ran head-on into an iceberg on the banks, crumpled up her bow and crawled into port without loss of life. Had she met the Titanic's fate, the northern route would have been abandoned during the dangerous season from that time.

"Every steamship officer since then has always felt that it was but a matter of time until a similar accident would occur, but with a less happy ending.

LACK OF BOATS.

"The criticism on the lack of boats and rafts is one that calls for very serious consideration. Both governments are calling for investigations and many remedial bills are already being proposed on both sides of the water, but, so far, I have seen none that go to the root of the matter. Any of the officers who has had to get a lot of panic-stricken passengers safely into boats from a sinking ship, as I have done, will tell you that there should be a limit to the size of ships and consequently the crews and passengers.

"Suppose the Titanic had had her full complement of eighty boats. Each boat would have required four sailors (not stewards or stokers,) which would mean 320 sailors, alone. Then the rest of the passengers and crew, numbering nearly 2000, have got to get into these boats which are dancing around in a choppy sea, fifty or sixty feet below. Some go down a few swaying gangway ladders, some slide down ropes and some are lowered down in bowlines. The sinking ship is rolling heavily from side to side and four sailors in each boat have their hands full trying to keep the boat alongside without swamping it, helping in the wet and panic-stricken passengers, who as soon as they are landed in the boat have to be roughly handled to keep from upsetting the boat. In the meanwhile the officers, engineers, stokers and stewards are on deck trying to keep some semblance of order among a demoralized mob of 1500 to 2000 people who all want to get into the first boats.

Sense, decency, manliness, are usually all thrown to the winds and we see the real primitive man stripped to his soul and fighting for his life. Nothing checks him then but a revolver or an iron pin, and these are used more often than we hear of in order to stay the panic long enough to save the women and children.

"To sum up, it is impossible to carry sufficient sailors to man the many boats required in these modern leviathans, and few of the rest of the crew have the sailor's knack of handling boats in rough water and therefore cannot be depended on to man the boats efficiently. Then the bigger the ship the higher she rides out of the water and every foot of height adds to the danger and difficulty of getting the passengers safely into the boats, but the most serious part of all the business is the enormous number of people to be saved from one of the huge ships.

"In one of the old ships, carrying, say, 1200 people all told, we could get them all safely into boats and life-rafts in one-half of the time, in a moderately rough sea, as she was only moderately high out of the water, but to get the same number out of a modern ship, riding fifty or sixty feet above water, would take a great deal longer and every moment adds to the fear of those on deck and those in the boats for the suction of a sinking vessel of 60,000 tons displacement must cover an enormous radius.

WRECK OF THE POTOSI.

"The wreck of the Potosi, belonging to my old company, is a good example of what can be done in a moderately sized ship. She was coming through the Straits of Magellan from the East and had a collision at midnight with a German steamer, which cut her portside amidship several feet below the water. They were within two miles of the shore at the time, so they ran in and beached her. Temporary repairs were made and she proceeded on her way through Smythe's Channel to Valparaiso. All her boats were swung out and were ready for lowering, as the patch was tender and the channel dangerous and uncharted. A few hours after entering the channel she tore out her bottom on a pinnacle rock and went down in eight minutes, but not before all her crew and passengers, over 350, were safe in the boats. Of course, the boats were swinging out ready for lowering and the sea was smooth, but it shows what can be done in a moderate sized ship with a moderate crowd of people in a very short space of time.

"Many people wonder why the captain generally refuses to be saved, preferring to go down with his ship. The reason is that the tragedy is too great for a man to ever live down and even when exonerated by his fellow-men he always carries with him, particularly at night, all the horrors of the scene, until life is no longer worth living."

MAKE A RUSH FOR BOATS ON THE TITANIC.

But the Revolvers of the Officers Have a More Terrifying Effect on Them Than the Yawning of the Sea, and They Step Aside and Allow the Women to Pass.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George and Mary Niket, third cabin passengers on the Titanic, who were rescued from a lifeboat by the Carpathia, reached Chicago today on their way to North Dakota. They are the first survivors of the disaster to arrive here.

A story, every word of which holds tragedy and suffering, was told by George Niket, who is nineteen years old. His sister, Mary, is eighteen.

They are on the way to the bedside of their mother, who is dying in Bismark, N. D. The White Star Line yielded to their plea to be sent on, and they were given first class passage.

Niket and his sister showed marks of the terrible strain of the past few days. Both were pale and emaciated.

Niket said:

"As they were releasing the lifeboats, a large number of men passengers, evidently Sicilians, rushed for them. The officers and crew drove them back, threatening with their revolvers to kill them.

"Then the quartermaster stepped forward with a revolver in his hand and said:

"'We are going to lower these boats. The woman will go first, then the men. Let everyone keep quiet and cool.'

"The men did not rush for the boats then. They made room for the women. I pushed my sister ahead and saw her get into a boat. I kissed her good-by just as the boat swung clear from the dock.

"After the women were carried off the officer turned to the men and said:

"'All you who have wives in the boats get in this last boat.' I walked up and said I had a sister and he said I could go if I could row. I told him I could. He then sent me down to the last boat with women in it.

"I found my sister when I reached the Carpathia."

Niket has been in this country a number of years. He returned to Europe to get his sister and bring her to her mother.

Lists Growing.

FLOOD RAVAGES PERSIST IN MISSISSIPPI DELTA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GREENVILLE (Miss.) April 20.—Fifteen persons are known to have been drowned last night near Benoit in the flood that came from the levee break between Benoit and Beulah, Miss. The loss of life in the delta, it is believed, will reach 200.

Estimates of the death list have been based on comparison with previous floods. The water now is higher than it ever has been before in this territory.

However, confusion existing among the refugees makes any estimate of the known dead vague. Women have hysterically declared they saw their loved ones swept away, then the persons turned up later.

The chief concern is the problem of providing for the living. Thousands of families are destitute. Supplies are wholly inadequate, partly due to interruption of railroad traffic. Clothing, bedding and food are lacking. Relief parties are handicapped and in many instances are reported to have suffered severely that refugees might have the scanty comforts at hand.

Rations are being distributed by the United States army, but they are unable to reach hundreds.

HUNDREDS REPORTED LOST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JACKSON (Miss.) April 20.—Reports reached here today that 200 persons have been drowned in Bolivar county, Mississippi, by the flood that swept through that section when the river dykes broke near Beulah. Bolivar county is covered with water and efforts to verify the reports are meeting with many obstacles. The reports declare many white persons were swept away by the deluge.

Gov. Brewer was advised there are 6000 refugees in camp in Cleveland and that the food supply will last less than twenty-four hours.

POPULATION IN DISTRESS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) April 20.—Reports today from inundated sections of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisana continue to tell of the imperative need of food, clothing, medicine and other supplies.

Tallulah, La., twenty miles from the Dog Tail crevasse at Alsatia, is from four to fifteen feet under water. Twenty towns are affected by the crevasse at Beulah.

Five thousand refugees are reported near Natchez and Vicksburg, Miss., where United States officials are distributing supplies. There has been much loss of life. A thousand or more negroes and whites are reported marooned in gin houses, barns, housetops and trees. About 100 white persons are hemmed in at a sawmill camp near Napanee, Miss. Three thousand negro refugees are in box cars in Benoit and Beulah with meager supplies.

PEOPLE ARE MAROONED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROSEDALE (Miss.) April 20. Rescue work continued today with an increased force of workers, boats going further inland and bringing out many residents, who were marooned by the break in the Mississippi River levee at Beulah. The crevasse now is more than 2000 feet wide, with the ends still caving.

Many refugees from the interior have been taken to the levees and from there will be transferred by boat. The water rapidly is approaching this place.

PITH OF THE DAY'S NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

CHICAGO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago basked in an ideal spring day with plenty of sunshine and a southeast wind blowing fifteen miles an hour that had enough "nip" in it to make overcoats comfortable. Rain is predicted for tomorrow. The maximum temperature was 57 and the minimum 46. Middle west temperatures:

EXPRESS COMPANY WINS POINT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI, (Ohio.) April 20.—Judge Hollister in the United States District Court here today granted a motion to set aside service made by the government on an agent of the Adams Express Company, which was indicated by a special grand jury on the charge of violating the interstate commerce laws by overcharging.

TRAIN IS WRECKED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS April 20.—The engine and three baggage cars of train No. 17, southbound on the St. Louis Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad, overturned near Mill Spring, 138 miles south of here, early this morning. Larry Lacey, engineer, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., was slightly injured. A wrecking crew was sent from De Soto, at which point officials of the road said that no other injuries had been reported. Wet weather caused the rails to spread.

A CHILD'S WASTE CLOGGED BOWELS

MAKES IT CROSS, PEEVISH, RESTLESS AND FEVERISH.

If Tongue is Coated Give "Syrup of Figs" to Thoroughly Cleanse Its Little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Children dearly love to take delicious "Syrup of Figs" and nothing else cleans and regulates their tender little stomachs, liver and 30 feet of bowels so promptly and thoroughly.

Children get bilious and constipated just like grown-ups. Then they get sick, the tongue is coated, stomach sour, breath bad; they don't eat or rest well; they become feverish, cross, irritable and don't want to play. Listen mothers—for your child's sake don't force the little one to swallow nauseating castor oil, violent calomel or harsh irritants like Cathartic pills. A teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs will have your child smiling and happy again in just a few hours. Syrup of Figs will gently clean, sweeten and regulate the stomach, make the liver active and move on and out of the bowels all the constipated matter, the sour bile, the foul, clogged-up waste and poisons, without causing cramps or griping.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging or injuring your children. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful. Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna" prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

The Eye and Its Disease

PROF. WILSON'S TREATISE ON EYE DISEASES SHOULD BE READ BY EVERY PERSON WITH IMPAIRED EYESIGHT.. THE BOOK IS FREE.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Every reader afflicted with any impairment of eyesight should not fail to send for this book. It contains sixty-four pages and cover and describes in language so plain and interesting the various forms of diseases of the eye and sure and safe methods of treatment that any reader of ordinary intelligence may fully comprehend every word.

The author of this book is the inventor of "Actina," an instrument that is attracting the attention of people in all parts of the world owing to the wonderful results obtained from its use.

In the treatment of Eye disease the author says: "Nine out of ten persons wearing glasses might better be without them. Eyeglasses do not cure. The defects that make them necessary can be removed in most cases by proper treatment. There is also no need for cutting or drugging the eye for most forms of disease—for the cause can be removed by a newer and more humane method."

The book also goes into full details of the causes and effects of disease in general. It advocates a method in the treatment of disease that is based upon humane and common-sense principles. It contains the recommendations of hundreds of intelligent persons in every walk of life who have been cured. A free trial of the "Actina" is offered in every case.

If the reader is interested, write for a copy of this book. It is absolutely free; a postal will bring it. Address Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89E, 911 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

"They had no idea of leaping overboard with lifebelts. They felt that only music could sooth the despair of the hundreds who were about to be separated forever from all they held dear.

SUDDEN DEATH IN ALLEY.

Man Believed to Be from Washington Drops Dead—Police Seek Identification.

Apparently stricken by heart disease while walking in an alley in the rear of No. 836 East Fifth street, yesterday, the body of a well-dressed stranger was picked up by the police and later was removed to Pierce Bros.' morgue to await identification.

Although a large number of persons viewed the body, the man remained unrecognized until last night when a Pullman employee asserted that the dead man had been known as George Constans of Washington, D. C. The identification was partly corroborated by the finding of a sleeping-car check in one of the pockets, together with a valuable gold watch and $17 in money.

The police will make an effort to communicate with the family of Constans in order to verify the identification.

FRENCH LAW MORE RIGID.

Steamships Required to Carry Lifeboats According to Tonnage Except Where Bulkheaded.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, April 20.—The navigation department of the French government declares that the present French laws regarding life-saving apparatuses are so much more rigorous than those of other nations that some of the French shipping companies have made complaint.

The government inspectors rigidly enforce a strict observation of the regulations and the law of 1903 forces steamers to carry lifeboats and rafts in proportion to their tonnage and the number of passengers. In the cases of steamers fitted with watertight compartments, however, the law is less strict.

"MUSIC SOOTHES DESPAIR."

TRIBUTE TO TITANIC BAND.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—Musical organizations throughout the United States will hold meetings during the next few days to pay their tribute to the bravery of the members of the Titanic's band, who went to their death playing "Nearer, My God, To Thee." On behalf of the New York Symphony Orchestra, Frank Damrosch made public today the following statement:

"In the terrible Titanic disaster in which so many deeds of heroism were enacted it may seem invidious to single out one group of men from among many, but to musicians it must ever be a high gratification that the band of the Titanic stuck to its post on the deck of the fast sinking ship, playing cheering music. Those brave bandmen must have helped not a little in allaying panic, in preserving

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

Could Hardly Eat. Gradually Grew Worse. Relieved by Peruna.

Mr. A. M. Ikerd.

Mr. A. M. Ikerd, Box 31, West Burlington, Iowa, writes:

"I had catarrh of the stomach and small intestines for a number of years. I went to a number of doctors and got no relief, and finally one of my doctors sent me to Chicago, and I met the same fate. They said they could do nothing for me; said I had the cancer of the stomach and there was no cure. I almost thought the same, for my breath was offensive and I could not eat anything without great misery, and I gradually grew worse.

"Finally I concluded to try Peruna, and I found relief and a cure for that dreadful disease, catarrh. I took five bottles of Peruna and two of Manalin, and I now feel like a new man. There is nothing better than Peruna, and I keep a bottle of it in my house all the time."

AMAZED BY REVELATIONS

...no fog, or other atmospheric disturbances.

Under insistent questioning, Bride began to show signs of collapse. Finally Smith ended the wireless conversation and questioned him about the final scenes aboard the Titanic. Bride and his superior, Phillips, were among the last to leave and were witnesses of the closing scenes on the boat deck, the topmost parade deck of the lost ship. Bride's story was fragmentary and ran about as follows:

"We did not feel the shock when the ship struck. In fact, I was asleep at the time and was not even awakened by the impact. When the engine stopped, Mr. Phillips called me and I put on the telephone apparatus while he went out to see what was the trouble. A little later he came back. He said things looked 'queer.' By 'queer' I supposed it should be.

"Then it was learned that everything was not just as it should be. At this time, however, neither of us worried about it. When he heard the confusion on deck, I went out to investigate and when I returned I found Mr. Phillips sending out a 'C.Q.D.' call giving our position. He added the Frankfurt first and then the Carpathia, and the Baltic. As I have said, we did not try for the Frankfurt for any length of time, but concentrated our messages on the Carpathia, which had answered that she was rushing to our aid.

"The captain came into the wireless cabin from the deck when the Carpathia advised us of her position and I figured out the time when that vessel probably would arrive. He left when that was disposed of and proceeded to the bridge. Then we began to work officially to keep in communication with the Carpathia.

WENT ON DECK.

"From time to time either Mr. Phillips or I would go on deck to observe the situation. The last time I went on deck I found the passengers running around in confusion and there was almost a panic. They were getting lifebelts. All of the large lifebelts were gone, but there was one life-raft remaining. It had been lashed on the top of the quarters on the boat deck. The

Now is the time to sell your high-priced ranches, and secure better ones for one-third the money in the fertile SAN JACINTO VALLEY. This rare opportunity is open now. It will not be a few months hence. These lands cannot be duplicated for anything like the price in the whole State. They are strictly high class in every particular. Some have fine brick houses, land all under a high state of cultivation, and right at the edge of town.

If you want to double your money in less time than it takes to tell it, now is the time to do it. The very best of terms are available at this particular time. Large holdings have been secured from Eastern owners who are unaware of the recent development; especially the great new water discovery.

A Committee with autos has been appointed to show everybody around free, and we extend a hearty invitation to all of our good neighbors to see this beautiful little Valley of ours in all its glory. Come over on the Santa Fe in the morning, back in the evening. San Jacinto Board of Trade, San Jacinto, Cal.

EGAN GIVES BIG BENEFIT.

AUDITORIUM IS THRONGED AT SHAKESPEAREAN FETE.

Pageant in Honor of Birthday of Avonside Dramatist — Excellent Work by Young Players Shows Much Los Angeles Talent on the Way to Real Arrival.

The Shakespearean celebration given at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon by the Egan School, in honor of the three hundred and forty-eighth anniversary of the birth of the "immortal bard," while of itself a pageant of tabloid Shakespearean drama, took on a double significance because of the eleventh-hour announcement that the proceeds of the entertainment would be turned over to the fund for the relief of the needy survivors of the wrecked liner Titanic.

The sum raised approximated several hundred dollars.

Seldom has the vast Auditorium housed a more splendid audience than that which applauded the efforts of these future Booths and Bernhardts, nor is the comparison hyperbole, as those who were present will attest, for seldom, indeed, does one find such rare talent among amateurs as Mr. Egan and his assistants presented yesterday for public approval.

A great many of the young thespians showed wonderful promise, and not a few seem really to have "arrived." There is Miss Baird, for example, whose Rosalind in the forest scene from "As You Like It" is fraught with that element of coquetry that made Julia Arthur so lovable in the role, and Miss Leser's anguished plea that her eyes may not be burned out, as Prince Arthur, in "King John," was as finished and vivid a piece of work as one could desire.

Miss Eddy's prologue, and the procession of Shakespearean characters that followed, gave a hint as to what was to come, and the first tabloid dramas were the church scene from "Much Ado About Nothing" in which Miss Hasemeir as Beatrice and Mr. Backus as Benedict acquitted themselves with honor, the two scenes already mentioned, and a bit from "The Merchant of Venice" with Miss Mace as Portia and Miss Huskins as Nerissa.

Miss Jacobs's dance and solo and a three-act minuet, both loudly applauded, completed the first section of the programme.

The quarrel scene from "Julius Caesar," with Mr. Pallette as Brutus and Mr. Calhoun as Cassius, was well given, and Miss Charles and Mr. Neff gave the familiar balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet." A solo by Mr. Alexander brought down the house.

A passage from "Twelfth Night," with Miss Springer as Viola, and Miss Courtell, as Oliva, and a dance by Misses Foss and Cornwall, which took immensely, and a splendid number, was the trial scene from "Henry VIII," in which Miss Caldwell played Katherine, Mr. Pallette, Wolsey, and Mr. Depuy, the King.

Miss Jones and Miss Neits contributed a dance that proved a graceful delight.

One of the best performances of the afternoon was Miss Chenowith's presentation of Ophelia, and the mad scene from "Hamlet," assisted by Miss Caldwell, as the Queen; while the wooing scene from "As You Like It," as handled by Mr. Wood as Touchstone, Mr. Longstreteh as William, and Miss Cornwall as Audrey, was a genuine scream. The dream scene from "Richard III," by Messrs Calhoun and Pallette, was also well acted.

Miss Foss scored an individual triumph in the sleep walking passage from "Macbeth," and the arbor scene from "Much Ado About Nothing," with Miss Jones as Hero; Mrs. Rose as Ursula and Mrs. Loranger as Margaret, was most effective.

Miss Rosin as Portia gave "The Quality of Mercy" speech from "The Merchant of Venice," and the proposal from "The Taming of the Shrew" was well handled by Miss Surridge as Katherine, Mr. Alexander as Petruchio and Miss Neits as Grumio. Mrs. F. W. Wallace contributed the "Romeo and Juliet" waltz, and Mr. Mercer sang "Blow, Blow, Thou Wintry Wind." Both were excellent.

Perhaps the most enjoyable and picturesque offering of the afternoon was "Mid summer Night's Dream." It was prettily staged and the cast was altogether admirable. This included Mr. Wood as Pyramus, Mr. Backus as Thisbee, Mr. Pallette, as Wall, Mr. Radoovich as Moonshine, Mrs. Longstreth as the Lion and Mr. Keller in the prologue.

Paving the way for the finale, was the potion scene from "Romeo and Juliet," in which Miss Courtell earned unstinted praise, and the closing number was a series of dances in which the ensemble of the school participated.

Congraulations are surely due both pupils and instructors, for the splendid showing made yesterday, and the size of the fund realized for the Titanic sufferers cannot help but be a source of gratification to, both entertainers and the public at large.

—To you women folks —why "Everwear"

We want you to give it just one trial. Get a pair for the men folks---yourself ---or for the children.

It has several surprising features that go beyond your expectations.

—You expect it to wear because it is guaranteed.

But there's more to Everwear than that.

—it's shimmery shapliness lasts through repeated trips to rough laundry gruellings.

—because the weaving is the experienced and conscientiously inspected crafting of seasoned, loyal, well-paid, working people.

—the material is of the selected, well combed, best yarns which woven, result in a firm elastic fabric—soft, and smooth as a baby's locks. A beauty of texture that no amount of wear can take away —that doesn't dull, or "fuzz" or lose "life" after a "tub-date."

Everwear hugs your ankles delightfully natty and smooth. It's true to size marking—and as fast at "Old Baldy" in its rich colorings—presenting a selection of colors complete, and smacking of this spring's Californian pastel shades.

The Titanic Probe Strikes Deep Into Facts.

Participants in Greatest Tragedy of Modern Times.

UNITED STATES HAS WHIP HAND.

England Approves of Inquiry Into Titanic Sacrifice.

We Should Lead in Minimizing Ocean Dangers.

European Press Voices Demand for Reformation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Impartial observers on this side of the Atlantic believe if really effective steps are taken for an international agreement to minimize the dangers of ocean travel, the United States must lead resolutely and promptly, for the Washington government has the whip hand. Consequently, the announcement of the proposed Congressional action arising out of the loss of the Titanic and the awful sacrifice of life meets with universal approval.

The London, Paris and Berlin press voices the general sentiment that the whole question of route, equipment and safeguards ought to be threshed out by an international commission, "so as to bring the science of ocean navigation up from standards that long ago became archaic to the requirements of the age of lightness in safety and luxury of living."

Representative Alexander's alleged suggestion that he had heard of some disposition to suppress the facts as to the Titanic equipment caused a painful impression here.

From all parts of the kindom come passionate cries of protest against what is called the "inconceivable lethargy of the Board of Trade in the past on a subject of supreme importance to a nation now furnishing more than half the sailor men on all the seas."

If the prevailing British view of the principal human factor in the tragedy of the Titanic can be inferred from the preponderance of opinion thus far published, the thing to be censured most is not the speed at which she was driven or the meagerness of her life-boat outfit, but the choice of the northern course in April for a vessel on her maiden trip.

Advocates of a complete abandonment of the northern course by international agreement are numerous and they state their argument elaborately.

They point out that even if wireless communication be perfect and bulkheads strengthened a hundredfold and life-boats be more than plentiful the vessel has really "only the gambler's chance as distinguished from the scientific probability on which insurance is based."

Declaring that neither speed nor size overcome danger but rather the course followed, another authority invites "our American friends to apportion the blame fairly between those who launch these racing palaces and those who demand imperiously that Atlantic liners be both palatial and swift and then sit in the smoking-rooms and bet on the runs." He asks Americans to remember the "influence they themselves have had in increasing the elegance, magnitude and speed of land transportation throughout the world, and also its insecurity," and to look at the present "cognate marine issue" in a "calm way."

him to keep out. There was no further effort to get the Frankfurt's position."

Time and again Senator Smith asked in varying forms why the Titanic did not explain in detail its condition to the Frankfurt.

"Any operator receiving 'C.Q.D.' and the position of the ship, if he is on the job, would tell the captain at once," said Bride.

"Was your object in dismissing the somewhat tardy inquiry of the Frankfurt due to your desire to hang on to a certainty, the Carpathia?" inquired Senator Smith.

"Yes."

"But under the circumstances could you not, with propriety, send a detailed message to the Frankfurt?" Senator Smith insisted.

"I didn't think we could under the circumstances."

"Would you still make the same reply if you were told that the Frankfurt was twenty miles nearer to you than the Carpathia?"

Bride replied that the Carpathia was then on its way with the life-boats ready.

Mr. Marconi again testified to the distress signals and said the Frankfurt was equipped with Marconi wireless. He said the receipt of the signal 'C.Q.D." by the Frankfurt's operator should have been all that was necessary to send the Frankfurt to the immediate rescue.

"Why did you not send the messages to the Frankfurt as well as to the Carpathia?" asked Senator Smith.

"He would not have understood."

The witness said that before leaving the cabin three minutes before the ship went down, Phillips sent out a final "C.Q.D.." There was no response. Bride said the spark was then so weak that it probably did not carry.

The witness said he did not see J. Bruce Ismay and that the last he saw of Capt. Smith was when he jumped from the bridge as the ship went down.

ISMAY'S PLEA.

Although Ismay urged the committee to permit him to go for the present, pleading that he was on the verge of a nervous collapse, by reason of his experience, his request was not granted.

Immediately behind Bride came J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine, and P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the organization. Mr. Ismay announced before the inquiry began that he had given instructions to all the lines of the International Mercantile Marine, which include the White Star, the American, the Red Star, the Leyland, the Atlantic Transport, and the Dominion lines, to equip all steamers with sufficient lifeboats and raft boats for every passenger and every man of the crew, without regard to government regulations.

The story of the American survivors of the Titanic will be told in the Washington hearings of the committee. Subpoenas are being sent out and several were served in the hotel where the committee was holding its hearing.

"I want to get every bit of the testimony," explained Mr. Smith. "It might be very disastrous should the British government be given one story by the ship's men and the United States government given another by American survivors."

In line with Senator Smith's determination to let none who had a story to tell depart without testifying, about twenty seamen were kept under guard by committee detectives.

There was rejoicing on board the Red Star liner Lapland which sailed this afternoon, when it was learned that Senator Smith, who at adjournment yesterday had announced his intention of holding every member of the Titanic's crew until the inquiry was ended, had changed his policy after a conference at midnight. Mr. Smith decided it would be unfair to a majority of those whose anxiety to return to their families and friends should suffer.

"ARCHITECT SINKS BOAT."

Retired Naval Officer Says Watertight Compartments Are Not Enough for Real Safety.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPHAM (Me.) April 20.—Commander Marston Niles, U.S.N. (retired,) discusses the modern steamship architecture in a statement prepared in his home here after a study of the reports of the Titanic disaster. He says in part:

"It is the architect that sinks a vessel. For a passenger steamer to have watertight compartments and mechanism to close them is far from enough for safety. All compartments should be closed always, and they should be so placed that the deeper she sinks the more surely does she float.

"This can be done by mezzanine decks from two to four feet in height, underlying every deck above the water line and running from bow to stern, wherever machinery, etc., permits. Each of these mezzanines should be much subdivided. Each subdivision should be taken up with water-excluding vessels of yielding substance which no distortion of the hull could ever make leaky. The height of these mezzanine decks should increase as one goes up.

"After the next great tragedy, probably on the North or the East River in New York, the public will be wondering why that lofty space in the ferry-boat's cabin was not put to some use."

ASSURED UNTIL THE LAST TITANIC COULDN'T SINK.

BY JESSIE LEITCH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] About midnight Mr. Harper, the Rev. Dr. John Harper, came to my stateroom and told me that the vessel had struck an iceberg. While I was dressing he went to learn further particulars and returned to say that orders had been given to put on the lifebelts. I did so. Picking up Nana, his daughter, in his arms, he took her up to the deck, where the women were ordered to the upper decks. I had to climb a ladder from below, and Mr. Harper helped me up the ladder and the men at the top lifted me on to the deck again.

There was no opportunity for farewell and, in fact, even then we did not realize the danger, as we were ordered again and again that the vessel could not sink, that the Olympic would be alongside at any minute and that the women and children were to be put into the boats first and the men to follow and that there were boats sufficient for all. Our boat was well manned and it was the eleventh to leave the vessel.

After about half an hour the Titanic went down. We were about a mile away, but even then I hoped and expected that Mr. Harper was in one of the other boats, many of which reached the Carpathia before ours did. How eagerly I looked for his face on the deck as we approached that vessel, but when all the boat-loads had come aboard I feared the worst.

The last day we spent on the Titanic was Sunday. Mr. Harper asked me to read the chapter at our morning family prayers and later we went to the Sunday morning services. The day was quietly and pleasantly spent and when Nana and I went to look for Mr. Harper at about 4 o'clock to go to dinner, I found him earnestly talking to a young Englishman whom he was seeking to lead to Christ. That evening before we retired we went on deck, and there was still a glint of red in the west.

I remember Mr. Harper saying "It will be beautiful in the morning."

We then went down to the staterooms. He read from the Bible and prayed and so he left us.

SAYS PASSENGERS KNEW THEY WERE AMONG BERGS.

BY MRS. WALTER D. DOUGLAS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Even the passengers knew that we were getting among the icebergs early on Sunday—hours before the crash came we felt the temperature drop and realized the cause.

That this fact was well-known to Bruce Ismay was evidenced from his own actions and statements. I heard Senator Smith of the Senate Investigating Committee of an incident which proved this.

Sunday evening I was walking the deck with Mrs. Ryerson when she told me that Mr. Ismay had exhibited extreme nervousness that told of the possibility of the dangerous ice-

"What does the message say?" Mrs. Ryerson asked.

"That we are among the icebergs," was his reply.

"Of course you are going to slow down?" Mrs. Ryerson asked him.

"Certainly not, we are going to put on more steam and run away from them," said Mr. Ismay.

One of the seamen lowered a bucket into the ocean, but drew it back before it had touched the water. Then he drew the water from the ship's tanks to take temperature.

I called the attention of my husband to this fact, but he belittled it and told me it would not be necessary to tell the ship's officers of the incident.

Vainly.

URGED THE CAPTAIN IN; HE REFUSED TO BE SAVED.

BY MRS. JOHN MURRAY BROWN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

UTICA (Miss.) April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The discipline was magnificent. The band played marches from deck, and as the ship engulfed I could hear the cries plainly. The last I saw of the band the musicians were up to their necks in water.

I and my two sisters were separated, each got in different boats. The captain stood on the bridge and the water covered the ship he would not leave and told to get in one of the lifeboats, but he refused to do so.

Mrs. Astor was in the lifeboat with my sister, Mrs. Cornell. I saw Col. Astor help her into the boat. He said he would wait for the men. I saw him on the ship after our boat left the vessel.

Two boats were got off after the one I was in, but they were swamped by the suction made as the Titanic went to the bottom. Our boat was almost dragged down by the suction.

We had a rough experience, many of the women having to use the oars. Mrs. Appleton's hands were badly torn, but I understand there was not a single case of illness among the survivors because of exposure.

Picture a situation such as this! Another woman and myself were waiting to be helped into the lifeboat. The woman held my arm. I do not know her name. There was just one seat left in the boat. The woman said to the men: "This woman has children; let her go first. I'll take the next boat." I believe she was put in the next boat. That boat was swamped.

MEN STAND BACK TO SAVE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

BY MAY FUTRELLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jacques Futrelle, my husband, was in the stateroom when the crash came. The force of the smash was terrific and I was going to bed. I was thrown from my feet by the impact. I hardly found myself when I found women rushing into the stateroom.

"The boat is going down, get on deck," he shouted. When I reached the deck everything was in confusion. The screams of women, the drill orders of officers, the numerous intermittent vibrations of the deep bass fog horn. The coolness of the men was magnificent.

I went back without murmuring and helped the women and children into the lifeboats. A few cowards tried to scramble into the boats, but they were quickly thrown back by the others. Let me say now that the only men who were saved were those who sneaked into the lifeboats or were picked up after the Titanic sank.

I did not want to leave "Jack" but he assured me that there were boats enough for all and that he would be rescued later.

"Hurry up, May, you're keeping the others waiting," were his last words, as he lifted me into a lifeboat and kissed me good-by.

I was in one of the last lifeboats to leave the ship. We had not put out many minutes when the Titanic disappeared. I almost thought, as I saw her sink beneath the water, that I could see Jack standing where I had left him and waving at me.

EXPERIENCED NO EMOTION WHEN THE TITANIC SANK.

BY MRS. ADA CLARK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The shock was so great that it did not disturb me and my husband told me to go back to sleep again. Then the stewardess rushed excitedly "everybody on the boat was so benumbed from cold that we could not realize what a terrible thing had happened. Then somebody said: "It's gone," and we sat there without showing any emotion.

There was no disturbance in filling the lifeboats. My husband put me in one with good-by and commended me to God. After I got into the boat I tried to steal in, but found the boat was only partly filled and they stepped right out into the darkness. The cold seemed to numb my brain and everybody in

MRS. ASTOR TO QUIT LONDON.

Colonel's Divorced Wife Wants to Be With Her Son Vincent.

[A. P. NIGHT NEWS REPORT.]

LONDON, April 20.—Mrs. Ava Willing-Astor, mother of Vincent Astor, has decided to proceed to New York to be with her son. She will sail at the earliest possible moment. The various relief funds for the assistance of sufferers by the Titanic disaster now amount to upwards of $400,000. The fund at the Mansion House alone at noon amounted to $300,000. Among the subscriptions to this latter fund are $10,000 from W. W. Astor and $5000 from Lord Strathcona.

BRAVERY OF MEN.

ing the steerage passengers from stampeding the small boats, which they repeatedly tried to do. There were no outcries anywhere except from the steerage, and I shall never forget the calmness and quiet bravery that the men on board showed as they stood on deck and waited the inevitable doom. Occasionally some of them would peer into the night toward our boats and wave at us. Then they would go back to a group, and everything would grow still again.

I saw Guggenheim, Widener, Thayer and Ismay in conversation with Col. Astor just after the ship struck the berg and Ismay agreed with the others to remain on the vessel until the women and children were safe. But he sneaked away from Col. Astor and the rest and forced his way to a boat that was being lowered into the water, jumping into it before the men on guard could stop him. That is how he succeeded in saving his life.

There were many others who might have been saved if the boats had been properly filled. Several of the boats were not half full. Two of the boats were rotten and fell apart with their burdens of humanity, throwing their occupants into the sea.

Ice and floating bodies were all around us. All the long weary night the bodies of those we had known in life drifted around our little craft until many of the women put their hands over their faces to shut out the terrible sight. Before the ship split in two and settled, we could plainly see a huge mass of ice and snow on the top of the vessel which had been broken off by the impact and later fell on the sinking vessel with a terrific crash.

It is true that Mrs. Straus had a chance to be saved, but she refused to leave her husband. As our boat moved away from the ship we could plainly see Mr. and Mrs. Straus standing near the rail with their arms around each other.

The lights of the Titanic were all burning and the band was playing. To me the most affecting episode of the whole disaster was that final glimpse of this elderly couple awaiting the end together.

It is also true that the band played until they passed beneath the water, the last notes dying out on the still crisp morning as the sea closed over them. They kept up the one tune, "Nearer My God to Thee." We wanted to join them in the singing, but we were too much overcome with the sadness of it all.

The boat we were in was filled with women and children and a stoker who told us he was an expert oarsman and we took him on. Several of the women asked to be allowed to row to keep warm.

There is one thing I want to say about the way the Titanic was speeding. We had been cautioned that the icebergs were drifting in the waters and some one asked the captain if he meant to slow down. He said no; that if anything, the boat would be given more speed.

A bulletin was posted just a short while before the accident, saying that the boat was then making the fastest time of the whole trip, and that if we kept up the speed we would land in New York ahead of record time.

We saw very little of Ismay after we were picked up by the Carpathia, but I do not think he gave any orders for the crew on the Carpathia would not have paid very much attention to him. Every survivor is full of appreciation and praise of the captain and crew on the Carpathia. Everything possible was done to make us comfortable.

The Carpathia is not a very large boat, and it was already heavily loaded when we went aboard, and we were all provided with berths and food by those on board. There were fourteen deaths on the Carpathia, most of whom were women and children, who had suffered from exposure while waiting for the Carpathia's arrival.

It was truly terrible, but as we pulled away from the scene of our great bereavement, the survivors lifted their hearts in gratitude for the heroism, the bravery, the courage, the nobility that had been manifested by our lost loved ones in laying down their lives as calmly as if they were going to a game instead of their graves.

Col. Astor was the hero of the wreck and there were many just as brave. There was but one coward of the hundreds who pledged their lives in defense of the women and children on the Titanic, and we saw very little of him after he was hauled aboard the Carpathia.

FIRST WOMAN RESCUED REJOICES HUSBAND IS SAFE.

BY MRS. DICKINSON BISHOP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] I was the first woman in the first boat. I was in the boat four hours before being picked up by the Carpathia.

I was in bed at the time the crash came, got up and dressed and went back to bed, being assured there was no danger.

There were very few passengers on the deck when I reached there. There was little panic and the discipline of the Titanic's crew was perfect.

Thank God, my husband was saved also.

BOAT LOAD OF WOMEN CALLED BACK FOR A MAN.

BY MRS. EDGAR J. MEYER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was a clear and starlit night. When the ship struck we were in our cabin. My husband went out on the deck to see what was the trouble. He came down and said we had hit an iceburg, but that it did not amount to much. I said I was nervous. We went on deck for a walk. More people said the accident was of no importance. It would only delay our arrival.

I was afraid and made my husband promise if there was trouble he would not make me leave him. We walked around the deck a while. An officer came up and cried:

"All women into the lifeboats!"

My husband and I discussed it and the officer said:

"You must obey orders."

We went down into the cabin and we decided on account of our baby to part. He helped me put on warm things. I got into a boat, but there were no sailors aboard. We called to the ship that there were no men in the boat. They sent a sailor down.

An English girl and I rowed for four hours and a half. Then we were picked up at 6 o'clock in the morning. We were well away from the steamer when it went down, but we heard the screams of the people left on the boat.

FOUR TIGERS BOUNCED OUT.

Patterson, Stinson, Hogan, Burrell Thrown Off.

Swain Drives Another Home Run Over Left Fence.

Fine Fielding Game Marked by Much Kicking.

BY GREY OLIVER.

Hap Hogan fired off the field twice for talking and Patterson, Stinson and Burrell put out of the game for kicking at decisions.

Home run by Slugger Swain, over the left-field fence.

Two freak doubles made base hits by the wind.

Heroless baseball by both teams. These were the features of the great little struggle yesterday between the Tigers and the Senators, which the visitors finally won by hard knocks at Harry Stewart. After an avalanche of four swats in the third inning that netted four runs they opened up the eighth with a double and two singles and Hogan threw him out of the game, the Whale being sent in to relieve him.

Arellanes pitched fair ball but he was banged hard and often, but stuck it out to the finish.

The day was a cold and windy one, and the biting breeze must have gotten on the nerves of the players, for the struggle was full of kicks. When three players and the manager are thrown off the field there must be something wrong somewhere, but you'll have to guess for yourself who was in bad.

With Bayless at the bat in the fifth inning Hap Hogan, on the third base coaching line, was thrown off by Finney for kidding Arellanes. In the seventh Patterson kicked on a decision calling Shinn safe at second on a stolen base, and was bounced out of the grounds. In the first of the eighth Stinson scooped or caught a short fly to right field and when he went to the plate to tell Finney that he had caught the ball, Finney threw him into the discard.

In the last of the eighth Hap Hogan sneaked out to the first-base line to rag Wheeler about that decision on Stinson's catch and both Wheeler and Finney chased Hogan again out of the grounds. With one out in the last of the ninth Burrell opened up on Wheeler from the Vernon bench and Wheeler had the game stopped long enough to can Burrell.

It was kick from start to finish and in between these were the loud resounding swats of two-baggers to the fences and Swain's homer over the left fence.

The wind blew half a gale all afternoon. Sheehan, in the third, hit a high fly back of first base and the wind whirled it so that Patterson not only under-ran it, but fell in doubling back to grab it. In the fourth Litschi hit up the same kind of a fly on the third base side of the pitcher's box and Sheehan almost broke his back twisting around for it.

Stewart did not go for the first two innings, but in the third the visitors began to crown him. Madden was passed and was out at second, stealing. Shinn singled and stole, Heister and Swain doubled, Miller walked and then Sheehan doubled back of first. Four runs resulted.

In the fifth Swain homered over the left fence. Lewis began the eighth with a double and Sheehan and Cheek followed with singles, Lewis scoring. Then Stewart was taken out. Whalen, who took his place, got the first man out but Madden cracked that Stinson catch to right and Sheehan scored. That was all.

For Vernon, with two out, in the fourth, Litschi and Burrell doubled and Agnew singled and two runs scored. Carlisle started the fifth with an out and then Bayless walked and Patterson singled. Arellanes filled the bags with a pass to Brashear and Bayless scored on Stinson's sacrifice fly to left. Litschi walked, filling the bases again and then Arellanes hit Burrell with the ball, forcing in Patterson with a run.

The final Tiger run began in the eighth with Burrell's double over third and Lennox on Agnew's hot single to center.

It was a long game of hard knocks and good playing and the blows were so clean and the fielding chances so few that there were no opportunities for fancy plays. It was a good game to look at and the kicking lent charm to the occasion.

O'Rourke, under suspension by President Baum, for his umpire baiting the other day, could not play, but Heister filled acceptably at second.

OAKLAND LOSES TO LOS ANGELES TEAM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Oakland suffered the pangs of another defeat at the hands of the Angels and when the scutherners were through, the score was 4 to 1 in their favor. It was not altogether a case of slamming the ball, although the visitors managed to connect in the right spots. Three of their runs came from hard hitting with good baseball judgment thrown in and the other tally was a gift from Durbin, who made a wild toss to second and Cook, who failed to connect with the easiest kind of a grounder.

Chech, the Angel pitcher, who made his first appearance on the local grounds, got away with his game in nice shape, although there is no questioning that he had a good share of the break of the luck. Double plays helped him out of holes in a couple of instances and he would not have been bothered even with a run if his support had been perfect.

Out of the first five hits made, four were doubles, and since the Angels got three of these two baggers, it appeared from the jump that the Oakland southpaw was in for a beating. Two runs, in fact, were tallied in the first three innings of the game, but he was somewhat better as the contest proceeded.

A couple of two baggers got the Angels off to a running start in inning No. 1. Howard lead off with a two sacker to right and went to third as Berger grounded to Sharpe. Daley slammed the ball into left for two bags and the runner tallied.

Berger picked up the second of the Los Angeles runs in the third. He doubled just inside third and was pushed along by Daley's sacrifice, although it looked as if Daley had beat the throw. Heitmuller poled a long sacrifice fly to center and Berger scored without an effort on Zacher's part to throw to the plate.

The Angels succeeded in putting their third man across the plate in the seventh when Durbin threw wild to second.

A bunt that Daley placed where it was impossible to handle, Heitmuller's long hit to the fence boards in right and the squeeze play worked perfectly by Frank Dillon accounted for the last of the Los Angeles scores.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a pitching duel full of thrills the White Sox and Browns played a fifteen inning game this afternoon to a scoreless tie.

Jim Scott and George Baumgardner went the whole distance on the mound line. Scott allowed but six hits, and struck out thirteen, while Baumgardner was nicked for nine hits.

St. Louis made five errors, but Baumgardner was always master of the situation when danger threatened.

Buck Weaver showed some improvement in the field. He went through fifteen innings in faultless style and contributed a two-bagger to the cause.

Bodie singled twice. Hogan had two of St. Louis' six hits, one being a double.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The world's champions mixed their nine hits in with seven errors by Washington infielders and trimmed the Senators, 6 to 2.

Coombs, who started the game for the Athletics, strained himself in the seventh inning and had to be assisted from the field.

Eddie Collins, with three hits, led in the batting. Dan Murphy was a close second with a triple and a single.

LOS ANGELES TEAM WINS GOLF LEAGUE TROPHY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE Los Angeles Country Club golf team defeated the San Gabriel team on the San Gabriel links yesterday afternoon by 5 to 2. The Los Angeles team thereby became the possessor of the league trophy, displacing Annandale in that honorable position.

The team yesterday was composed of Norman Macbeth (captain,) Frank Edwards, Arthur Braly, Jack Jevne, George H. Schneider, T. W. Wilson and Edward Tufts—the two defeated being Frank Edwards and Arthur Braly.

Macbeth played Woodcock of San Gabriel, winning by 2 up in a fine round of 76. Edwards fell to Tatum of San Gabriel with 1 up, but Tatum is shy about his medal score so just to what extent he shone as a hero is wrapped in mystery.

The match between Jack Jevne and Conde Jones was in doubt till the last putt. Jevne was 1 up at the ninth and led Conde Jones 3 down at the thirteenth, but the latter made a fine recovery to all square at seventeen.

At the drive from the eighteenth Jevne, with the whole stretch before him, must needs drive into the tree and with bated breath we watched Conde Jones pose for the mighty swipe that was to land clear on the green. But some people are so slavishly imitative and, alas, he, too, mutilated the tree! Then on the green Jevne holed his putt and Jones didn't, and merely thus did one of San Gabriel's first hopes cast gloom around.

George H. Schneider played A. T. Jergins and won by 4 up and three. Mr. Jergins started well and fluffed up like a pouter pigeon when he had Schneider 3 down at No. 4. But his glory was short-lived although he fell like a hero.

Arthur Braly lost to Frank Wade by 2 up and 1, and T. W. Wilson accounted for George Cline with 5 up and 4.

Harry Cole fell to Ed. Tufts by 7 up and 6. Jevne, Wilson and Tufts all did the new course in 79. Bogey is 78 and recognized as a very severe bogey at that.

San Gabriel is gay these days. When I left dinner dance preparations were in full swing and everybody looked festive.

Tomorrow begins the invitation tournament and the fact that the eighteen-hole medal qualifying round may be played at the golfers' convenience any time on Monday is a most grateful innovation. Entries also will be received when competitors arrive for play.

SPEAKER GETS HOME RUN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tris Speaker's bat drove a home run in the eleventh inning, which gave the Red Sox a victory over New York by a score of 7 to 6.

The Boston sluggers had lammed two pitchers out of the box, but were unable to do anything with "Big Jim" Vaughan until Speaker connected after an error had given Yerkes life at first. This was Speaker's third hit of the day.

Yerkes had five hits, including two doubles and scored three of Boston's runs. Hal Chase was the only member of the Highlanders team to get more than one hit.

Democratic Women Cheer Taft, Jeer Roosevelt.

Parable of Saul and David Is Cleverly Told.

It was cheered and cheered, and [illegible] hissed and jeered, at a meeting of old women yesterday afternoon in the Hughes building at the headquarters of the Woman's Progressive League.

Which would settle have illustrated the anxiety now existing [illegible] by the Roosevelt managers [illegible].

The meeting had the effect of [illegible] at a dozen points [illegible] that the Los Angeles women [illegible] be delivered by the bosses.

It began with it was presided over by Dr. George A. Barry, a director [illegible] League who is for La Follette. Occupying a front seat was Mrs. [illegible] Chambers McCan, first vice-president, who is a Democrat and a [illegible] of Woodrow Wilson. Mrs. [illegible] E. Cole, another director, is for [illegible] Taft and several of its leading members and workers are also active in the Women's Taft Club. Mrs. [illegible] Bryant, the president, is for [illegible], but she could not be present.

Two significant features of the [illegible] were the fact that the attendance was larger than any of the [illegible] meetings held to discuss Presidential candidates; that more prominent [illegible] were present than have [illegible] another like occasion, and that it was the first of the meetings for [illegible] light on the candidates at [illegible] of the speakers was a [illegible].

If her remarks [illegible] criterion of a woman's way [illegible] thinking, then surely the way [illegible] political transgressor in this [illegible] will be hard from this time forward.

Nobody in all his public life Theodore Roosevelt never received another drubbing at the hands of [illegible] man as that administered by [illegible] women. It was a verbal cyclone [illegible] swept all decks. Her charges [illegible] the hailstones and struck like [illegible]. It was not so much violence [illegible] earnestness which made her [illegible] of the Roosevelt politics [illegible].

If it was [illegible] trickery, but was really [illegible] principles which inspired [illegible] in this State to turn to [illegible]. Mrs. Simons said they [illegible] could have deserted La Follette [illegible] a progressive without reason [illegible] political expediency and who [illegible] the respect of the progressive [illegible] in the Republican party. A feature of the campaign much discussed among the women yesterday was the statement that hundreds and perhaps thousands of the Socialist women are said to have registered as Republicans in order to vote at the primaries for La Follette.

Some of the prominent Taft women who attended the meeting are Mrs. Cornelius Cole, Mrs. W. H. Bonsall, Mrs. A. W. Francisco, Mrs. A. S. Danforth, Mrs. Alice Calkins Snyder and Mrs. Pearl Palmer Morrison.

ON BRINK OF BIG BLUNDER.

BEET EXPERT TELLS OF PERIL AT DEMOCRATIC HANDS.

Great Revenue Would Be Lost to Country if Sugar Tax Is Removed He Says, and Half a Dozen Men Would Be Enriched Without Price Being Reduced.

That California's great and growing beet sugar industry with its many fact tories and thousands of beet growers and others directly interested, is safe from Congressional interference for the time being, but that every effort to destroy it will be renewed during the next session of Congress, is the conviction of A. C. Bird, president of the Southern California Beet Growers' Association, who returned from the national capital yesterday.

Bird was one of the committee sent to Washington for the purpose of presenting to the Senate Finance Committee reasons fhy the "House free-sugar bill" should not pass the Senate. The bill passed the House by a substantial Democratic majority, aided by twenty-four insurgent Republican votes, including Congressman Kent from California, who is now a candidate for delegate to the Republican national convention on the Roosevelt ticket.

"The ease with which this bill was passed through the House created great surprise," said Bird. "There seems to be an absolute absence of any reason for it and many good reasons why the bill should not pass.

"There is about 400 tons of beet raw sugar imported into this country and refined and used, as there is of beet sugar manufactured. On that which is imported the government collects $53,000,000 duty annually. A small number of firms or partnerships includes all of the refiners of imported raw sugar in the United States. The refiners who use the foreign raw sugar have to contend with only the homemade sugar. They have no other competition. The so-called 'sugar trust' has supreme control of prices except for the beet sugar competition.

"Congress can remove the duty from sugar if it sees fit to do so, but it has no power whatever to make sugar any cheaper, after the duty is removed. There is nothing in the history of the sugar trade during the last twenty years to afford the slightest reason for belief that the trust will of its own accord reduce the price of sugar to consumers. It can and doubtless will do so for the brief time necessary to drive the home sugar out of business. It will have supreme power to recuperate itself over and over again.

"The Senate will give this matter serious consideration. It is less and less disposed to make such a stupendous gift as $53,000,000 annually to the small coterie of sugar refiners, without any assurance, in fact without any hope, that the consumer will reap any benefit whatever in a transaction where the United States Treasury will lose so large a sum of money and it is becoming more and more apparent that the movement in favor of free sugar is exclusively backed by the refiners who are the only ones who have any hope of gain.

"It is apparent that it is unnecessary to go into the discussion of details because there is one great question which must first be solved, and unless it is, nothing but a waste of time can be expected. The leading fact is that the country is collecting sugar duty annually to the amount of $53,000,000 which is used in running the government. If the duty is removed and that money be distributed to the consumers in the same proportion that it is now paid by them, that is one thing.

"It would then be a question as to what was best for the people at large; but those who have studied the subject believe that reducing the duty on sugar is equivalent to making a gift of $53,000,000 a year to six or seven men instead of making sugar any cheaper to the consumer, eventually causing the price to advance over and above the price it has been for some years past. It would remove the only competition now encountered by the sugar trust, and put the business entirely in its hands. The Senate can remove the duty from sugar if it pleases, but if the duty is taken off, all the power of Congress is not sufficient to insure a single cent of the $53,000,000 going back into the hands of the consumer.

"As to the future, it is very difficult to predict with any hope of accuracy. As we are on the eve of a Presidential election, no one can foretell what the political result may be, but it is safe to say that if the Democratic party wins, it will as a matter of course attempt to uphold the old doctrine of free trade. It is difficult to imagine how that party could make a more stupendous mistake."

GOLDEN DREAM OF WONDERLAND.

"POPPY DAY" AT VAN NUYS IS A DELIGHT TO HOST.

Two Thousand Visit Thriving Young City and Enjoy Posy Picking, Barbecue and Games—Beauty and Business Where Ranch Recently Was.

Yesterday was "Poppy Day," at Van Nuys and 2000 men, women and children visited the thriving new city [illegible] to sportunu passajns pun[illegible]les, enjoyed a free barbecue and a varied programme replete with entertaining features.

The fields around the city that was built in a year are aglow with thousands of yellow blossoms and the guests fairly reveled in the golden glow of sweet-scented buds and flowers.

Hundreds of automobiles, interurban electric trains and other vehicles were used in transporting the throng to the poppy fields which at this season of the year are ablaze with color. W. J. Whitsett, sales manager of the Van Nuys tract conceived the idea of holding a poppy day on which the public should be invited.

Free automobiles conveyed the visitors to and from the poppy fields and over the beautiful boulevard that runs through the great tracts and townsites.

The event was designed as particularly a ladies' day, with the idea of appealing to the women and showing the advantages of Van Nuys as a home place, where children can be reared with health-giving out-door life, and where, at the same time, the whole family can be in close touch with the city.

R. J. Whitley, general manager of the Suburban Homes Company directed the enertainment and did everything possible to make the day and occasion enjoyable.

Joe Romeo, the famous chef, prepared the barbecue, and assisted by a score of attendants in white, served 2000 persons with delicious meat, salads, chili con carne, beans, French bread and coffee.

During the afternoon foot races, nail driving contests and athletic features were participated in.

The growth and progress of Van Nuys since its birth, fourteen months ago, is amazing. At that time it was an open grain field with a lone ranch-house in sight. Twenty-six business houses have been established in white-glazed brick blocks and a national bank organized with a paid-up capital of $50,000 and a surplus of $5000. An up-to-date newspaper plant and telephone exchange building were recently erected near the center of the city.

Between seven and eight miles of streets have been built and over nine miles of cement curbs and sidewalks laid. About twelve miles of parking has been set out and a complete water system sufficient to supply a city of 10,000 has been installed. A school district has been formed and $50,000 worth of bonds voted and sold for a fine building.

Who Got These Millions of Dollars?

An Everyday Lesson for Young Men, All Investors and Home-makers.

LOS ANGELES, April 18.—The estimated arrival of colonists to the extent of 25,000 adults as new residents for this region during the past three months, means that each new citizen is worth to the community $1500 per adult represented in the land values where they locate. This is in addition to the amount of actual money they bring to invest. At this government estimate of citizenship value it means thirty-seven million dollars of new real estate values transferred from other sections to Los Angeles and vicinity. You might think this a high estimate of the citizenship values for each adult, but just let an exodus of 25,000 adults leave any city in America at one time and you would notice perceptibly the reduced rents, the vacant houses and the loss of just about thirty-seven million dollars in real estate valuations. The estimated amount is correct.

Those millions have arrived and are absorbed and fixed in real estate values hereabouts. You will pay interest on these increased millions in the form of higher rents and increased prices of land.

It is an interesting study to think what could be created in the form of new wealth if these 25,000 people had gone in a united body upon bare land. Such organizations have been formed in Los Angeles by the editors of Western Empire magazine and marvelous results for investors have been obtained.

We would like to have you study our booklet. It is so different from usual real estate literature. We are now forming the Verdugo home-buyers club, to establish a town center at the junction point of three fine residential valleys only eleven miles from Los Angeles. It is a "center-spot" proposition and means millions of dollars profit in a few years and very quick sharp profits immediately. We join home-makers and investors in one mutual syndicate. Land for the home-makers and first mortgage bonds for investors. Both secure valuable bonus stock in the project as charter members.

This is our Tenth project.

No Sunday trips to the land.

No free rides. Fare 50c round trip in fine autos.

Booklet with maps and an interesting study of how money is actually made from real estate is free. Write or call. Western Empire Suburban Farms Association, 100 Chamber of Commerce Building, Los Angeles.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

ANIMATED BY A HIGH HOPE.

Col. Green Talks of Pasadena's Coming Season.

Orders Vast Improvements Made on Big Hotel.

Sierra Madre Man Has Both Legs Cut Off.

(Office of The Times, 69 S. Fair Oaks avenue.)

PASADENA, April 21.—That Pasadena is a little too slow is the opinion of Col. G. G. Green, owner of the Hotel Green. The colonel is soon to leave for the East, after having made plans for improvements to be made at the large hostelry during the summer months, and says that he hopes life in the Crown City will be livelier next winter.

"I anticipate a very good season next year," he said last night, "but I hope that there will be a little more going on for the entertainment of visitors. I am going to try to see that there is, so far as my hotel is concerned. I am going to have frequent, almost daily, excursions to the seashore, and airplane trips to other parts of Southern California, and I hope that Pasadena itself will be made a more enjoyable place in which to spend one's time.

"I still have faith in what I said a short time ago about a theater. Pasadena needs one. And I believe that there are men who would be willing to invest in one. In fact, I know of several who are enthusiastic over the idea, although it has assumed no definite shape as yet.

"One thing which will bring many tourists to Southern California next winter is the remembrance of the weather we have had this winter. It has been so pleasant that most of those who were fortunate enough to be here expressed their intention to return next season."

Col. Green declares that it is his intention to make a number of improvements and alterations at the hotel during the summer, chief of which will be the remodeling of a portion of the east building into an elaborately furnished grill. This he expects to have completed so that it may be opened for business early next fall. Other remodeling is to be accomplished, and some changes will probably be made in the arrangement of the roof garden. Tennis courts were recently constructed on the Fair Oaks avenue side of the grounds.

NATURE IMPROVED UPON.

How is a fellow going to do something original in art with a humane society forever upsetting his plans?

The person who wants to know is Thomas Calkins, a 12-year-old boy who lives in Lamanda Park. The humane society wants Tommie. And a dog's small fry admirer, who figures in the sensation, wants to be let alone.

Tommie had seen many dogs tricked out with ribbons about their necks, but a lively, purple, indelible-inked typewriter ribbon being at hand, he conceived the idea of encircling the dog in numerous convolutions, until it should resemble a purple and white striped fantastic creature with an immense bow on its back.

Unfortunately for the dog, the plan was carried out on a rainy day, and when the ribbon was peeled off at the end of an hour's play, the stripes remained on the animal's hide.

Since that dog "has retained its barber pole appearance" (though the color is beginning to fade) and Tommie has made himself as inconspicuous as the dog has been attractive. He was at last discovered and humane society officials are debating the question of whether the offense can be construed as cruelty to animals, as some who have seen the unfortunate quadruped maintain.

BOTH FEET OFF.

Richard Edgar, a teamster, 45 years of age, was run over by a Los Angeles-bound Pacific Electric car at Sierra Madre at 7 o'clock last night and both feet cut off. He was brought to Pasadena and taken to the Pasadena Hospital. He is unmarried.

BACK TO OLD TIMES.

Society people of Pasadena on May 11 will step from their limousines and electrics at Carmelita Playground into the midst of a genuine county fair such as they used to attend in years gone by. It is to be given as a benefit for the George Junior Republic, at Chino, and will be at once one of the most enjoyable and most profitable society-charitable events of the winter, if plans that have been made are successfully carried out.

There will be a 5-cent dance hall, sideshows, a Dutch kitchen and all the other attractions that go to make up a county fair of the kind that used to be. And each department of the show will be carried on under the supervision of a society matron of some of the city.

Miss Kate Fowler and Miss Marion Todd have taken over the actual management of the affair, and are now at work on arrangements. Following are some of the committees:

Committee on Dance Hall, Mrs. David Blankenhorn, chairman; Sideshows, C. C. Clark, T. S. Norton, Jr., and Jack Dotten; Monkey Cage, John Daggett; County Store, Mrs. Lawrence Macomber and Miss Margaret Clark; Dutch Kitchen, Miss Hildreth Markham and Miss Jane Rowland; Peanuts and Popcorn Booth, Miss Genevieve Stahman; Lemonade and Soft Drinks, Miss Laura Ware; "Hit the President," Tad Jones and Francis Baer; Shooting Gallery, Grosvenor Wotkyns and Harlan Christy; Baby Show, Miss Geraldine Barry; Silhouette, Miss Maud Daggett; Posters, Huntington Park; Grab Bag, Miss Caroline Tompkins.

WAS EIGHTY YESTERDAY.

Mrs. L. R. Garfield, widow of the martyred President, who makes her home in Pasadena, was the guest of honor last Friday afternoon at a luncheon given by Mrs. George Ellery Hale at her home, corner of Rose avenue and Hermosa street, South Pasadena. The occasion was that of Mrs. Garfield's eightieth birthday anniversary. She was the recipient of many remembrances, and flowers were heaped up about her.

Mrs. Garfield's home is at the corner of Buena Vista street and Meredian drive, South Pasadena. She has lived there for nearly ten years, and both President Taft and ex-President Roosevelt have visited her.

According to Engineer Burdette Moody, who attended a meeting of the Los Angeles City Council last Friday night, that city will not raise the question of annexation with the proposal to supply Pasadena with some of the Owens River water.

The City Council will probably call for bids for the construction of the proposed city garbage incinerator next Tuesday.

Residents of Lamanda Park now want a new school building. They contend that one should be erected on a site at Colorado street and Rose avenue.

As a result of the recent rains unimproved property in Altadena is yellow with poppies.

Several ministers in the city will take the Titanic disaster for the themes of their sermons this morning.

Mrs. G. S. Case, wife of Dr. G. S. Case of No. 833 South Los Robles avenue, died at her home yesterday afternoon after a short illness. She was 44 years of age. Funeral services will be held next Tuesday at the Ives, Warren and Salisbury chapel.

The Red and White teams of the Pasadena Polo Club played a match at Tournament Park yesterday. It resulted in a score of 4 to 4. The line-up was: Reds, J. B. Miller, 1; Carlton Burke, 2; R. Weiss, 3, and H. Weiss, 4. Whites, Dr. Z. T. Malaby, 1; Robert Neustadt, 2; Stephen, 3, and Dr. William A. Boucher, 4.

RIGOROUS INSPECTION.

South Pasadena Trustees Provide Safeguards Against Faulty Streets. Much Paving Work Contemplated.

SOUTH PASADENA, April 20.—The commencement of the work of paving Pasadena avenue and Mission street from the new Arroyo Seco bridge, near the Cawston Ostrich Farm to Fair Oaks avenue means that a new era in civic progress has been ushered into existence in South Pasadena.

This contract, which calls for nearly a mile of street work, is the first large permanent paving job ever done in this city, and it is being watched with intense interest by all of the citizens who favor progress.

Profiting by the experience of property holders on Orange Grove avenue, who are now in litigation with the contractor who laid the paving on that avenue, the trustees will adopt a rigorous form of supervision as to class of workmanship and character of materials used. The trustees realize that it is important to secure a good mechanical job, and while the same class of paving is to be used as on Orange Grove avenue, and which is now under fire, the property holders along the street are confident that with proper inspection, a perfectly satisfactory pavement can be secured, both from the standpoint of wearing quality as well as appearance.

Already many of the supposed obstacles which came near defeating the paving of this avenue and street have been removed in part, or in whole. The public utility corporations have already laid conduits for telephone and electric wires, and it is said that the water companies may install permanent cast iron mains in advance of the laying of the pavement. This will not only provide better pressure and a more adequate fire protection, but will also prove to be an incentive for building construction, especially in the Lincoln Park section.

RHEEM FUNERAL.

The funeral services of Mary J. Rheem, who died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Updike, No. 1700 Ramona avenue, occurred this afternoon at 2:30 from the chapel of Turner, Stevens & Berry, No. 1417 Mission street, Rev. W. H. Wotten, rector of St. James Episcopal Church, officiating, with private cremation following. The deceased was 71 years old and leaves a widower, Samuel J. Rheem, and one daughter, Mrs. Updike. She was a native of Canada, and had lived in Southern California about eleven years.

TO FORM NEW PARISH.

Whittier Episcopalians Emerge from Mission into the Broader Church Relation.

WHITTIER, April 20.—Every preliminary step necessary for the creation of an independent parish was taken at the annual meeting at St. Mathis Episcopal Church last evening.

A constitution and by-laws were adopted and articles of incorporation drawn up. These preliminaries were followed by the election of the parish vestry for the ensuing year. The vestrymen elected are A. W. Swain, C. A. Mattison, J. P. Moore, George Chaffey, J. G. Swain, D. L. Crane and George M. Atkinson. The vestry is officered by the selection of A. W. Swain as senior warden, C. A. Mattison as junior warden, J. P. Moore as clerk, and George M. Atkinson as treasurer.

The vestry held a session at which a cordial and unanimous call was extended to the Rev. Charles Stanley Mook, present mission rector, to become the first parish rector of the church. The call was accepted.

Two graduation recitals by students of the department of oral expression of the High School are scheduled for the near future, the first for the evening of April 26 and the second on the evening of May 10. Six diplomas of the department, which are given on the successful completion of two years' work, will be awarded.

The first recital will be given by Raymond Palmer, Agnes Barnhart and Gladys Coffin. The second will be given by Robert Brokaw, Marvel Babcock and Lois Belt. A violin orchestra will assist in the first recital. Prof. MacDonald, the leader of the orchestra, is the instructor in violin at the High School.

At the first recital Raymond Palmer will read "The Man in the Shadows," by Richard Washburn Child. Miss Barnhart will give a part from "The Dawn of Tomorrow." Miss Coffin will give two scenes from "The Lane That Had No Turning," by Sir Gilbert Parker. Mr. Palmer and Miss Coffin will also appear in a clever little sketch, "A Pair of Lunatics."

Long Beach.

WARNING WAS NOT HEEDED.

Long Beach Couple May Be in Danger in Mexico.

Railroad Officials Discuss Rates With Councilmen.

Plan Proposed to Augment Rodgers Memorial Fund.

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Much uneasiness is felt by friends and relatives here for the safety of Harry Gundry and wife, of Long Beach, who are, or were, in Culiacan, Mex., and have not been heard from for three weeks.

In his last letter to his mother, Mrs. Virginia Gundry, her son enclosed a note which he had just received from E. E. Thompson from Quila, which read, "Better get out—north or south—quickly as you can. The crowd (rebels) right now is going from Quila through Oso to the south." The note was delivered by messenger to Gundry on the piece of land he was engaged in clearing.

Gundry in his response attached little importance to the warning and said he was all right and in no danger. That is the last word from him, though heretofore he has been writing regularly to his mother.

RATE DISCUSSION.

The Railroad Committees of the City Council and Chamber of Commerce held a conference this afternoon with Pacific Electric officials regarding complaints about rates. After discussion, the railroad people agreed to allow a 5-cent fare in the shape of commutation books to Gaspur on the west side, which is close to the glass works and salt works and the East Wilmington lumber yards.

Transfers will also be granted. Relative to transfers from the Los Angeles main line to Redondo avenue, the railroad refused because their franchise did not permit it. Regarding the stopping of main line cars at Third and Seventh streets instead of Second and Sixth, in order to connect with local lines, the officials agreed providing petitions to that effect were presented.

HONOR FOR GIRL.

Miss Mabel White, cashier at a local cafeteria, and who made a trip with Aviator Rodgers before his death, was elected lady-in-waiting to the queen of the carnival in Los Angeles in May, by receiving the largest number of votes at the recent Moose carnival in Long Beach.

PLUMBER HURT.

Julius Cherasko, a plumber, is lying at home dangerously hurt in a peculiar manner. He was at work on a new building at Fifth and Pine this morning when a heavy bar, used as a pike, slipped and, flying through the air struck Cherasko with the body. He was knocked down and fell several feet and when picked up was unconscious. He has a fractured left arm and internal injuries, the seriousness of which are yet undetermined.

POSTAL STATION.

The local postoffice has been asked to at once ask for new bids for the five substations in the city, contracts for which expire June 30. It is said that several of the present suboffices will be changed because the present holders have not found them as profitable as they expected in the way of attracting additional business.

ELK HOODOO.

The local Elks are convinced that a "hoodoo" hovered over their projected trip to Santa Barbara. Last week the heavy rains had flooded the northern city, and the trip was postponed until today. This morning a telegram was received from Santa Barbara that one of their members, William C. Beatty, had died suddenly and another, Robert C. Rogers, was at death's door, and merry-making under these conditions would be an impossibility.

RODGERS MEMORIAL.

In order to secure additional funds for the Rodgers memorial, Lieut. John Rodgers, cousin of the dead aviator, and Frank Shaffer, mechanician, will fly from Long Beach to Catalina and back again, provided a pledge of $1500 is raised. Shaffer returned from San Diego today having secured permission to borrow the government's canvas pontoons to be used in connection with the proposed flight. The only expense will be the actual towing charges from San Diego to Long Beach.

Redondo Beach Man Doubly Honored for Heroism Displayed in Saving Lives of Venetians.

REDONDO BEACH, April 20.—George Freeth, life guard and swimming instructor at the Redondo plunge, yesterday received notice from the United States Lifesaving Corps at New York that he had been awarded a medal from that organization for heroism in saving the lives of nine fishermen at Venice, December 16, 1908.

Freeth's bravery in saving, lone-handed, the lives of nine men by plunging into a raging sea during a heavy ocean storm at Venice some years ago, was rewarded two years ago by a medal from Congress, which granted him the honor by a special act for his exceptional deed.

ANNUAL ELECTION.

The Women's Club held the annual election of officers yesterday afternoon at the regular semi-monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Alice Goldthwaite of Emerald street. The officers chosen are: President, Mrs. G. A. Hibbard; vice-president, Mrs. George H. Anderson; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Galentine; treasurer, Mrs. Alice Goldthwaite; executive board, Mr. E. L. Chieman, Mrs. William Percial, Mrs. John Steward.

ENDS CATARRH

Sprays, Douches, Snuffs and Ointments Won't Kill the Persistent Catarrh Germs.

Hyomei, the Antiseptic Air, Will

When you can go to any drug store in any civilized community on earth and buy for only $1.00 a remedy that will quickly rid you of hawking, spitting and snuffling, why do you allow the devilish germ sof catarrh to undermine your health and destroy your efficiency?

Quit sprays and douches. Liquid cannot penetrate into the nooks, folds and crevices of the irregular mucous membrane. Neither can it get into the bronchial tubes that lead to the lungs and where germs thrive and multiply.

If you believe that liquids reach the air tubes, try to swallow a little water the "wrong way." Such a test will effectually demonstrate to you the idle theory that sprays and douches can cure catarrh.

HYOMEI is a pleasant antiseptic air, which, when breathed, penetrates into the folds and crevices of the sore, germ-infested membrane and also goes deep into the air cells of the lungs, killing all germs.

A HYOMEI outfit costs $1.00. Extra bottles of HYOMEI, if needed, 50 cents.

Be Very Careful Of Your Drinking Water at This Season of the Year

The rainy season is practically over, but its effects on the city water will be evident for many months to come. The swollen streams of the past few weeks have accumulated much impure vegetable matter along their banks.

These foreign particles are not always perceptible to the eye. In fact, their presence is not always detected even by the taste, because they are so thoroughly dissolved. Right here lies the danger. The water looks fairly clear and pure—in reality it is saturated with a solution of decomposed plant matter which often plays havoc with the system.

To be absolutely certain of avoiding the dangers that lurk in ordinary drinking water at this season, drink nothing but distilled water. The purest and best of them all is PURITAS.

PURITAS Distilled Water is aerated with pure Ozone. It must not be classed with the many "filtered waters." Neither is it a mineral water. PURITAS is just pure, clear drinking water. It is used in thousands of homes in Southern California, because it has come to be recognized as the only table water to be relied on as beneficial and unvarying in its purity. Unlike most mineral waters, PURITAS Distilled Water contains nothing that c throw the most delicate system out of order. On the contrary, its action on the stomach and bowels is decidedly beneficial.

We will send a sealed demijohn of PURITAS Distilled Water to your home for only 40 cents, if you live within the old city boundary lines. Just telephone our main office, Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191, and we will make delivery promptly. If you are located beyond the old city boundary lines, the cost will be a tride more because of the longer delivery haul.

For residents of the suburban towns we have regular agents. There is probably one in your locality. Notify him to send you a trial demijohn of PURITAS. If you are unable to find an agent near you, drop a postal to us and we will see that you are supplied. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company.

TAFT SENTIMENT GENERAL.

Veterans in Soldiers' Home Have Wearied of the Empty Phrasing of the Insurgents.

SOLDIERS' HOME, April 20.—A committee of citizens from Los Angeles, interested in real Republican party affairs were visitors at headquarters yesterday with a view to obtaining permission to organize a Taft Club in the home. They were disappointed on learing from Gov. Cochrane that "laws and regulations" of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers' barred all primary political meetings. There is a provision, however, that after nominations are made there shall be allowed, during the campaign, one mass meeting to each party having a place on the ballot, to be voted at a regular election. The meetings to be held in Memorial Hall, and at each of which the governor of the branch shall preside.

Were conditions otherwise, and preliminary work permitted, there is a growing belief among veterans who are inimical to the Roosevelt proposition that a rousing Taft Club would already be in evidence.

There are many among the old veterans who are real Republicans, and who fail to recognize the so-called "progressive Republican" party as other than insurgents, bent upon the ultimate ruin of the party of Lincoln, Grant and McKinley—who were simply and only Republicans.

One well-known former leader among the latter, when speaking of the situation today, said: "Numbers of those who, two years ago, were misled by a yelping crowd, holding forth on the Memorial Hall stage, as 'Lincoln Republicans,' listened to and swallowed the harrangues. They have since awakened to the fact that they were fooled—that there were other bosses."

HOSPITAL ANNEX.

The tuberculosis annex to the hospital was occupied yesterday by a number of patients, who rejoice in the change. An excellent special cook and experienced nurse with attendants, were included in the transfer to the new quarters that were set apart for the comfort of this class of patients.

HERMOSA BEACH.

HERMOSA BEACH, April 20.—Arrangements are being made by the Hermosa Grammar School Board with George Freeth, swimming instructor at the Redondo Plunge for swimming classes for the school. There will be classes for the pupils from the first to the eighth grade. Freeth to have one class at the plunge each day of the week. The school trustees recognize the necessity of a knowledge of swimming for the students and so plan to meet this need.

RETIRED ARMY OFFICER DIES.

Col. Bridgman Dies at His Home in San Diego.

Long and Honorable Career to His Credit.

Effort to Recall Councilman Results in Failure.

SAN DIEGO, April 20.—The death of Lieut.-Col. Frank Bridgman, the oldest retired army officer in the United States, occurred at 8 o'clock this morning at the home of his son-in-law, Rear Admiral Uriel Sebree, retired, on Ocean boulevard, Coronado.

Col. Bridgman was 91 years old. He would have been 92 years old July 16, this year. He had been a resident of Coronado since 1909. Deceased first came to California in 1891, residing in San Francisco up to the time he came to Coronado. The funeral will be in charge of the military organizations of this city. Maj. George H. Shelmans, commandant at Ft. Rosecrans, was named to take charge of the arrangements. The date has not been definitely set. The services will be held in Christ Episcopal Church, Coronado. The remains will be shipped to Keokuk, Iowa, for interment beside those of the deceased's wife.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Frank Bridgman was engaged with his brother in the mercantile business in Keokuk. He enlisted in the volunteer service and because of his knowledge of business he was assigned to the paymaster's service. He served throughout the four years of the Civil War and was breveted for gallantry. At the close of the war he was mustered out of the volunteers and appointed a paymaster in the regular army. For eight years he was stationed with the troops at Santa Fe, N. M., and participated in the Indian campaigns throughout the Southwest. He was with Forsythe and other noted Indian fighters. In 1886 he retired. During his lifetime he was devoted to fostering the Army Mutual Insurance Company, an organization, which after the Civil War did much good in supporting widows and orphans of officers and soldiers of the Union army.

Three years ago when Admiral Sebree came to Coronado, Mrs. Sebree desired to make that place a home near her father could spend his declining years. His death was caused by general debility. Admiral and Mrs. Sebree will accompany the remains to Keokuk.

RECALL FIZZLES.

"Labernin" was the fate of the effort to recall Councilman H. H. Wentworth. Advocates of the initiative and recall in San Diego evidently put their best hand and laid down it in the Fay proposition. Last Tuesday was the date of the expiration of the ten days in which the recall law had to present a supplementary petition to the original which was filed with 1000 names short of the number required to invoke the recall.

At the beginning of the talk to recall Councilman Fay petitions were to be found in every section of the city. Solicitors were active in the circulation of the petitions, wording was changed for a period of six weeks and petitions were finally presented to the Council with the signatures of 1600 alleged voters. When verified by the City Clerk the number of voters on the petitions was reduced by almost one hundred. However, an opinion by the City Attorney was to the effect that the original petition was 1000 or more short, and the City Clerk's office. Unless the men who urged the removal of Fay, at some future time seek to again take up the recall there is little possibility of the recall being attempted in this city for a year to come.

HEARING ENDS.

Johnson's inquiry into local affairs respecting law and order was ordered at the instigation of communications, letters and petitions addressed to the executive committee of labor unions, building trades councils and others of San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other California points. Of these letters were addressed from San Diego, according to Harris Weinstock, who came here as special investigator, he brought the communications with him but would not allow the names of the signers to become public.

Weinstock took the stand and said that it would not be fair to the persons who sent the messages to make them public, but regarding their contents a majority from San Diego sent telegrams and four touched on the matter. Eleven telegrams were sent from Los Angeles, five from San Francisco, two from Oakland, two from Redlands, others from Fresno, Sacramento and Chicago.

Part of the testimony presented to Gov. Johnson last week, if the records it will be required several days off from their duties. At the hearing Fred Moore admitted the alleged dynamite plots. He declared that they were for the Citizens' Committee, to deal with certain members of the I.W.W. to blow up the Otis building, industrial assets. Moore stated the I.W.W.'s knew who saw the money and that it was a part of the scheme to catch the I.W.W. in a trap.

RETIRED ARMY OFFICER DIES.

H. Bridgman Dies at His Home in San Diego.

Effort to Recall Councilman Results in Failure.

SAN DIEGO, April 20.—The death of Lieut.-Col. Frank Bridgman, the retired army officer in the local fleet, occurred at 5 o'clock this morning at the home of his son-in-law, Rear Admiral Uriel Sebree, on Juan boulevard. Coro-

Col. Bridgman was 81 years old. He would have been 82 years old July 1 next. He had been a resident of San Diego since 1869. Deceased first came to California in 1851, residing in San Francisco up to the time he came to Coronado. The funeral will be in charge of the military organization of this city. Maj. George H. Morgan, commandant at Ft. Rosecrans, is engaged to take charge of the arrangements. The date has not been set as yet. The services will be held in the Episcopal Church. The remains will be taken to Burlington, Iowa, for interment beside those of the deceased's wife.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Bridgman was engaged with Ira Aldrich in the mercantile business in this city. He enlisted in the volunteer service and because of his knowledge of business he was appointed a quartermaster's service. He served throughout the four years of the Civil War and was breveted for gallantry. At the close of the war he was mustered out of the volunteers and was appointed a permaster in the regular army. Thirty years ago when Admiral Sebree was in command at Coronado, Mrs. Sebree suggested that place a home where the latter could spend his declining years. His death was caused by senile debility. Admiral and Mrs. Sebree will accompany the remains East.

RECALL FIZZLES.

The "recall election" was the fate of the petitions to recall Councilman H. R. Fay, the result of the initiative and referendum in San Diego evidently having been taken in hand and laid down on the Fay proposition. Last Monday was the date of the expiration of the ten days in which the recall petitions were to be presented a supplementary petition to the original which contained the 1000 names required by the court of the petitioners required to invoke the recall.

From the beginning of the talk to recall Fay petitions were circulated in every section of the city, and active in the circulation of the petitions. Working for a period of six weeks the petitions were finally presented to the City Clerk with the signatures of 1600 voters. When verification was made by the City Clerk the number of names on the petitions was found to be almost one hundred short of the number required by the City Attorney to the effect that the original petition was 1000 or more short, has since been on file in the City Clerk's office. Unless the petitioners urged the removal of the petitions for Fay at some future time no action will be taken up the recall petitions. The possibility of the recall being attempted in this city for the present is remote.

HEARING ENDS.

The hearing of Supervisor Lee's inquiry into local conditions relative to law and order and the instigation of the recent disturbances, letters and telegrams addressed to the executive committee holding trades council meeting and others of San Diego, San Francisco and other coast points. Of these letters addressed from San Francisco by Harris Weinstock, who was sent here as special investigator by Governor Johnson, the communications stated that he would not follow the dictates of the employers to become public prosecutor and that he would be fair to the persons charged with crime to make them confess whether their statements were true or not. Eleven telegrams were sent to Governor Johnson from San Diego, five from San Francisco, one from Oakland, two from Los Angeles, one from Redlands, one from Sacramento and four touched on the Chinese question.

Eleven witnesses were sent for to testify before the Governor's representative, five from San Francisco, one from Oakland, two from Los Angeles, one from Redlands, one from Sacramento and one from Chicago.

Testimony was presented to Gov. Johnson's representative. If the Governor will be required to step off from the hearing he has admitted the possible plots. Witnesses were sent for by the Committee, and certain members were to blow up the Fay petitions with dynamite, the industrial association, the I.W.W.'s and others. It was the money that was a part of the plot to watch the I.W.W.

Conn was filed for probate, it was shown that $30,000 of her $200,000 estate had been left to friends and a niece in Santa Ana, $4500 to other friends in California and the remainder of the estate to relatives in Connecticut. In her lifetime, Mrs. Conn frequently made gifts of money to her friends, and the practice of her life was taken into the making of her will, which was written by her on January 15, last.

To her physician, Dr. J. I. Clark, she leaves $2500; to D. N. NEWS BRIEFS.

This morning a horse shied at a heap of dirt on Newport road at Tustin, and caused an accident that came near being very serious. The surrey was overturned and the occupants, Mrs. C. F. Krauss, wife of the superintendent of the Irvine Company ranch; Miss Louise Jerome, Mylford Irvine, son of James Irvine, and Bradford Hillis, who was driving the horse, were thrown out. Luckily the horse became entangled in the harness and had to stop after dragging Miss Jerome about ten feet. Mrs. Krauss and the two boys were severely shaken up and bruised.

An essay contest among students of the Santa Ana High School closed today by the awarding of first prize, $20, to Charles Swanner, and second prize, $5, to Miss Norma Wingood. BODY OF MATE COMES ASHORE.

Officer on Santa Rosa Is Recovered Months After His Death, When Vessel Was Wrecked.

SANTA BARBARA, April 20.—The badly-decomposed body of a seaman was found on the beach near Carpinteria yesterday and many believe it to be that of Second Mate E. Henson, who was drowned when the Santa Rosa was wrecked at Honda on July 7, last. The body was found by James Hemanis and Coroner Ruiz of this city was immediately notified. He held an inquest this afternoon.

From all appearances the body had been in the water for a long period. It was that of a man about 40 years of age and weighing about 180 pounds. The clothing which was yet intact, though starting to ecay, was of black material and there were remnants of a yellow slicker such as are worn by seamen. In a pocket was found a ring with four keys. The body was well imbedded in the sand.

REPAIR WORK.

Work has been started on bulkheading that portion of the city water tunnel which is affected by the recent cave-in. While the tunnel is in very bad condition, the engineers say they will have it repaired in a short time and that work on the completion of the huge bore will not be held up more than two months. Water coming from the tunnel is still very murky, but hope is given that the city's million dollar project soon will be repaired and at no distant date ready for opening.

REALTY DEALS.

More than $100,000 worth of Montecito real estate has changed hands during the past two weeks, the sales being made through Arthur Alexander. The Braun tract has been purchased by George O. Knapp, a Chicago millionaire, who is spending $100,000 on a home at "Arcady." The residence property consists of seventy acres and the Braun tract of forty-eight acres. Edward D. Wetmore has purchased forty acres of the C. E. Lost tract and it is said will build a fine home. Clara H. Gould has bought ten acres from George H. Fline, while Mrs. C. D. Raymond has purchased several lots from the Montecito Land Company. Other small sales are reported in Montecito where real estate operations have been active.

RIVERSIDE MAN FOUND DEAD IN THE STREET.

Wife Alarmed When He Fails to Return at Usual Time Makes Horrifying Discovery—Valuable Lots Will Be Utilized by the Erection of Great Apartment Houses.

RIVERSIDE, April 20.—Ira C. N. Sweet, a Civil War veteran, 66 years old, was found dead at a late hour last night by his wife, who had gone to search for him when he failed to return home.

Sweet, who resided with his wife on Sierra street, went to call on a neighbor, failed to return when expected. Mrs. Sweet then went to search for him, an da couple of blocks from their home found Mr. Sweet's dead body in the street. He had been dead a couple of hours when found, and Coroner Dickson, who made an investigation, pronounced death due to apoplexy.

Sweet came to Riverside two years ago, from Aurora, Ill. He is survived by a widow and two sons, one of whom is a local merchant.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning, Riverside Post, G.A.R., officiating.

NEW BUSINESS STRUCTURES.

This purchase gives Mr. Reynolds a solid block east of Orange of 280 feet, running in the direction of Tenth. He will cover the entire area, 157x280 feet, with buildings.

The structure fronting on Ninth street will be of two stories. The first floor will contain five storerooms, while the upper floor will be utilized for apartments. The buiding fronting on Orange street will contain six thirty-foot storerooms, one of which will be used for a garage in connection with Hotel Reynolds.

E. E. Walters, W. E. White and C. W. White have purchased a stock ranch comprising 1236 acres, in San Luis Obispo county, near the Paso Robles ranch. The consideration was $18,000. The purchasers will develop more water, and plant to alfalfa and deciduous fruits.

KOREAN COLONY A FADED DREAM.

SAN BERNARDINO PROJECT ENDS WITH REALTY TRANSFER.

Land Purchased by Evelyn See for His Religious Proposition Is Also Sold and Another Phantasy Is Dissipated Into Thin Air—Detective Attempts to Slay Himself.

SAN BERNARDINO, April 20.—The lands bought some years ago in Riche Canyon, southeast of this city, for a Korean colony, have been sold by S. C. Ahn to J. D. DeWitt of Highland. Consideration, $9900. In exchange DeWitt gives twenty acres unimproved in the Highland district. There are about 200 acres of the Korean holdings involved. The scheme to colonize failed through the fascination which neighboring groves had for the little brown men, who sought work on those properties instead of cultivating their own land. They saw bigger profits, without the slow wait for groves to come into bearing.

It is reported that the See acres on the Mojave, bought for a Chicago religionist, have also been sold. See's imprisonment in Chicago having resulted in the abandonment of the colony's settling in California, at least for a time. If See had come it was the purpose of the citizens to start a movement to have his colony severely regulated.

DETECTIVE MELANCHOLY.

Detective W. H. Baldwin attempted suicide this afternoon in his lodging-house in D street by shooting himself through the head with his revolver. He succeeded in inflicting merely a flesh wound in the forehead, above the right eye.

Baldwin has been worrying for weeks over his failure to strike a workable clew on a number of strange disappearances which have been reported in this section, and upon which he had been retained by relatives of the missing persons. It is believed that this failure, inducting to drink, led to the attempt. He was taken to the County Hospital. His wound is not serious. Baldwin was formerly county probation officer, and as such made a good record.

Judge Wood of Amador county held court here this morning in connection with the examination of a large number of candidates for citizenship. Those successfully passing the examination are Harry Ernest Steele, Oscar Secord Smith, George Thomas Musson, James Matheson Webster, Charles Francis Pratt, Rees Davies, Timothy Francis Kelly, George Santhu, Donald Grant McMillan Morris Robert Jones

Tuesday the six suits brought by former employees against the Redlands Golden Orange Company, for salaries due on uncancelled contracts, will commence in the Superior Court. The suits involve close to $10,000. They are the outgrowth of internal ruptures in the company. C. M. Brown, manager, and others being discharged. The company claims the plaintiffs conspired to develop a rival business while in the company's employ.

ANNOUNCEMENT

LOZIER 1913

A Real NINETEEN THIRTEEN Car

Type 72—Six Cylinders—80 Actual Brake Horse Power
Left Hand Drive—Center Control
Double Magneto—Triple Ignition—Automatic Oil Levels
4 Miles to Express-Train Speed on Direct Drive
The Safest, Strongest, Easiest Riding Car Ever Built
Price $5000

Lozier, which has for eight years led American motor cars in design and construction, again offers for 1913 additional improvements—features which are sure to be adopted as standard, just as have most of the other epoch-making innovations embodied in Lozier cars since the first one was marketed in 1904. Lozier has never marketed a mechanical mistake, and the 1913 features are no exception to the rule.

Sixth Season for Lozier Six

For five years Lozier has been building high-powered six-cylinder cars—the most successful "Sixes" ever built. The Lozier six has won more 24-hour races than any other car. It holds and has held for three years, the world's 24-hour stock car record.

The remarkable power, the persistent endurance, the brilliant speed of the Lozier are written into the history of the great racing classics of America—Vanderbilt cup, International Grand Prize, Elgin National Championship, Fairmount Park, Santa Monica, Indianapolis and Atlanta Speedways, and the famous Brighton Beach 24-hour races.

Unparalleled performances in these great contests, publicly conducted under official sanction and observation, mark the Lozier as the "Champion Motor Car of the World." None of these achievements of the Lozier is founded upon private trials or mere assertions—all were won before hundreds of thousands of America's motoring enthusiasts—all are officially recorded.

1913 Lozier the Greatest

Splendid as have been the Loziers of the past, the 1913, Six-Cylinder, Type 72 presents a distinct and marked advance. It is the greatest motor car ever built by the House of Lozier—and "Men Who Know" will tell you that means the greatest motor car ever built.

No other car offers such a remarkable combination of desirable features—features which will not be found combined in any other motor car for several years to come.

Left-Hand Drive is a distinct step in the evolution of the motor car in America. It is as sure to become standard on all automobiles as have six-cylinder motors on high-class cars.

Center Control logically follows left-hand drive. Fore-door body design makes it a necessity. The control levers of the Type 72 Lozier are in convenient position for the driver, yet entirely out of the way of occupants of both front seats.

Lozier Automatic-Level Oiling System is one of the greatest achievements of the Lozier engineers in recent years. High oil level at high speeds—low oil level at low speeds—a smokeless exhaust at all speeds. Valves free from carbon. Perfect lubrication and marvelous efficiency—300 to 400 miles to the gallon.

Triple Ignition is another forward step in design—learned from our racing experience. The 1913 Lozier is fitted with Bosch Double Magneto which gives, when desired, two sparks simultaneously in each cylinder, providing a remarkable increase in power. This magneto, with the battery, provides three distinct sources of ignition.

Six-Cylinder Motor of new design—the most powerful ever put in a Lozier car. Vibrationless at highest speeds, noiseless in action. With cylinders 4⅝" x 5½"—A. L. A. M. rating 51 H. P.—this motor actually develops more than 80 brake horse power.

Fifty-eight Sets of Ball-Bearings—more than are used in any other car in the world—eliminate friction and transmit the power of the motor to the driving wheels with minimum loss. This is one of the big reasons for the wonderful power, hill climbing ability, flexibility and long life of Lozier cars.

See the new models ready for delivery. Arrange for a demonstration and you will learn the reason why hundreds of America's big men—men who have owned many makes of cars before buying the Lozier—"Men Who Know"—have declared the Lozier to be "the best car built in America."

Business situation continues to improve with optimistic sentiment prevailing in West and Southwest. Resolution introduced in Congress provides for dissolution of alleged lead trust.

The week closed with the majority having assumed a waiting attitude; but with sentiment on the whole rather hopeful. We have in recent advices covered the situation quite fully, so perhaps at this time it is only necessary to say that substantial interests are disposed to frown on any attempt to force a decided movement in the markets in either direction until there are indications of the situation either becoming clearer or more complex. Somewhat more attention is being paid to international politics, and from a domestic standpoint recent occurrences have not been unduly in keeping with the desires of those who anticipate a rather sharp rebuke to destructive radicalism. The bank statement made a further favorable showing and reports as to the state of trade and industry are optimistic. It is not improbable that developments in the fields of labor during the coming week will do much towards shaping the immediate course of the stock market, as will also crop advices from both the cotton and wheat belts.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS

After brisk trading on call yesterday, eggs and butter declined, the former half a cent on all grades and the latter 1 cent on all grades, except the country product. The new range on eggs is from 17½ to 23½ cents a dozen and on butter 23 to 24 cents a pound.

Cheese and potatoes were active and moved freely at quotations. There was a plentiful supply of cabbage on hand, the commodity holding firm at quotations. The week closed with a tendency toward an over supply of asparagus, and in consequence the market was decidedly weak, with the prediction of a drop early this week.

A new consignment of pineapples reached the market from Hawaii, selling readily at 5 to 10 cents a pound. Strawberries were weak at quotations, dealers reporting increasing receipts with indications of a decline this week. Other fruit was unchanged in prices, moving normally, with a well-balanced supply and demand.

Receipts of eggs, butter, cheese and potatoes were large, running very heavy. In eggs the receipts were 715 cases of eggs, 55,955 pounds of butter, 23,734 pounds of cheese, and 2424 sacks of potatoes.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Gains and Losses About Equally Divided—No Stock Varies More Than Five Points.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton, 319 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—The market was quiet today throughout the entire list, with no particular changes in quotations anywhere. The gains and losses were about equally divided, in no case exceeding five points, and this difference is on the high-priced active issues. Trading as a rule this week has not compared favorably with last week, although brokers generally feel well satisfied with what they are doing.

Compared with last Saturday, Jumbo Extension is up 10 points, Manhattan Consolidated is up 8, White Cap 1, Montana is up 5, Tonopah Extension 15, West End 2½.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The course of the stock market today suggested it has not emerged from the depression of earlier in the week. The weekly statements of the commercial agencies indicate a slight retrograde movement in some lines of trade. Business was in moderate volume and the undertone was irregular throughout. There was heaviness in Western Union. Marconi stock fell today to 150, after having been quoted less than twenty-four hours before 200 points above. Standard shares were neglected at first, but later made improvement under the lead of Reading. Specialties again were prominent. Interboro preferred and Third Avenue recording gains. The issues of the International Mercantile Marine Company were weak, the bonds and preferred stock declining to lowest prices of the week. The tone of the market at the close was dull. Bonds were irregular today. Total sales, par value, aggregated $1,401,000. United States government bonds were unchanged on call throughout the week.

INVESTORS STAMPEDING

The latest reports from the new Gold Mining Camp of "High Grade" Mineral County, Cal., just a few miles from the Nevada-Oregon line are to the effect that prospectors, miners, investors, business men, and Soldiers of Fortune are rushing by the hundreds into the newly discovered El Dorado. Regardless of the hardships, lack of accommodations and snow-covered hills, claims are being staked, sold, bought and sold, and the most picturesque, fortune-making history of Cripple Creek, Leadville, Tonopah, Goldfield, and the Klondike is being repeated. The indications are that the mid-summer will see a booming, bustling, gold mining camp. The eminent engineers declare the ledges of High Grade are long, strong, and heavily mineralized and that the camp is the next big thing in mining. We have had our representatives in the camp from its earliest stages.

We have very important features and factor of the new camp in detail. For information, together with a map of the new camp "High Grade" and several photographs of the district and our weekly market letter will be sent free upon request.

Our engineer endorses the district enthusiastically, he reports the mines in condition daily. Our information is correct and is yours for the asking. Write or wire. The Wilson-Macmillan Co., Brokers, 826-827 Mills Building, San Francisco.

WOULD REGULATE BILLBOARDS.

Watts Citizens Will Ask Trustees to Prescribe Shape and Dimensions, or Abolish Them.

WATTS, April 20.—Petitions will be presented to the City Council next Tuesday evening, asking that some action be taken to regulate the bill boards in Watts. While it is recognised that they cannot be forbidden entirely, it is proposed that the City Council shall place a heavy tax against them, and provide a stated size and shape, so those promoting billboard advertising will prefer not to have any inside the city limits.

A number of billboards have been put up in Watts along the P. E., right-of-way, until people owning property facing the car lines can see nothing except the backs of these billboards. It is understood that the new council is favorable in the matter of taking such action as will come as near as possible doing away with the nuisance.

Mrs. John Nelson, of Huntington avenue, this city, was poisoned yesterday, by eating toadstools, believing them to be mushrooms. Children gathered them near the home, and Mrs. Nelson was delighted with their find when they brought them home. No sooner had she eaten them, then she became violently sick, and Dr. Riche was sent for.

WATTS WILL INVOKE RECALL.

Suburban Town Is Not Satisfied With Recent Victory at Polls and Will Go Further.

WATTS, April 20.—The Citizens Progressive League proposes to continue its fight for the recall of H. L. Perkins and W. C. Clever, as members of the City Council. These men have yet two years to serve, but objection is made to their continuance in office.

Some time ago petitions were filed asking for a recall election, and the City Clerk certified that the petition was sufficient. The council, after ordering the election decided later, not to pass the resolution calling the election, claiming that it had discovered that the petition was defective. Both men to be voted on opposed the resolution.

At its last meeting, the Progressive League passed resolutions asking Perkins and Clever to resign, and unless they do so, the new council will be asked to pass the resolution, so the recall election may be held.

If the new board, too, decides that the petition on file is not sufficient, a new petition will at once be circulated and filed, and the issue fought out. It is also proposed to file a recall petition, seeking the removal of S. J. Lord as a School Trustee.

Friend's Tribute.

LOVABLE YOUTH WAS MAJ. BUTT.

WORKED HIS WAY IN COLLEGE AND CARED FOR MOTHER.

Los Angeles Woman Tells of His Struggles, Triumphs and Stanch and Gentlemanly Character. Clean-minded and Fun-loving, He Won Friends Everywhere.

When Maj. Archibald Butt courteously lifted a woman into a lifeboat and, smiling, raised his hat in farewell, he simply did, in the presence of death, what he had been accustomed to do all his life," said Mrs. Ervin M. Wade of No. 630 Verbena drive, yesterday. She knew the President's aide when he was a boy with his widowed mother, working his way through the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn.

Afterward she knew him in Washington, when he had started the brilliant journalistic, literary and military career which was brought to a tragic end when Maj. Butt went down with the other ill-fated persons on board the Titanic.

"Maj. Butt was born in Augusta, Ga., in 1863," said Mrs. Wade. "His mother was left a penniless widow with four children. Archie was a clean-minded, fun-loving youth, and when he came to Sewanee, a boy of 16 or 17, he soon became a friend of everyone in the town. He was upright in character, ambitious and lovable.

"My father, Gen. E. Kirby-Smith, was teacher of mathematics at the university and Archie Butt soon became a favorite of his. No one could resist the boy because of his bright mind, his gracious and affable manner and his clean and wholesome character.

"Archie Butt was often at our home and I knew him well as I was just about his age. The boy worked hard to make his way through college, although everybody thought so well of him that he was helped and his college career made as easy as possible. He was proctor of the university and helped out his mother's meager income by doing work for the college papers and publications. Even at an early age he showed that he had been cut out for a literary career and that he would rise to eminence.

"Mrs. Butt, who was Miss Willingham, a member of one of the best families in Georgia, when she came to Sewanee, secured a position as college librarian. The family life of the Butts was saddened by the death of two of the children. One, a little girl, died of consumption, while Archie's brother was killed in a railroad accident. There is one brother still alive. He is Edward Wade Butt, a prosperous dealer in cotton in Augusta.

"Maj. Butt graduated in the eighties and after he left the university he went to Washington and became a member of the staff of the Post. His career after that is well known and justified the hopes that his friends had of him when he was a penniless boy, working his way through college.

"One of the things that Maj. Butt's closest friends loved him for was the great care, affection and tenderness that he lavished on his mother. He looked after her every want. He took her abroad and traveled with her a great deal. She died eight or ten years ago in Rome. Archie was in the United States, but he took the first boat at the cabled news of his mother's death and brought back her body. His life should be an example to all young men, as he was a brave, kindly, chivalrous soul, who died as he had lived, true to the last to his manhood."

Ends It All.

GOES TO DIE IN A MORGUE.

Lawyer Commits Suicide in Undertaking Rooms.

Prepares for His Death and Then Pulls Trigger.

Financial Difficulties and Ill Health Alleged.

Determined that his body should be sent to the right place with as little trouble as possible, Chester Guy Smith, an attorney having offices at No. 129 West Second street, walked into the reception room of Breese Brothers' undertaking rooms late yesterday afternoon and shot himself through the head.

Although mortally wounded, the lawyer was still breathing when discovered by an attendant and was hurried to the Receiving Hospital, where an examination showed that the bullet had penetrated the brain and that death was a matter of but a short time.

After lingering on the verge of the grave for more than an hour, the patient gradually grew weaker and died without recovering consciousness. That the act was one of deliberation was indicated by a note found in his pocket which gave his name and requested that Dr. W. P. Millspaugh of No. 427 Laughlin building be notified.

"Send my body to Bresee Brothers and cremate," was the final injunction.

Despite a careful investigation on the part of the police no motive for the suicide could be discovered although members of the family declared that the attorney had been working unusually hard of late and that his health had been undermined by financial worries.

With his wife, the attorney lived at the home of his father, C. H. Smith, No. 2317 Pasadena avenue. In speaking of the tragic end of her husband Mrs. Smith said that she had noticed that he appeared worried during the last few weeks, apparently on account of financial difficulties, but he had never hinted that he intended to take his own life.

The lawyer was about 40 years old and came to this city from Buffalo ten years ago and at once began the practice of his profession. He was married about six years ago but had no children.

The body was sent to the Bresee morgue to await the action of the Coroner.

WANT COAST ROUTE BUILT.

Sixty-Five Delegates from Southern California Towns Banquet at Long Beach and Present Views.

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Organized effort to secure a coast highway that really is such was launched at Hotel Virginia tonight, when sixty-five representative business men from Los Angeles, Monrovia, South Pasadena, Claremont, Sunset Beach, Laguna, Huntington Beach and Long Beach banqueted and listened to enthusiastic addresses and formed an organization by electing Louis N. Whealton of Long Beach, president; J. A. Armitage of Sunset Beach, secretary, and Lou Wallace of Newport, treasurer.

A vice-president will be named by Monrovia. Each Chamber of Commerce along the coast from San Diego to Santa Barbara will be asked to name a member of the executive board.

The organization will memoralize the State Highway Commission to build a real coast road along the California water front, as it is claimed the highway act provides.

Monrovia had the biggest delegation at the banquet, thirty-five coming from there in a special car. J. A. Armitage acted as chairman and other speakers were George Bixby of Long Beach, Lou Wallace of Newport Beach, W. H. Evans, Walter Dunn and R. C. Avery of Monrovia, L. E. Tower of Laguna, L. P. Hart of Huntington Beach, and George Bixby, C. H. Windham, L. N. Whealton and R. L. Bixby of Long Beach.

THE LULUS ARE COMING.

Philadelphia Shriners Mean to Spend Fifty Thousand Dollars on Los Angeles Trip.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Lulu Special for Los Angeles" was the cry this afternoon when 236 members of Lulu Temple left to attend the annual meeting of the Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine of North America. The Arab drill patrol and the Lulu band of sixty pieces were included in the party.

Many members took their wives and intend to make this trip one of the most memorable in their lives. It is estimated more than $50,000 will be spent before the party's return.

It is the intention to distribute souvenirs of Philadelphia at every stopping place through the West. The souvenirs will be useful and instructive and a booklet with the imprint of the liberty bell containing a history of Philadelphia should be most popular.

STEINWAY

—the World's Standard Piano

The Steinway Piano is owned and controlled by the Steinway Family. For four generations it has been made by Steinways, and today it is being made by Steinways. If you were to go to New York tomorrow to interview any of the eight direct descendants of the Steinway Family now actively engaged in the business, you would be obliged to seek out Mr. Fred Steinway at the Factory---where you would find him personally engaged in supervising the construction of Steinway Pianos. You would find Mr. Theodore Steinway there also, and three other members of the Steinway Family. Mr. Charles Steinway, President of the institution, would be at the New York office. Mr. William Steinway would be directing the business of the Company in Europe.

What better testimony could be given to the value of an instrument than the fact that it is produced under the personal supervision of the men whose name it bears—and whose sole aim in life is to maintain the standard of the Steinway—the world's best piano?

Too many instruments of today bear only the NAME of the original makers, who have long since passed beyond—the instrument itself having gone into the hands of other owners, who, instead of maintaining former quality, have commercialized it.

MOTORS AND CANAL BOATS TO DISPLACE THE TRAINS.

Goodrich, Famed Harbor Engineer, Sweeps Aside the Railways for Commerce Between City and Its Port.

A BROAD HIGHWAY OF COMMERCE stretching from the Plaza to the harbor, with crowded canals on either side, their branches and laterals reaching off over the plain, the thoroughfare sustaining an unending traffic of motor-propelled vehicles—this is the picture drawn by Ernest P. Goodrich, famous harbor engineer of New York, under whose direction the plans for the waterfront of Los Angeles are now being drawn. What the Piraeus was to Athens, what Ostia was to Rome, the San Pedro and Wilmington districts are to this city; but, where laden slaves bore burdens from ship to capital and from the thronged emporiums of the classic cities to their seaports, here the auto-truck is to perform the service, while long lines of steel boats will be propelled on artificial waterways to ceaselessly busy factories, conveying the raw material to the looms and mills and bearing away the finished products from the industrial center of Western America.

Municipal railways, privately owned transportation lines—are these the engineer sweeps away with a touch of his hand. The steam railway of today fades into the past before the magic touch of the modern constructionist. Engineer Goodrich points out that these methods are to be replaced by new ones, made possible by the gas engine and electricity. He shows that a railway of the present type must carry freight 150 miles before it has overcome the handicap of terminal charges and he speaks of the advantages presented by the auto-truck, imperfect as its manufacturers still speak of it, as already being so great as to impel him to rely upon that vehicle in planning great industrial enterprises in the East.

Waterways, too, that are of universal use in Europe and the British Isles, are to be utilized as the years go by and modern engineering science takes them up.

INDEPENDENT OF RAILWAYS.

The merchants of the city are to become independent of steam railways or of privately or publicly-owned transportation lines between the harbor and the business center. A procession of auto-trucks will take their place. The grades that are insurmountable for steam become mere child's play to the auto-truck. At Timm's Point there is a 5 per cent. grade. Business men and even engineers said this made it impossible to run teams and freight to the Huntington concession. "Nonsense," Goodrich replies, and he tells them that 5 per cent. is so easily accepted by auto-trucks that he has almost decided to make that a standard, and he speaks of small vehicles of this type overcoming short grades of 20 per cent. The 5 per cent. stretch at Timm's Point is short and this is the point—the grades must not be such as to require the motor propelled machine to try out its powers for too long a period. As for the generality of the grades between the Plaza and the harbor, they are so easy as to make Goodrich exclaim with pleasure: "You have everything you want here."

This apparently gives the city complete control of its harbor without having to share it with corporations of any kind, and without shouldering the burden of building a municipal railroad of tremendous cost and doubtful utility.

DREAM COMING TRUE.

It is four years since The Times first printed a great page picture showing the road between the city and the harbor with hundreds of auto-trucks upon it and steamers lying at the wharves, ready to take away the products of Los Angeles after bringing to these shores the commodities of all the world. Since then on several occasions The Times has shown pictorially and in published facts what the future has in store for the commerce of this city. Now a sober-minded engineer finds nothing impossible, nor even improbable, in what The Times has published. What many called a dream and smiled at as they turned the paper's pages, E. P. Goodrich, eminent in his profession in all the countries of the world, declares to be the certainty that lies just ahead.

The interview that follows was had with Goodrich the afternoon before he started to his eastern home after a week of study of conditions here. He had put in six solid days of industrious research and to his trained understanding the entire situation, physical, political, and commercial, lay before him like an open book. He spoke with decisive sentences, certain of his facts, sure of his plans, and he gave his views without hesitating a moment. The auto-truck and canals will give Los Angeles absolute command of every resource of her harbor, his conclusion.

LOOKS TO MANUFACTURES.

"It seems to me that the harbor should first be developed for miscellaneous commerce, but that eventually its character may so change as to be given over to the handling of imports and for the exports of the manufacturies that will spring up in the neighborhood of this city, as well as for the handling of outgoing coastwise freights," said Goodrich. "In fact, I may say that I am making my plans with this particular point in view; that is the development of the manufacturing possibilities of that wonderfully fine country between the present city proper and the sea, for it is a district especially adapted to that class of work.

"It may be many years before the dream is realized, but the time will come when canals will be constructed from the inner harbor to the mountains. Such canals are to be found in many European countries where use is made of water transportation in almost infinitely greater degree than in this country at the present time. But even now such waterways are being utilized and developed in parts of the United States. I would instance the Erie Canal, which is now being enlarged by the State of New York at a cost of $101,000,000. That the importance of such canals is becoming understood in America is seen, too, in the national congress held annually by the Inland Waterways Association, which convenes solely for the purpose of securing canals and other means of water transportation throughout practically the whole length of the Atlantic Coast. It is intended to construct along the coast and across Florida to the Gulf of Mexico, entirely protected by land on either side, a gigantic canal parallel to the ocean in general.

"Some of the most intensively used portions of New York Harbor were formerly simply creeks, so-called, such as Newtown, Gowanus, over the banks of which more tonnage goes per running foot than over many of the trans-Atlantic liner piers.

EAST BEHINDHAND.

"But not all industries can be served by such extensions of the harbor. They must be connected to the harbor by tracks for the operation of freight cars and by wide thoroughfares, properly paved, for the operation of motor

The Broad City-to-Harbor Auto-Truck Highway

And a glimpse of the canals, the future means of transportation which Goodrich, the expert who is planning the waterfront, declares will give the municipality control there and make Los Angeles independent of the railroads and privately-owned carrying companies. His conclusions indicate that the great thoroughfare, together with gas engines, electricity and waterways will leave no room for a municipal railway.

GREEK THEATER IN THE HILLS.

Gamut Club Plans Open-air Stage for Classics.

Griffith or Elysian Park or the Arroyo Seco.

Two Amphitheaters Proposed by Enthusiasts.

With the sudden and somewhat unexpected acquisition of a large tract of canyon property, consisting of several unmeasured and picturesque acres in a gorge which is an extension of Griffith Park, officers of the Gamut Club announced their intention yesterday to at once erect a club building on the property and construct within a natural amphitheater in the canyon a handsome Greek theater.

The theater is designed for the use of the club in giving musicales, theatricals and open-air entertainments of all kinds during the spring, summer and autumn seasons, and is also projected with the idea of placing it at the disposal of the public as often as the people desire to use it.

Furthermore, the officers stated, the Gamut Club will back a general effort on the part of all in the city who are interested, to locate a large Greek theater at some more central point, where the natural advantages make such an undertaking feasible. They think that possibly an amphitheater at Avenue Fifty-two and Arroyo Seco, some spot in Elysian Park, or even a portion of the old Normal School site might be available for such a purpose.

This would give the city two Greek theaters and one of the two would always meet with any possible public requirement. The Gamut people are enthusiastic on the subject and say the certain success of the theater on their own property would bring the public to a quick appreciation of the fact that the city needs a larger and nearer Greek theater than the one the club contemplates building.

The club regards itself as sustaining the same relation to the city's artistic culture which the Chamber of Commerce holds to the city's industrial and commercial welfare and development. Its capable officers and its 500 members stand ready to do anything they can to boost for the city beautiful and to advance its music and art. They believe that a fine stadium which would seat at least 30,000 persons would be the best possible feature which the city could now develop, and they will work to secure it.

COUNTRY CLUB, TOO.

Their first venture on their own property will be with the idea of holding their monthly entertainments there during the milder weather and to make it a sort of country club for their members, as well. For instance, at their meeting on the evening of May 1 they are to have the German musicians of the city as their special guests. This talent will be conducted by Prof. Henry Schoenefeld, a brilliant composer of world renown who is honored in Berlin and Paris even more than here, where he is one of the heads of the Turn Verein's great singing society. The club wishes it could share this occasion with the city's thousands. This can be done when the Greek theater is built and such a plan can be carried out still more effectively when, by uniting their efforts with those of others, they secure for the city some great central Greek theater, like the stadium at Harvard, the Greek theater at Berkeley or that at Tacoma. They have been rehearsing for two years on a mission play written by Carl Bronson.

MUSICAL BEAN IN BOY'S EAR.

PUTS IT THERE FOR FUN BUT IT TAKES ROOT.

Operating Table, After Week of Suffering, Is Dismal Aftermath of Joke—Lad Grows Deaf, but Can Hear His Violin—So Painful He Can't Touch.

A person may have a bee in his bonnet without any special discomfort or disastrous result, but a bean in the head is different.

Joseph Feder, a 12-year-old school boy, gave Assistant Police Surgeon Carter inside information yesterday on the subject. He spoke from the inmost recess of his ear.

It was a musical bean, and it grew something like the beanstalk that Jack chopped down when the giant pursued him.

Joseph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Feder, No. 542 Crocker street. While playing with some schoolmates a week ago, Joe slipped a bean in one ear. It was a piece of black magic.

It began to sprout. It cost Joe such pain he couldn't bear to touch his ear when the tender roots began to go deep and a green leaf sought the light of day.

The moisture of the wax in Joe's ear gave the bean the opportunity it sought. The swelling thing became firmly embedded in the channel between the outer and inner passages.

It grew and grew. Joe grew deaf. He couldn't hear a conversation. Then he began to experiment. He found he could hear the sounds of his violin.

Music is all right in its place, Joe said, but he wanted to hear something else. Dr. Carter gave him ether and the bean was removed. Joe's going to keep it in alcohol—with the lid on tight.

RECITAL FOR RELIEF CORPS.

Sofia Stephali, the noted mezzo soprano and lecturer, has been secured by the Woman's Relief Corps of Stanton Post, G.A.R., to deliver three concert-lecures in McKinley Hall, Walker Theater building, on April 29 and 30. The first will be on the "Influence of Music," on Monday evening, April 29; "Music and Childhood," Tuesday, April 30, at 3:30 p.m.; "Music and Life," Tuesday evening. She is assisted by Berenice Lathrop, pianist, and the entertainments are most delightfully entertaining and elevating. The patriotic women solicit the patronage of the public that their relief fund may be replenished.

According to the latest figures available, President Taft has 380 delegates to the Republican National Convention which will meet at Chicago June 18 and he will require only 120 to insure his renomination. The Taft strength is calculated by Congressman McKinley, Taft's manager in Washington, and he ought to know whereof he is speaking. His estimates are based on instructed delegations and delegates who, though not instructed, have announced their preference for Taft.

The McKinley claim is wholly irreconcilable with the claim of Senator Dixon, manager of the Roosevelt third term boom. He claims 256 votes for the former President. Likewise he asserts that he bases his estimate on instructed and professed Roosevelt delegates.

La Follette claims 36 votes—no more. He has them in the 26 from Wisconsin and 10 from North Dakota. His claim is indisputable.

The claims of both McKinley and Dixon are doubtful. Up to this writing 598 delegates have been chosen. If we accept McKinley's claim after subtracting the undisputed La Follette vote there are 182 votes left for Roosevelt and the doubtful column. Of this number Cummins has 4. To reconcile the Roosevelt figures with McKinley's means that 636 delegates have been elected, or 38 more than have been. The more the claims are analyzed the leakier they seem.

It is, to a large extent, an unprecedented ante-convention situation. Not since President Arthur sought renomination has there been such a campaign against a President. There is little in the situation four years ago that is helpful in forming a horoscopical estimate of the convention. Although some may take comfort in the fact that four years ago Taft had 702 votes on the first ballot without Wisconsin, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Indiana and New York, and losing 16 votes in his State to Foraker, it is a comfort that is not abiding. Four years ago Taft had the full support of Roosevelt through Federal patronage, through the National Committee, which Roosevelt controlled, and through the Roosevelt personal influence. So "easy" was the situation so far as Taft was concerned, that the votes of Wisconsin for La Follette, of Illinois for Cannon, of Indiana for Fairbanks, of Pennsylvania for Knox and of New York for Hughes, were nothing more than favorite son compliments.

At present the strongest practical point for Taft is the fact that forty of the members of the National Committee, composed of fifty-three members, are for him. This insures his control of the preliminary organization. It will prevent a Roosevelt raid of the seats by the exclusion of regularly elected delegates not in sympathy with the third-termer. Thus if Taft comes to Chicago June 18 with a prima facia majority he will organize the convention and be nominated on the first ballot. If he does not there is still the hope that he can control through the La Follette strength, which perhaps would prefer to participate in a programme with Taft than with Roosevelt.

That La Follette may have a large share in organizing the convention is possible only should he approximate 100 votes. This does not now seem likely. He must carry Washington and California, highly improbable events.

But there is another element that may still more intervene in the organization programme. There are at least 100 uninstructed delegates who represent various States. This count does not include New York's delegation, which is four-fifths without instruction. As the convention nears, these independent delegates may, with clearer vision see the danger of fierce strife in the convention and a struggle that might send the Republican party to the polls next fall hopelessly split and quarreling. This element may intervene with some candidate other than the three present belligerents—perhaps a man not already named—who may anneal all factions after the convention.

Twenty-two years ago the great struggle between Grant, seeking a third term, and James G. Blaine continued for thirty-one ballots before a solitary delegate named James A. Garfield for the place. This delegate voted alone for three ballots but saw his choice nominated on the thirty-sixth.

The Chicago convention of June may present no such struggle. The estimates of McKinley may be approximately correct and his assurance of 185 votes additional for Taft in future elections may be under the mark. But too many delegates are yet to be chosen to take it for granted that Taft will have an easy victory at Chicago.

where delegates have been contested, with or without reason. Even Florida, which elected delegates before Roosevelt announced himself and before the La Follette betrayal was completed, has been put in the Roosevelt contested list. The Roosevelt camp lost no time in engaging a large auditorium in Chicago. This will be useful for a bolters' convention. The Roosevelt headquarters, through Dixon, actually claims that Taft has but fifty-six undisputed votes. If circumstances warrant, it may be expected that every Roosevelt delegate will be in Chicago, contestants and all, when the regular convention assembles, ready for a bolting ticket. This may happen unless Taft has a clear and decisive majority; but even if he has it may still happen. The persistent ego of the third-term camp may insist on running, if only running amuck.

The probability of a La Follette bolt is small, in fact negligible. La Follette has always bowed to the will of the party.

The prevailing opinion east of the Mississippi River is that the President will be renominated on the first ballot at Chicago, bolt or no bolt. That opinion refuses to accept the Illinois and Pennsylvania results as decisive. New York, too, is viewed suspiciously because it is in a strategic position with its ninety delegates, only a few possessing instructions. While New York is for Taft almost unanimously it is in a position to offer successful obstruction to an ultimate Democratic victory in the fall. It is probable that most of Pennsylvania's delegation will be in the same attitude. Thus these two great States may hold back the turbulence that might precipitate a split and offer a new solution of the national problem.

The East knows that Roosevelt cannot be elected. But it fears him as much as a Democrat. Apparently the astute eastern politicians do not intend this time to trust to the Democrats to follow their historic precedent of "doing the wrong thing at the right time." Trustfulness in this habit resulted in the election of seven Democratic Governors in Republican States in 1910. One of these Governors, Woodrow Wilson, has developed enough strength to force the field against him in the fight for the Presidential nomination. Gov. Marshall is "dark horse" timber but his delegation is amenable to Tom Taggart, Indiana's Democratic boss, who is for Harmon first, Clark second and Marshall some other time. The Democrats are bothered by their two-thirds rule which may prevent any of the candidates from having enough to win, even by a straight anti-Wilson combination, which has been so far confined to Clark, Underwood and Harmon. The latter is another of the Democrat Governors, elected in 1910 and he promises to have Ohio's support.

But the most interesting speculation of the Democratic camp is as to the position that William Jennings Bryan will hold in the convention. It is assumed that he will influence one-third of the delegates. If he does he will rule the convention, because neither Wilson nor the Clark-Harmon-Underwood combination can control the other two-thirds. It is true much of the third that Bryan will control will be Wilson men and his control may not help Wilson to a nomination. But it does provide a situation where a nomination for the fourth time can be offered to Bryan.

THE WATCHMAN.

DEATH OF MRS. RHEEM.

Mrs. Samuel J. Rheem, who has been seriously ill for several years, during which time she was smitten with total blindness, died on Friday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Robert Updyke, in South Pasadena, and at the request of the deceased, her remains were cremated in Pasadena yesterday afternoon. During her long illness, her sufferings being beyond description, Mrs. Rheem was as gentle and uncomplaining as if in perfect health, the most common thing to be heard from her lips being compliments for her husband and daughter about twelve years ago.

STRAINED RELATIONS.

Mexican Vice-Consul Fails to Appear to Apologize to American for False Imprisonment.

Senor Francisco Olivares, Mexican Vice-Consul at San Diego, failed to appear in Los Angeles yesterday to apologize for causing the arrest at Tia Juana of James Gainor, a secret service agent of the department of justice.

The last heard of Olivares was that he had not succeeded in getting out of Tia Juana and has not been on this side of the boundary line since the unhappy incident. The apology was suggested by Theodore Frezieres, personal representative of the Madero government in this city. Gainor, Olivares and Frezieres were in the auto that made a quick run from San Diego to Tia Juana during which Gainor was arrested on suspicion of being a spy for the revolutionists. Olivares promised to be on hand but he could not be located yesterday.

WOULD SURPRISE SAN DIEGO.

When Lawrence Hussey and Minnie Bloeser, both of San Diego, went to a justice of the peace yesterday to be married they impressed it particularly upon His Honor to keep the details secret. But the records in the marriage license bureau disclosed the fact. According to one of the clerks, Hussey asked to have the two names withheld in order that he might surprise some of his San Diego friends. He said there was no other motive.

BUSINESS OFFICE AND EDITORIAL ROOMS,

Los Angeles (Loce Ahng-hayl-ais.)

Entered at the Postoffice as mail matter of Class II.

A SYMBOL.

Saturday was Poppy Day at the beautiful town of Van Nuys. The yellow treasures of the fields are nature's golden metaphors of the riches which the hundreds of San Fernando Valley investors are certain to reap.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

A Santa Ana woman who got mad seized a monkey wrench and destroyed two demijohns of wine. This is an example for men to follow. The average man who gets angry or blue or who has his feelings hurt in any way does not use a monkey wrench in destroying his favorite poison.

ITS DEADLY WORK.

The lighted cigar stump has again proved itself the enemy of society. Somebody tossed one away in a local theater and, except for its modern fire apparatus, the building might have been destroyed before the incipient blaze was discovered. Smokers should adopt the motto: "Be sure it is out, then go ahead."

STANDING ON PRINCIPLE.

A woman in South Pasadena who had been duly registered, but whose papers had not been properly returned, "swore in" her vote at the polls and thus availed herself of her rightful voice in the selection of municipal officers. This is the right American spirit. She had only one vote, but as a good citizen it was of inestimable value to her and to her municipality.

LEST WE FORGET.

Automobile owners in the city and county in dating themselves and their machines for the future must not forget that they have an engagement with themselves and with The Times to take the babies of Los Angeles to the beach on the afternoon of May 1. The spa will be glad to see the tots, and the little people will be glad to see the sea. It is going to be a high tide of gladness for everybody associated with the kindly enterprise.

FOOLISHNESS.

It has been said that there is no fool like an old fool, but this is wrong. A preacher who is a fool is the biggest fool on earth because he has a pulpit from which to advertise his empty head. A preacher in the South is out for the prize for fools when he says that the Titanic disaster was a judgment of the Lord on brave Col. Astor for having married where his heart led him. The limit must have been taken off for fools when this one conceived that the Almighty would have to destroy 1600 lives in order to punish one man.

UP TO YOU.

Local students of metaphysics will hold their spring festival at Blanchard Hall on the afternoon and evening of May 1 and the "New Thoughters" of the United States will hold their annual convention in this city in June. Residents will not find it necessary to secure permits to carry firearms on either occasion. The visitors may sometimes speak in a strange tongue in which they will use many words to say much or little, but they will always mean the same thing, and that is that the sum of life for every man is in himself and it is up to him to get it out.

IT'S IN THE AIR.

The city of Phoenix, Ariz., has decided to sell its Courthouse and its City Hall properties and bring these public buildings together at some sort of municipal center. This is entirely sensible. Phoenix is simply feeling the undeniable demand of all growing cities for a public-service center. Los Angeles may delay in having the City Hall located near the Courthouse, Hall of Records, Hall of Justice and Federal building as long as there are any speculators to fight against it; but in the end it will be demonstrated clearly enough that this is the one logical site.

MORE LIFEBOATS.

There ought to be a law requiring that every passenger-carrying ocean steamship have a supply of lifeboats sufficient to accommodate her passengers and crew, in case of an accident. Every vessel before leaving her dock should be inspected by a government official and not permitted to go to sea unless fully provided with a life-saving equipment.

The Titanic did not sink for four hours after striking the iceberg. The sea was calm, and had there been a supply of lifeboats and rafts, or even material out of which rafts could have been hastily constructed, the appalling loss of life could not have occurred.

IMPATIENCE.

A young man charged with a trifling theft from the United States mail has fallen heir to a large fortune. Whether guilty or innocent, he must now stand trial. A few months ago two prominent young persons of Los Angeles eloped to the Orient, returning to find that the death of the woman's husband had opened the gate to them to the life of their choice. It is a curious fact that persons who strain the law and compromise themselves to accomplish some desire often find that had they waited for the plan of their lives to mature time would have brought them the object of their wishes in a less difficult manner. Life is something like poker in that it can only be played safely by waiting for a good hand. The impatient who insist upon trying to force their luck pay a sad price for their mettle

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Everyone who witnessed the scenes of bliss attendant upon last May Day's joy-ride given to poor children by generous automobile owners of Los Angeles and Pasadena, in co-operation with The Times, will wish to promote the repetition of the treat on the first of May next. Hundreds of orphans and children of the poor rode in a motorcar for the first time on May 1, 1911, and had a glorious day at the beach. Their delight was indescribable; and a month ago some of them began to inquire if they were to have another ride this year.

Yes, indeedy!

A festivity that brightened so many young lives cannot be forgotten or passed over; it must be an annual event. Plans are already in progress for next May Day's excursion, and many assurances that cars will be contributed have been received by The Times. These points are to be remembered:

It is to be a ride for poor children only—the poor children of the orphanages and hospitals and schools in poor neighborhoods.

It is to be given by warm-hearted men and women who will loan their motorcars. The Times merely organizes the ride—contributing, of course, its share of the automobiles.

A trip will be made to the seaside and all the amusements will be made available.

An excellent system has been devised and those wishing to join in the happiness by contributing cars will soon be asked to send in their names.

No stirring appeal is needed to make this plan "go." The idea is its own appeal. Friends, you are asked to help bring sunshine to somber young lives—that is all! There will be a bright and rejoicing parade, and hundreds of automobiles will be in it. What an appropriate celebration of May Day it will be—every boy in the joy-ride a king and every girl a queen! The lame and the halt will not walk—they will ride; and the dumb little ones will lift up their hearts in songs of gladness.

NO BOURNE.

Hamlet speaks of "a country from whose bourne no traveler returns." The result of the election in Oregon on Friday last has established the fact that to the United States Senate no Bourne will return. Senator Bourne of Oregon himself contributed to this result. In reply to the earnest solicitations of his constituents to return to the Webfoot State and conduct a canvass for re-election, he replied in the phrase of a gifted Rooseveltian dialectician: "Not on your blooming life. I ante no dough on such a skin game." He replied that by the ability he had displayed as a Senator he had more than repaid the people of Oregon for electing him. He said that so far from his now being indebted to the Oregonians, they are indebted to him. He said that there is a big balance in his favor. He said that it was more to the interest of the people of Oregon to elect him than it was to his interest to serve for a pittance of $7500 a year, $1200 mileage, $1200 clerk hire, stationery, stamps, and such windfalls as often tumble into the paths of a Senator. He said that in the election which was held on Friday last the intelligence of the people of Oregon would be on trial. He said that if they voted for somebody else for Senator they would demonstrate that they were what Roosevelt said the people of Illinois were when they elected Altgeld—"unfit for self-government."

Senator Bourne would not take a Goebel prize for that shrinking modesty which is said to become a woman, but to be utterly ruinous to a man. He exhibited a self-appreciativeness which is only equalled by that of the turkey gobbler who struts down the barnyard on a sunshiny morning and calls upon all members of the feathered tribe to admire his broad-spread narrative.

There are seven great egotists in this beloved country of ours. Col. Roosevelt is one, Gov. Johnson is one, F. B. Heney is two, and Senator Bourne is the other three.

The people of Oregon fulfilled the prediction of Bourne. They voted to supersede him with Ben Selling, a Portland merchant who sells coats and vests at reduced prices and pants for a toga. Thus they demonstrated their unfitness for self-government.

AS TO SPECIAL PRIVILEGE.

The cry of special privilege is often raised by those who imagine that in the battle of life they are not being given a square deal. From the behavior of the unexcited individual under normal conditions one cannot always foresee how any one will act in moments of crisis, danger or unexpected trial. A terrible ordeal, like that experienced on board the doomed Titanic during her last hours, reveals the real man in a flash. It also emphasizes the special privileges that go with rank, strength and fortune.

There are some natures cast in such a heroic mold that of their actions under any and every possible combination of circumstances no one who has ever met them or known them could ever harbor the slightest doubt or misgiving. They would always stand for righteousness. Of such are the Kingdom of Heaven—and of such was that great, good, noble-hearted American soldier, Maj. Archibald Butt. That he would always be the same, calm and collected in face of danger, able and willing when the occasion demanded, fearless and utterly regardless of self, certain to preserve his poise, should death be in one scale and duty in the other—this was as certain as the rising of the sun or the motions of the tides. As his well-loved friend, the President of this great nation, said of him: "He was a man to the last, soldier through and through." He died as he had lived, an ideal for every Christian.

Another heroic figure will rise before the imagination whenever any mention shall be made of the world's greatest ocean tragedy—that of Col. John Jacob Astor, tenderly kissing his young bride as he placed her safely in the boat with the cheery good-by words: "I will see you again in New York, dearie." And yet he knew all the time that the last lifeboat had even then been launched and that the ship beneath his feet was slowly sinking. This man, with everything to make life sweet for him, with enough of this world's goods to buy up a dozen steamship lines, would seek no safety for himself while on the sinking ship one poorest woman in the steerage might possibly be left behind to drown.

If there be such a thing as special privilege—one law for the strong and another for the weak—it was shown on that vessel of death and baptized in the icy waters of the North Atlantic. There was the privilege of gallant Capt. Smith with his forty years of faithful service, to meet the death on the bridge of his ship like the old Roman that he was. He did not shrink from exercising this prerogative, denied to the humblest deckhand on board. There was the privilege of the brilliant American soldier, Maj. Butt, and others like him, to stand aside and succor the weak and helpless and wave a kindly good-by and Godspeed to each boat as it put off; and to stay behind and die. This was the special privilege of the soldier and there was no faltering in Maj. Butt. Those on the boats who saw the last of this brave man, standing with his arms folded and going down to death like an officer on dress parade, declare it one of the sublimest sights that ever brought tears to human eyes.

The privilege of one of the world's richest men to care first for the safety and comfort of his bride, and after that for every woman and child needing assistance, and after that to light a cigarette and with affected calmness meet the inevitable; if this was his special privilege as a gentleman, then Col. Astor was true to the honor of his order and played his part to the bitter finish.

Nor should we forget the privilege of that whole gallant British crew, quietly and steadfastly to obey each order received; and when everything had been done that was humanly possible for the passengers committed to their charge, to face the end without panic and without disorder.

If these be some of the special privileges of the brave, the strong, the wealthy and the well-disciplined, then we pray that the day of absolute equality may be far distant that is going to rob us of so priceless a heritage.

PARCELS POST DELIVERY.

Under existing postal laws the free delivery of mail matter is confined to incorporated cities, villages and boroughs containing a population of 50,000 within the corporate limits, and to every place containing a population of not less than 10,000 within its corporate limits, or to any postoffice which provides a gross revenue not less than $10,000 and to the rural free delivery service.

An amendment to the postal laws now under consideration in Congress provides for an experimental mail delivery in towns and villages having postoffices of the second and third class that are not by law now entitled to free delivery service. If the bill passes it will give free delivery to towns having a population of 1000 or more.

Our parcels post, or transmission by mail of registered third-class matter not exceeding four pounds in weight, is inferior to that of Europe. By international agreement a package weighing eleven pounds can be sent from Los Angeles to London at a cost of 12 cents per pound. The same matter if sent to Riverside by registered mail would have to be divided into three packages and would cost 16 cents per pound. If incapable of such division it could not be sent at all by mail.

The establishment of a parcels-post system, such as exists in Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy and Austria, would be of the greatest benefit to everybody except the stockholders in the express companies, whose dividends would be slightly reduced. Nor would a parcels-post system injuriously affect the country merchants as some of them imagine. The country merchant has in some particulars the advantage of the city merchant. His rent is less, his clerk hire no more. His customers come to his store to trade and carry away their goods, while the city merchant is put to the cost of maintaining a delivery wagon. Telephone service is now extended to farming neighborhoods. With a parcels post and an extension of the rural-free-delivery system the customers of the country merchant can telephone their orders and Uncle Sam will deliver the goods at a cheaper rate of transportation than can be afforded by private enterprise.

The pending parcels-post bill is subject to one serious objection. It is proposed to condemn and purchase the franchises of the express companies and to cause them to be operated under the powers conferred upon the Postoffice Department. This would cost an enormous amount of money. The balance-sheet statements of the thirteen express companies of June 30, 1910, show that their property was of the estimated value of $304,710,086.61, of which over thirty-two millions was for property used in operating, and eleven millions was the estimated value of the "good will" of their business.

There seems to be no sufficient reason why the government should pay for the "good will" of a parcels-delivery business. If the Navy Department should establish a shipbuilding plant on Puget Sound for the construction of government gunboats and revenue cutters it could hardly be called upon to buy the "good will" of the existing shipyards. If the Interior Department should be authorized to build wagon roads and to construct steam crushers and rollers for the work it would not be expected that it should buy the good will of the makers of the snorting, horse-frightening monsters that now enliven our highways.

POINTING THE WAY.

The city has entertained many Knights Templars from different portions of the State the past week on their way to and from the grand council held at San Diego. Local Masons filled them with enthusiasm about the great imperial council of the Shriners to be held here next month. San Diego, with a radiant scheme of dazzling lights and overflow of colors, set Los Angeles a shining example. Every central block in our charming southern neighbor city has been ablaze with flags and with brilliant electric designs. She arose to the occasion with the grace and generosity of truly elaborate entertainment. As an example of what may be expected of San Diego in the rush of visitors to the State in 1915 her enterprise in the present instance heartily commends itself. Viewed from the sea by night the lighted city has afforded a superb spectacle to those aboard approaching vessels.

SOME TIMELY QUOTATIONS.

Our government would be less corrupt if all the lobbies in the Legislatures of the various States were constructed of glass, so that all might see the men who are trying to influence legislation.—[Woodrow Wilson.

I would hazard a guess that not more than 5 or 10 per cent. of the members of the House are in any way connected with any corporation which could possibly have any interest in legislation by Congress.—[Speaker Champ Clark.

If any of the great powers, such as Germany or Russia, should decide to seize the Philippines, I would allow them to do so, but the ownership of the islands would be one of the things to be considered after the close of the war.—[Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs.

Hours of labor in the steel mills of this country grew up with the industry; they were not established by us, and we cannot change them all at once.—[Elbert H. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation.

If the Congressional Record should be suppressed Munchausen's record of travels would be mild in comparison with the newspaper accounts of the proceedings of Congress.—[Senator Heyburn.

Still Believes in Santa Claus.

[Detroit Free Press:] Andy Carnegie says he knows nothing of any steel trust. Andy must wonder where those dividends are coming from, then?

NATURE STORIES

Effect of Fear on Birds.

[Rural Life:] Birds are wonderfully acted upon by fear. Darwin has said, "No discontented animal reproduces itself." It is equally noticeable that no animal or bird that is affected by fear will reproduce itself.

This is the case in all orders of animal life. When an animal or bird is frightened it never recovers from it, as is seen in the case of a horse when frightened somewhere on the road; it always keeps in memory the source and location of its scare. Sheep that are once frightened by dogs never do well afterward; so with the birds when they have been pursued by the hunter on their feeding or breeding grounds; they never return to that spot again.

This element of fear, which so acts upon the bird is still more effective in insect life. It is not so much the number of insects that are killed or eaten by the birds as it is the active principle of fear, and that element of life called self-preservation, which the bird creates and incites in all lower orders of insect life that prevents the insect from reproducing, and this is what the bird indirectly accomplishes, and is the greatest purpose of its existence.

Insect life has no particular fear of man. It appears to be endowed with a consciousness that man is unable to cope with it, or to observe its presence or increase; it recognizes only the bird as its natural enemy and source of destruction.

How Animals Feed.

[Everyday Life:] When one thinks of the many curious ways in which common animals partake of their food, one realizes more than ever the vast difference there is between classes in the creature kingdom.

For instance, the squirrel carries its food to its mouth by means of its paws, while the elephant uses its trunk. The giraffe, ant-eater and toad employ their tongues, but spiders masticate their food with horny jaws.

The caterpillar is provided with saw-edged jaws, and uses them so well that every day he consumes at least three times his own weight in food. Toads, turtles and tortoises do not possess teeth.

Frogs have only an upper row of teeth and lobsters and crabs have a set of teeth in their stomachs. The tiger and the lion do not grind their food as we humans do; as a matter of fact, their teeth only work with an up-and-down movement much like chopping-knives.

STREAKS OF WIT.

Had Suspicions.

[Boston Transcript:] Fortune Teller: You wish to know something about your future husband?

Customer: No, I don't. I want to know about the past of my present husband.

An Imputation.

[Cleveland Leader:] His Proverb: "There's a proverb that fits every man."

"What one fits me?"

"'To whom God gives office, he also gives brains.'"

"But I have no office."

"Well?"

Safer Than Counterfeiting.

[Louisville Courier-Journal:] "Let's get up a revolution."

"What's the use? Even if we grab the government there's no money in the treasury."

"Well, can't we make money out of the moving-picture rights?"

A Fast Life for Him.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] He was downcast. He was sad.

"What's the trouble?"

"She has spurned my love."

"Too bad."

"I have nothing left to live for."

"Oh, yes, you have. You have an automobile."

Learn Him Something.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] "Poets are born and not made," said the young man with the pale, interesting face and the long hair.

"Are they?" replied his wife. "Well, I'll show you that they are made sometimes. I'll make you watch the baby while I go shopping this morning or you shall never have another dollar that my father sends to me."

Relieving the Curious.

[Detroit Free Press:] "Why don't you put a 'wet paint' sign on your porch?"

"Not much. I did that last year, and all who passed rubbed their fingers over it to see if it really was. This year I'm taking no chances."

Took a Mean Advantage.

[Judge:] Penelope: If you loved him, why did you refuse him at first?

Ariadne: I wanted to see how he would act.

Penelope: But he might have rushed off without waiting for an explanation.

Ariadne: Oh, but I had the door locked.

An All-Around Girl.

[Kansas City Journal:] "Well, the summer flirts will soon be playing their favorite game."

"True. Where is your daughter now."

"Gone South for preliminary practice."

A Different Thing.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] "I don't see why she should get cross because he said her face was like a picture."

"He didn't say that exactly. He said it reminded him of a painting."

In the By and By.

[Puck:] Mrs. Willis: I suppose that in heaven we will be disappointed in not finding certain people there.

Mrs. Gillis: Yes. But we'll be more disappointed at finding certain other people there.

Are Bargain Hunters.

[Yonkers Statesman:] She: Well, I just guess if women voted you wouldn't see 'em going around selling their votes for a dollar.

He: No, you're right, dear. They'd probably ask only 98 cents.

Clear-Headed and in Good Temper.

[Philadelphia Bulletin:] The President loses neither his head nor his temper in any of his public utterances. Not a sentence bears the marks of threatening, of harsh, splenetic criticism, of foolish vexation, of vanity, or of jealousy. An absence of those undesirable qualities of mind and heart may be ascribed to his speeches at all times. The impression which he makes as a man of justice in his thought and aims, as well as an American gentleman in his contact with his fellow-citizens or in passing judgment upon those with whom he differs, has been distinctly strengthened by his public talks and their clear-headed and also cheerful common sense.

Has Begun to Improve.

[New York Tribune:] The Pinchot brothers will now probably concede that Senator La Follette is able to get about on a crutch.

Fen Points: By the Staff.

Lodges of Survivors of the Whisker can be ing organized in the East.

Oh, no, Col. Roosevelt did not start too late; he is about three years too soon.

It will keep the new President of China very busy serving one consecutive term.

Of course, if Diaz should return to Mexico, the next term would not be consecutive.

Speaking of combinations in restraint of trade, how about the United Mine Workers of America?

Col. Roosevelt is "appealing to the people." Thought he was waiting for the people to appeal to him.

How discouraging it must be for you to arrive home in a friend's auto and have none of the neighbors see you.

If some of the fashions for women are going to be what is indicated by Lucile news from Paris men will have to wear blinders.

The wife of Candidate La Follette will stump California for her husband's candidacy. Why don't you speak for yourself, Francis Marion?

Gov. Hadley says he is not a candidate for the Presidency. And there is nothing for us to do but grin and bear it. But it is hard, oh, so hard!

There is a man out Moneta way who claims that he has undergone more than twenty surgical operations. He must be the regular village cut-up.

There are indications that the Tariff Board is preparing to make a flying leap over the Democratic band-wagon. It has been doing pretty good work for them.

A current magazine has a picture of a raft of cocoanuts being floated to market in the Philippines. A sort of milk and water affair, we should say.

A leaflet on the subject of "tick eradication" has just been issued by the government. Why not try charging interest on accounts? That ought to help some.

The New York Legislature has received its endorsement of the income tax. Other similar bodies will follow suit before Congress is called to act upon the proposition.

It would give some relief to the local situation if some of the people who wear their pussy-cat hats would toss them into the ring and then give the excited populace a chance.

Andrew Carnegie financed the Roosevelt jungle trip, but he favors the renomination of Taft. He would probably be willing to put up again if the Colonel would agree to leave soon.

The Carlisle Indian School has a mandolin club composed entirely of young women. We never understood that Minnehaha or Laughing Water ever played on that instrument of torture.

So many California folks are watching the baseball score that they are not much sort of interest in the efforts of Col. Roosevelt to capture the State. Besides, they are satisfied with Taft.

An eclipse of the sun in London, plunging the city midnight darkness at noon, is reported. What was it the wise Indian said about the Lord being afraid to trust an Englishman in the dark?

The gardening season comes early in Texas, thus enabling Col. Bryan to get his onion crop laid by before he is compelled to go to Baltimore and arrange things for the esteemed Democratic party.

The French Minister of Commerce has been petitioned to wage a war on high dresses; but there are some things that even a French Cabinet Minister will not tackle; and this one of them.

Secretary Knox is at home from his trip to the South American republics. It ought to be loaded down with valuable information secured at first hand for use in the settlement of some very vexed questions.

The first official steps to settle the Tripoli-Italian war have been taken. Oh, yes, that war started about the time that the Lorimer investigation began its weary lap, just before the stone age was covered in.

The price of gasoline is advancing and the owners of machines will have to move much faster to keep ahead of the advance and come anywhere near playing even with Rockefeller. What an ideal thing the dissolution of the Standard oil trust was, after all!

One of the new Arizona United States Senators, Henry F. Ashurst, is but 33 years of age. He left home at 15 to become a cowboy and he has been a cowboy, bell carrier, deputy sheriff, lumberjack, law student and legislator. It is believed that he will soon learn to saw wood.

The Legislature of Mississippi has asked Senator Percy to resign because he received but 21,521 votes out of 182,661 cast in a recent primary. If the Democrats of that State are becoming particular about figures how about the eight Congressmen it elected in 1910 with a total vote of only 53,000?

It is already here, the panic. To the male mind it is not exactly clear what a pannier is, but fashion tells us it is the forerunner of crinoline and designed to push the hobble skirt off the map and out of the way for the good old bloomers of our grandmothers, contrivances so broad it was necessary to charter a locomotive to transport the wearer from place to place without disarranging her gown.

A QUATRAIN.

Berthene is mistress of the arts,
In her both charm and genius are shown;
For when she steals her neighbor's hearts
She takes good care to steal her own.

On March 31 the steel corporation had unfilled orders for 5,304,841 tons on its books, nearly 2,000,000 tons more than it had one year previously. AMERICAN BUSINESS.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

American business in exporting our products will break all records this fiscal year (closing June 30.) The country's sent abroad will reach nearly 12,000,000 bales, and be approximately 2,000,000 bales greater than in any prior fiscal year, reports the Bureau of Statistics. This is proven by the export record for the nine months ended March 31, 1912, being 7,418,- 217 bales, against 5,706,469 bales in the same months of 1906-7, the previous high record year. Our chief controversy is each nine months' period were:

	9 mos. ending March, 1911. Bales.	1912. Bales.
United Kingdom	2,146,251	3,767,170
Germany	1,402,021	2,721,324
France	944,053	1,662,226
Italy	847,294	997,297
Spain	178,359	244,240
Japan	142,512	304,326
China	120	68,089
Other countries		41,665

These exports of cotton to India and China are remarkable as the former country is the second largest cotton-producing country in the world and China stands third. The fact that the 1912 price was lower than that of 1911 accounts for the large increase in shipments to Japan, as that country always buys large quantities when prices of low-priced cotton. The total of the 1912 nine months' exports was $194,979,030, the average price being 10 cents per pound, while 11½ cents in 1911.

Since August, 1909, our trade with the Philippines has more than doubled. Here are the comparative figures of Statistics' figures:

The United States Steel Corporation is operating at the highest production rate in its history—16,000,000 gross tons per annum, or about 2,000,000 tons in excess of its record. Leading independent steel companies also show substantial gain. On March 31 the steel corporation had unfilled orders for 5,304,241 tons on its books, nearly 2,000,000 tons more than it had one year previously. The old proverb, "When iron is busy all trade is busy," still holds good.

South Coast exports have largely increased. Here are the figures for eight months ended February, 1911 and 1912:

	$20,891,200

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Harbor Commission will inspect all vessels arriving at the harbor and will report to the United States Supervising Inspector all infractions of the life-saving laws.

The Board of Public Works has asked the contractor to explain differences between the new treasury vault and the specifications.

P. M. Johnson yesterday telegraphed from New York resigning as Public Service Commissioner.

Tax Collector Taggart wants city employees to be prevented from accepting passes to any kind of shows and ball games.

Beatrice Anita Baldwin, who lost out in her efforts to gain a share of the millions of the late E. J. 'Lucky' Baldwin, whose daughter she asserts she is, is in an eastern sanitorium and a petition for a rehearing of the case was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday.

At the City Hall.

HARBOR BOARD TO PROTECT LIVES.

MARINE LAW INFRACTIONS TO BE REPORTED.

Federal Supervisin: Inspector Has Been Asked for Copies of Regulations With Regard to Lifeboats as Prescribed by Drastic United States Laws in Force.

There will be no Titanic disasters on vessels trading with the harbor of Los Angeles, if the plans of the Harbor Commission are carried out. It is intended to have the United States regulations carried out to the fullest extent here and inspection at the harbor on this subject will be in the hands of the port warden or of some other official to be decided upon later. The day the news was received of the loss of the Titanic with the small number of lifeboats aboard, the Harbor Commission took action and Secretary Fleming wrote to Supervising Inspector of Ships and Hulls Bulger, at San Francisco, asking him for a copy of the regulations prescribed by the United States Board of Engineers.

"We have not received a reply as yet," said Fleming yesterday. "When it arrives, we shall see that every vessel arriving at the harbor or leaving it complies with those regulations."

Councilman Reed appeared at the City Hall yesterday with resolutions asking Congress to prescribe international marine laws for the safety of passengers, but it was pointed out that under section 132, part VIII, of the navigation laws of the United States, all vessels, without reservations to nationality, navigating the ocean, bays, sounds or great lakes of this country, must provide elaborate life-saving equipment, to the extent of a sufficient number of lifeboats, rafts and preservers, as well as line-propelling devices as prescribed by the Board of Supervising Engineers. Disobedience is punished by fine or imprisonment.

"I can't see that this city has any occasion to tell the United States to do what it has already done," said Betkouski.

NOT AS ORDERED.
TREASURY VAULT FAULTS.

Trouble is in store for the Mosler Safe Company, which took the contract to furnish the city with the great vault now being installed in the City Treasury. The Board of Public Works declares that the work is not according to specifications. The board, at its meeting yesterday morning, received a formal report from the inspector, detailed to examine the vault, and immediately directed Secretary Ferris to write to the safe company and ask for an explanation.

"The specifications," the inspector said, "call for all plate edges abutting or otherwise joining to fit without crevice. Some of the joints, a record of which is being kept, show that little regard was given to that clause in the specifications."

This, it was pointed out, might not affect the burglar-proof quality of the vault, but it was not as required by the contract.

"The specifications call for certain parts to be polished and draw-filed," the inspector continued. "I beg to state that draw-filing is expensive. The finished work does not show this character of finish but shows, instead, wheel polishing and other cheaper work."

To File Charges Later.

Attorney Paul Stewart said yesterday that he would not file his charges of inefficiency and incompetency against the Board of Public Utility until after the hearing of the accusation against his brother, A. T. Stewart, late engineering expert of the board, before Justice Forbes, next Tuesday. He said they would be in detail and would be capable of being proved to be true in every case.

Mayor Has Another Vacancy.

P. M. Johnson, member of the Public Service Commission, telegraphed from New York to Mayor Alexander yesterday morning, resigning his place on the commission. He sailed for Europe yesterday evening. This leaves only former Senator Del Valle and A. N. Davidson of the old board, as members of the new one. Alexander, as usual, said he had no one in mind for the vacancy.

Johnson's friends have no idea why he resigned, although it was suggested that he did not care to be mixed up with changes that may follow the installation of the new board.

City Hall Briefs.

The Board of Public Works will appear before the Public Service Committee of the City Council next Thursday, as requested, in connection with the aqueduct power commissary contract, but it will not admit. Chairman Hubbard said yesterday, that any other department of the city has the responsibility for that contract. Hence it will insist that the letting of the contract belongs exclusively to the Board of Public Works.

W. C. Steckel, desk clerk in the Street Department, has been appointed secretary to Inspector Hansen of the Board of Public Works at a salary of $140 a month.

Secretary Fleming of the Harbor Commission said yesterday that he feared the Titanic inquiry would delay consideration of the Los Angeles harbor report at Washington.

Tax Collector Taggart has written a request to the City Council that it adopt an ordinance under which it shall be unlawful to give to any city employee a pass to a show of any kind or to a ball game, and unlawful for any such employee to accept one. He proposes a penalty of six months' imprisonment or $200 fine for each offense.

TURFMAN'S ALLEGED DAUGHTER IN SANATORIUM.

Petition for Rehearing of Famous Case Is Filed With Supreme Court. Attorney for Claimant Refuses to Discuss Young Woman's Condition. Long Trial.

Beatrice Anita Baldwin, whose fight for a share of the millions left by E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, whose daughter she says she is, ended in defeat, is in an eastern sanatorium. This was admitted by Attorney Dockwieler yesterday. He declined to discuss the matter.

A petition for a rehearing was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday, according to Dockweiler, who stated the principal grounds are that the Supreme Court failed in its opinion affirming the lower court to state all the facts; that it made certain misstatements and that the intepretation of the law applicable to the case is not correct.

The opinion was written by Justice Henshaw and concurred in by Angellotti, Shaw, Lorigan, Melvin and Beatty, a unanimous bench. A copy has just reached this city and members of the bar have been congratulating Judge Rives, who tried the case.

Judge Rives withdrew the case from the consideration of the jury and directed the latter to return a verdict for the contestants, stating the reason therefore to be that "as matter of law the evidence in this case falls far short of the requirements necessary to constitute a marriage."

Judge Rives held and the Supreme Court concurred that evidence to be substantial must be humanly credible. The claimant sought to establish the fact that a marriage had taken place between her mother and Baldwin, and the battle was hotly fought for three months.

TICKLISH POINTS.
STRANGE INSURANCE SUIT.

The suit of Helen Podurgiel, a minor, against the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters, to recover a $3000 policy on the life of her father, Stephen T. Podurgiel, has evolved a nice question of law and raised interesting points in a unique case.

The action is being tried before Judge Houser and the evidence shows that Podurgiel, at the time he obtained the insurance, made Mrs. Podurgiel and his child beneficiaries, although he was not married to the woman. The company asserted that he made false representations in the application for medical examination as to his health which makes the policy void under the rules of the order.

After Podurgiel died, a guardian was appointed for the child and the whole question in the case turns on whether or not the child has been legally served with the notice of rejection. The rules of the order provide that the claim must be presented first to the Supreme Chief Ranger and if rejected, it goes to the board of arbitration.

It is alleged that the claim was rejected and Mrs. Podurgiel notified. An attempt was made to serve the guardian. The letter was addressed to the latter, a subsidiary institution of the German American Savings Bank, and received by the main bank.

AS DOCTOR ORDERED.
DEATH DESTROYS HER FEAR.

Mrs. Ines G. McLain in a complaint filed yesterday to cancel a deed on homestead, alleged that she executed and delivered to her husband, the late Dr. W. R. T. McLain, the warranty deed under threats of death. The suit is against Clara Enyeart, administratrix of Dr. McLain's estate, Margaret McLain and others, names unknown. She is represented by Attorney Sorenson.

The McLains were married July 10, 1899. On August 26, 1906, Mrs. McLain states, she executed and acknowledged a declaration of homestead on the community property at No. 1928 Park Grove avenue, this city. When Dr. McLain discovered this October 28, 1907, Mrs. McLain alleges that in a fit of rage he demanded she deliver the warranty deed to him, together with the abandonment of the homestead, threatening to kill her and ruin her reputation if she did not do so, at the time pulling out a 44-caliber revolver.

The alleged frenzy of her husband terrified Mrs. McLain, she declares, and resulted in mental incapacity and while under this fear, she did as the doctor ordered. Dr. McLain died last January, and now Mrs. McLain seeks to recover the deed on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, undue influence and coercion.

DACKS JURISDICTION.
CONVEYANCE PRECEDES DEATH.

Judge Rives decided an interesting point involving the distribution of the estate of William McKenzie, aggregating $100,000, when he found that the Probate Court has no jurisdiction to determine the validity of a trust conveyance made prior to the death of the decedent.

It seems that shortly before McKenzie died, he executed a deed of trust to the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank. Under that deed, the income was to be applied in various ways for the education of his grandchildren. During his life it was to be paid to him. He died not long after the deed was made, and it was found that about $1300 had accrued up to the time of his death.

The trust company filed its final account. Miss Mary McKenzie filed a contest and objection, holding that the trust deed was invalid and that the administration account for the property as part of the estate.

GENEROSITY HAS STRINGS.
WIFE ON VISIT, HUSBAND SUES.

Mrs. Emma C. Sohn filed suit for separate maintenance yesterday on the ground that her husband has failed to provide for her for more than a year.

She alleges Sohn sent her East on a visit and prevailed on her to stay there under various pretexts, meantime bringing suit for divorce on the ground of desertion. In her behalf, Attorney Evans filed an answer and obtained an order to show cause and last October when the hearing was called, Sohn dismissed the case.

Evans obtained an order to show cause in the present action from Judge Willis yesterday returnable in Department Six on the 29th inst. Mrs. Sohn asks the court to allow her $50 a month for her support. The couple were married April 26, 1905, in this city, Sohn until recently was an optician and jeweler at Ocean Park. He now lives in Ontario.

With Court's Blessing.

Judge Monroe united in marriage Eugene Joseph Stillings, aged 25, and Edith Martha Denny, 19 years old, with neatness and dispatch yesterday. The couple wandered into Department Six and after a whispered explanation to Bailiff Burdie, they stood before the bench. The words were pronounced which made them man and wife.

"You are married now," remarked the court, "and I don't want to see you in this court again. You have my blessing for a happy married life."

Stillings is employed at the Cudahy Packing Company. Mrs. Stillings was formerly a maid at the Van Nuys.

Her Erring Husband.

Mrs. Bertha T. Flanigan was divorced from D. W. Flanigan in a brief proceeding before Judge Monroe yesterday. Flanigan eloped with Miss Florence Cole, after the sensational arrest of the latter on the complaint of Mrs. Flanigan for contributing to the dependency of Flanigan's children. She was placed under bond, and since the flight her sureties have been making every effort to locate the couple.

DANDIES AREN'T WHAT THEY SEEM.

CHAUFFEURS HIDE BADGES TO LOOK LIKE OWNERS.

Helen Gould's Driver Is Arrested for Not Displaying Emblem, and Forfeits Bail—Court Passes Over Name of Near-Celebrity Without Recognition—Practices.

T. J. Langton, chauffeur for Miss Helen Gould who is visiting in Pasadena, forfeited $5 bail in Police Judge Rose's court yesterday. He was arrested on South Broadway by Traffic Patrolman Robbins for not exposing his badge in a conspicuous place.

When his case was called, and he did not make an appearance, the justice declared Langton's bail forfeited, and passed on to the next case. Neither Justice Rose nor the other attachees of his court knew who the young man is.

The complaint was issued by Deputy City Prosecutor Nimmo. He said:

"We find that many of the young men arrested for not exposing their badges, conceal them purposely. They want people to think they are wealthy and are driving their own car. If a badge is seen on their gauntlet or coat it indicates they are hired to drive the car. I do not say Langton was trying to make any such impression. The probabilities are he did not know the law requires the badge to be exposed at all times to public view."

BANK PAYS LICENSE.
NEGLECTS IT TWO YEARS

Officials of the Los Angeles Hibernian Savings Bank, who for more than two years refused and neglected to pay their license, escaped prosecution yesterday by complying with the law. A complaint was sworn to by Inspector McPhillips. He said: "The company up to this time had never paid a cent of license. When I demanded a compliance with the law, the officials refused, saying they intended fighting the case. Then I swore to a complaint. When they found I meant business they paid the license, amounting to $155.42. I then moved before Justice Chesebro that the case be dismissed, and it was done this morning."

The bank officials asserted they were waiting for some one to come around and get their license.

NOT WANTED HERE.
"FLOATER" FOR A STRIKER.

William Ward, an ironworker whom the officers declare has not worked for two years, eighteen months of which he had been out on a strike, was given a six-month suspended sentence yesterday by Police Judge Rose.

"Although the strike has been over for six months," testified Plainclothesman Shy, "this man has not gone to work."

"I've been looking for a job for six months," declared Ward.

"Well, you just keep on looking," commented Justice Rose, "but you do it somewhere else. We don't want you or your kind around here any more. Get out of town, and get out quick. If you ever come back to Los Angeles again you'll serve six months in the City Jail."

Wife Annoyer Jailed.

John Abraham was sent to the City Jail for fifty days by Police Judge Rose yesterday for visiting the house where his wife lives and carrying a long and sharp knife in his pocket. Patrolman Wolfe testified that Abraham was intoxicated and lied to the landlady to gain an entrance. The couple have been separated for some time. It was testified that Abraham had not previously made a demonstration against his wife.

WATSON'S CASE UP AGAIN.

The twice-postponed case of Dr. C. V. P. Watson, charged with a statutory crime, is set for trial in Department 11 of the Superior Court tomorrow. But owing to the sickness of the defendant it may be again continued. Deputy District Attorney Veitch, who has investigated the case, said yesterday that he hoped the matter would be disposed of as it had been hanging fire for a long time. Harry Atkinson, whose connection with the case involved him in a serious complaint, was recently sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. J. A. Mead, charged with a similar offense to that alleged to have been committed by Watson, is expected to plead guilty when arraigned this week in the Superior Court and ask for a light sentence. He is in poor health and his wife has been in the hospital for many weeks.

HAS BOYS' CONFESSION.

Deputy District Attorney Richardson has in his possession the confession of Frank and Roy Yanes, 15 and 13 years old, respectively, that they killed their father near their home on the Whittier road because they feared he would beat them for playing truant. The boys will probably have to stand trial in the Superior Court on a charger of murder. Though of tender age, their crime was premeditated and brutal, say the officers who have investigated.

To Draw New Ordinance.

Chief Deputy City Attorney Robertson is drawing an ordinance to be submitted to the Council next Tuesday, under which a new city department is to be created, to be called the Bureau of Oils and Asphalt Testing. This is to be under the Board of Public Works and all employees in other departments now engaged in this work are to be transferred to the new bureau.

FORDS RIVER TO RESCUE.

Humane Officer Objects to the Beating of Mules by Drivers with Pick and Shovel.

There was a dramatic scene in Police Judge Rose's court, yesterday, when K. McCaskill described how he forded the Los Angeles River, waist deep in icy-cold water from the mountains, to protect a five-mule team that Lawrence Washington and Aime von Stein were beating with a pick and a shovel. So seldom has the historic river such a quantity of water as that at this season, that his recital held the undivided attention of the crowded courtroom.

McCaskill is an officer in the United States Protective Association. He testified that as he stood on one bank of the river watching men load wagons with sand, he saw Von Stein and Washington, the former a German and the latter a negro, beating the mules in an effort to get them to pull the wagon out of a rut.

"I called to the men to stop," said the officer, "but they didn't stop, so I jumped into the river and waded through water up to here," and the humanitarian drew his right hand across his abdomen.

Von Stein summoned Washington to testify that he didn't strike with the shovel, simply held it up in the air to frighten the mules into pulling. The justice fined him $20.

Washington was accused of using a pick on the mules. He begged for a suspended sentence when fined $20.

"I'll tell the truth if you-all will give me a suspended sentence. I done hit 'em with a pick. Won't you please give me a suspended sentence?" cried the man as tears welled into his eyes. "I've got a mammy and five babies to care for."

"All right," replied Justice Rose, and Washington walked out of the courtroom mumbling his gratitude.

One-third Off.

ESTIMATE FOR PARKS IS DEEPLY PRUNED.

IT was the park department's turn yesterday morning to feel the pruning knife of the City Council's Budget Committee and as a result of the moring's session, $120,000 was lopped from the estimates for the next fiscal year, which, for the parks, called for $350,000.

"We hope to be able to allow $20,000 more said Chairman Whien after adjournment, "but that is dependent on the amount to be received from taxation, which is not yet determined."

Of the $230,000 which the committee agreed to allow for the department, $125,000 will go to salaries, and $72,000 for the outlay that must be carried on to completion—as the conservatory in Eastlake Park. For maintenance, the committee will allow $22,500 and there will be $300 for incidental outlay. It will be impossible to complete more than one unit of the Eastlake Park conservatory under this appropriation and the deep pools with their water plants will have to be deferred until a later date. The orchid house, in which the Park Commission will install some of the rarest specimens from the tropics, many of which have been promised by the present owners, will have to wait another year.

Of the extra $50,000 that the committee hopes to be able to appropriate, none will be available for the outside plans, such as roadbuilding in Griffith Park, as the committee will insist that it be expended in Exposition Park, and in the construction of a strong drain at Echo Park, which, the committee admits, is very much needed. At present the storm waters from the surrounding slopes pour down into the lake and bring with them papers and silt that is rapidly filling the upper end of the lake. There is now no outlet, and in summer the odor is offensive. Residents in the neighborhood have complained.

The Budget Committee, which is composed of Councilmen Whiffen (chairman) Betkouski and McKenzie, is beginning to grow restless under the storm of criticism that is breaking over it on account of the numerous cuts it is making. Betkouski, in the reporters' room at the City Hall, yesterday declared that the estimates of the various departments were all outrageously in excess of what should have been asked for. "If we had yielded to all these demands," he said, "the tax rate, instead of being 90 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, would be nearer $1.90. This city has a dollar-limit, which some of the departments seem to think is a flexible dollar as big as a house."

New Body Brussels Rugs For the Bedroom —Indescribably Beautiful

The weaver's art has never produced floor coverings more universally appropriate for bedroom use than the exclusive new body Brussels rugs and carpets now shown at the "California."

From the standpoint of sanitation, durability, daintiness, exquisite beauty and distinctiveness, these rugs and carpets are the best that art and skill can produce.

The exclusive new self tones in mulberry, lavender, old violet, soft rose, baby blue—the distinctive new Dresden and chintz effects, and the Delft blues and whites—are all marvels of weaving and worthy the inspection of every one contemplating the purchase of floor coverings for the bedroom.

Body Brussels rugs being of short loop fabric are extremely sanitary, and there are no floor coverings of equal cost made that can equal them in wearing quality.

The California shows these rugs and carpets in but one grade—and that, absolutely the highest quality procurable. Our selections are critically made by men who have a thorough knowledge of carpet qualities and values—and who understand and appreciate the requirements of Southern California's discriminating public.

We want you to come and see our new spring showing of these beautiful Body Brussels rugs—and prove by comparison that, quality for quality, our values cannot be surpassed in Los Angeles.

One of our windows this week shows some interesting specimens of these rugs and carpets appropriate for bedroom use.

I.W.W. Hoodlum.

INSULTS TO THE FLAG PUNISHED WITH BLOWS.

WITH his face battered and bleeding, and cursing the government and the police, Pete Castorena, an avowed member of the Industrial Workers of the World, was taken to the Police Station by Sergt. O'Brien late on Friday night to save him from an infuriated crowd of workmen who resented his insult to the American flag.

Castorena was booked on suspicion and his wounds attended to. A score of men who had seen Castorena felled to the pavement by Roy Ahrend followed the officer and his prisoner to the station, anxious to see him put behind the bars.

Castorena was in a crowd of men who were discussing the situation in San Diego with respect to the I.W.W. hoodlums. Castorena was cursing the city officials of San Diego and those of Los Angeles. Ahrend edged nearer the vicious spouter as he began abusing the American flag.

"To hell with your flag, I spit upon the American flag," Castorena yelled.

The athletic arm of young Ahrend shot out. His fist caught Castorena squarely on the jaw and he went down in a heap, while the crowd of nearly a hundred cheered.

Cursing and spluttering, Castorena arose to his feet and drew a penknife. Again young Ahrend went at him, and another blow sent Castorena reeling. Sergt. O'Brien came at a moment when the crowd was worked into a fury by the continued vicious insults, which Castorena was heaping on the flag. They asked the officer to leave Castorena to them. He refused, called the patrol wagon and took his man to the station.

Charles Bannister, who lives at No. 323 San Julian street, who went to the station after Castorena was arrested, stated that had not the officer arrived in time Castorena would probably have been severely wounded by the angry crowd.

Lieut. Heath, who was in charge of the Central Station at the time of the arrest, regretted that he could bring no definite charge against Castorena. Heath knows the foreigner as a vicious disturber. He it was, it is alleged, who created many disturbances during the last municipal campaign. The man was released yesterday.

Efficiency.

GETTING MOST OUT OF THINGS.

THROOP PRESIDENT SPEAKS ON TIMELY SUBJECT.

Declares Science Isn't Plan for Making Man Into Mere Machines, but for Creating Less Friction and Wear—Firefly and Bee Examples of Efficiency.

Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, president of Throop Polytechnic Institute, was the speaker at yesterday's weekly dinner of the City Club. His subject was "Efficiency."

In his opening remarks, Dr. Scherer said the word "efficiency," like many other terms in common use, has been much abused and misunderstood. He insisted that it does not mean any plan for making men into mere machines, or curtailing vacations, but rather more latitude, less friction and less wear.

"Laws and methods of efficiency have demonstrated it is worth while," said the speaker. "It is the ability to secure profitable results at a minimum of friction and waste. It obtains maximum results by a minimum of labor. For example, it abolished the obsolete method of brick laying, makes it pleasanter and easier than was formerly the case.

"The word is not synonymous with parsimony or with system. It is modern and progressive; it realizes that the practice of yesterday may be the laughing stock of today."

Dr. Scherer declared nature is far more efficient than man, and illustrated this assertion by the firefly which is far more efficient than the incandescent light. He said the California bee is far more efficient than its Italian cousins because the former do not have to roam so far for sweet-bearing flowers and do not have to combat the cold.

The speaker said civic efficiency is one of the things to be accomplished and declared it is necessary to take civic boards out of the realm of ward politics. He cited the marvelous standards maintained in the German schools and showed how the artisans in that country are equipped as specialists, each in his given line.

"We are a million times behind Germany in efficiency," declared Dr. Scherer. He told how the German army is made up of units each complete in every detail and with trained men at the head. He contrasted this high state of efficiency with what he assumed to be the conditions prevailing in the American army.

"In England, he said, it is a high honor to be a politician and no stigma attaches to the word there. Students in Oxford and Cambridge are educated in politics and international questions, while in this country the students can only talk football.

The City Club passed a resolution indorsing the passage of a Congressional bill providing for a permanent non-partisan board on the tariff.

MOTION PICTURES OF PICNIC.

Novel Stunt Will Be Enjoyed by Illinois Society at Memorial Gathering—Attractive Programme.

Motion pictures of former residents of Illinois at play on the grass, watching trained animals do stunts, hearing speeches, dancing and enjoying a feast in a eucalyptus grove, will be taken when the Illinois Society holds its picnic and memorial services at Wild Animal Park on the 27th inst.

A special feature of the day will be a programme in commemoration of the ninetieth anniversary of the birth of Ulysses S. Grant, leader of the Union forces during the Civil War and twice President of the United States.

Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, who died on the 13th inst., had been invited to read a letter at the reunion. A letter received from the late general's aide-de-camp stated that Gen. Grant was too ill to respond. U. S. Grant, Jr., responded in two brief communications, and these will be read.

Mayor Alexander, who followed Gen. Grant in several of his campaigns during the great struggle between the North and the South, will deliver the address of welcome and will give some war-time reminiscences. Capt. W. C. Gibbon of the Soldiers' Home will deliver the principal address.

President Blair of the society will preside. Mrs. Talbot Winship and O. T. Helping will be in charge of the musical part of the programme. Attorney Richard J. Culver will give anecdotes of Gen. Grant.

Wonderful Treatment For Corns, Calouses and All Sore Feet

Millions of people who endure daily torture from sore feet will welcome the information that there is now a simple treatment that positively and quickly cures foot ailments of all kinds. You can say goodbye to corns and calluses, bunions, swollen, aching, bad smelling and sweaty feet. This treatment works right through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Use it once and your feet feel delightful; use it for a week and your foot troubles will be a thing of the past. "Dissolve 2 tablespoonfuls of Calocite compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore spots." Amazing results follow. Calocide was formerly confined to doctors' use, but now any druggist will supply it. If he does not have it in stock he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. A twenty-five-cent package is said to be enough to put the worst feet in fine condition.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY.

Think What Could Be Done With the Money that Goes Up in Smoke Every Year in This Country.

In summing up reasons for a Fire Prevention Day, somebody has called attention to the fact that the fire losses during the first four months of the year 1911, in the United States alone, amounted to $70,000,000, or at the rate of $210,000,000 a year. Think of the irrigation ditches that sum would dig, of the homes it would build, of the mouths it would feed, of the little ill-clad bodies it would warm.

Municipalities all over the country are becoming alarmed by the devastation by fire. The city of Cambridge, Mass., has recently appointed a committee to investigate and report ways and means for reducing fire loss in that city. The city of Boston now has a bill before the Legislature absolutely prohibiting the use of wooden construction for the exterior of buildings within the city limits. The Boston Chamber of Commerce recently appointed a committee which gave this matter very thorough consideration and recommended the bill in question.

"As I was saying," went on the ruthless editor, "from the swell joints, where you draw the weird little forks and spoons, to the humble cafeteria, where they have self-made music, and you buttle for yourself—yes, clean down to the holes-in-the-wall, where you grab off a counter—the lair of the varnished pie and the petrified doughnut. And when you strike the place where you can't read a thing on the eating programme, and they deal you the sure-nob fork, know that you have the last word in the eating language, and start down the line."

And the trail of the cinnamon is over it all. From soup to nuts the odor is never quite absent. Nevertheless it's a very good dinner, and very satisfying. The "sweet" is a sort of the Turkish coffee—ah, who has not had in it, but all the rest is mystery.

But the Turkish coffee—ah, who shall describe it? You feel you're drinking the very soul of coffee—that finer you have tasted before is the same, save that the swine did drink; and it is perfumed. You shut your eyes and swallow.

"It tastes like good coffee that has died and gone to heaven," the art critic murmured.

Afterward he asked for some tea. They gave him two pieces of paper-and I bit into it. "They understand you," I said, "and sold you jewelry. I know by the price, and I know from the fact that you can't bite it." So he took it away to have it polished up and set in a watch-fob or some-

A LITTLE SAGE AND SULPHUR MAKES THE GRAY HAIR VANISH.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druglst, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special agent, Sun Drug Co.

usually one of idealized fruit, the other purporting to be scenery, but looking like the temperance lecturer's chart depicting a stomach that's been destroyed by drink.

And there are prim little places where you can get a well-cooked little lunch at 12 o'clock, noon, and at 4, which close their doors discreetly at 6. And there are other places of the night blooming cereus kind, which do not blossom until 11 o'clock—places, needless to say, which one wouldn't naturally name children after.

In one of these places a man sings through a megaphone, to drown the talk, and the Saturday-night the politician took me there the room was thick with tobacco smoke, a saucy-looking chorus girl was doing an impromptu Texas Tommy down the aisle between the tables, and a group in the corner was joining in the chorus.

"It's a wild and stormy night!" I ventured, but the Politician said no, it was always that way Saturday nights.

"Soon's I get used to one, another comes along, a boy was singing in a baritone worthy of better things, as we left the place.
I want a permanent pap!"

IN HAWAII.

Ah, but one day the Politician and I found the Hawaiian restaurant!

I could not find it again, it's so out of the way,—in a sort of alley. And it's not really a restaurant, in a sense, at all, for it's in a private house. But meals are served to Hawaiians,—you can't get in unless you know the pass, for the Hawaiians are clannish, and keep this place to themselves. But the Politician knew a Kanaka who wanted a jury job,—they always do, he says,—and so by a judicious admixture of bluffing and cajoling, he politicked our way in.

The versatile quick-lunch-counter man's way of saying to the cook: "If you please, there's a customer who wishes an order of scrambled eggs."

In the center of the room, on the floor, sat a group of Hawaiians, resting on their heels! They dipped their poi out of calabashes with their fingers, they ate fish baked in tea-leaves, and they drank the pungent awa-water. Over in the corner a boy with big somber eyes played "Aloha Oi" in a way to send you blissfully mol-moi.

"How lovely and uncivilized!" we cried in delight.

The politician found a chair for me somewhere, because I didn't consider human heels either proper or comfy, and somebody handed me a calabash. It would have been most unfriendly of me not to have eaten from it, but I did wish I could have been sure of the state of the index fingers that preceded me!

REAL BOHEMIA.

One day we fared forth on our main commercial street, where, surrounded by warehouses, dwells in blissful innocence of napery, a restaurant, whose owner is quaintly unaware that clean dishes are customary with each course, and where you drink your coffee from the glass from which you had your wine. This last is supposed by many to be the last word on "Bohemianism" and here flock,—beside the people so fiercely artistic that they work at it, —those near-Bohemians, who look upon a clean collar as the symbol of servility to a tyrannical social custom, who think one sketch from life, a fish-net, and a pack of cigarettes make a "studio," and who talk Art before breakfast!

Here, too, resort newspaper men

It is quite the thing to enter into conversation with your table companions, and Tony the waiter has a good eye,—a regular social instinct,—for placing the right people together, and (be it emphasized,) you've got to sit right where Tony puts you! Stubborn Colds May Lead to Consumption

Did you ever have a cold that would not let go; a cough that persisted, that prevented sleep, and made waking hours miserable? Eckman's Alterative is the proper remedy in such cases. Perhaps, some simple medicine may be effective where it is only a tickling in the throat; but when your chest is sore and simple remedies don't answer—then take Eckman's Alterative. Neglect often leads to more serious trouble; a case in point follows: 719 Cherry St., Phila., Pa.

"Gentlemen: In July, 1905, I first noticed the conditions that showed I had Consumption. I lost weight rapidly; had a hollow cough, hemorrhages and very severe night sweats. My brother recommended Eckman's Alterative. In the Fall of 1905 I began to take it. At this time I am perfectly well and robust. My appetite is good and my weight has increased from 110 to 140 pounds. Not a trace of my old trouble remains. I will gladly express the merits of this medicine to anyone."

(Signed) M. L. GERHARDT.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. dip it out yourself; then you have two courses of meat, a salad, and finally a tiny dish of fruit, and you politely inquire of your table companions which fruit they prefer, restraining a pained expression when, —realizing that you have not even been introduced to them—they take both juicy oranges and leave you a weazened apple!

On Second street, there's a place with a very picturesque name—call it "Porterhouse Charlie's,"—where there are funny signs on the walls. One of them is "Don't josh the butter, you may be old yourself some day."

Here congregate prize fighters, actors, newsies, and all sorts of sporting people, and Tommy the cook comes in and chats cosily with you when he's nothing else to do. He'll always offer you a cigarette, too, whichever your sex, and as he is an authority on kitchen slang and a very good cook into the bargain.

WAITER'S SLANG.

One night, he explained some waiter's slang to us. Beans are "Arizona straw-berries;" mince pie is "ace in the hole;" poached eggs are "two dudes on horseback;" scrambled eggs, a manadatory "tickle two;" eggs turned over are "aviated;" "the stars and stripes" represent bacon and eggs, "choke it," means

The Unspeakable Turk.

As he appears to our special investigator reaching the Turkish restaurant. The reason he is unspeakable is because he wots not English and also because if he opened his mouth he would drop his cigarette.

steak and onions, and hot-cakes are "a stack of flats."

The Cub Reporter announced one day: "Say, down on Blank street is a little hole-in-the-wall, where you can stoke up with clinkers and coffee for 5 cents a throw!"

I found it to be a place where forks are thought of vaguely as something to pitch hay with.

But the coffee was excellent, and as I was so hungry, the day I went there, that a street lunch wagon looked like the Waldorf-Astoria to me, I didn't mind the paper napkins, but just ate and ate doughnuts till I found myself sympathizing with the man next me, who said: "Well, what's nineteen cussed little doughnuts, anyway?"

And the next day the Cub Reporter and I went to one of those horrid little places east of Main, whose signs read: "Meals 15 cents and up,"—and the C. R. says he understands now just why they put it that way. Naturally I received this in disdainful silence.

One day I met the Sporting Girl. "I've got a dollar!" she confided expansively. "Let's go down to the A—— H—— and board for a minute!"

"No," I said, "let's seek a weird little beanery somewhere, where you don't have to turn your head away from the painful sight while the bill is being paid."

WHERE CHOP SUEY IS.

Finally we decided on the best known of the Chinese restaurants, where there are many mirrors and much Chinese fresco scenery, and where the menu looks like a pattern for drawn work. Here in a sandalwood chair, directly under the picture of an aged gentleman in a chill, presumably the proprietor's ancestor, I sat down, and the Sporting Girl took her seat opposite another picture of what looked like the same gentleman, who, having in an intermediate picture devoured a red dragon, was evidently feeling better!

Around us sat many white women, eating with Chinese men, and the waiter poured our tea from a pot just emerging from the gloom of heathenism, a Christian strainer on its spout testifying to its regeneration. Everybody was there, from proper old ladies in couples, to single gentlemen and their wives. A tall, foreign-looking man, with a head like a mansard roof, was ostentatiously eating with chop sticks, but everybody else used knives and forks.

Almond-eyed waiters flitted noiselessly over the tasselated floor, and brought things on cunning Chinese dishes. First we had a soup that looked like a poultice, and then we had chop suey, which the S. G. declared tasted exactly like a Chinese laundry, and that she found a piece of porous plaster in hers. Chop suey is the Chinese idea of hash. There is an oasis over on the side,

She's Not Juggling.

No, indeed. She's just a tourist and she's trying to absorb spaghetti and local color at the same time in one of our funny little Italian restaurants, where you can get eleven courses and a pint of Zinfandel all for thirty-five cents.

where you can get the most delicious European cooking, so it averages up beautifully.

THE OLDEST RESTAURANT.

The oldest restaurant lives in an ancient adobe on farthest New High street—the one bit of Old Mexico in our midst. The picturesque old senora who keeps it leads you to a table covered with a red tablecloth which gives the place a gay little air, in spite of the light which comes but meagerly through the deep-embrasured windows. Here the "caster" still reigns supreme, the piece de resistance of the table furniture, and over the cracked cups and nicked plates, the ancient senora tells you in her broken English many a friendly tale of the glorious old days of Don Coronel, the Picos and the Carrilos. Castilian roses clamber over the back windows, and peep in, and cries of half-naked children playing in the patio behind, come faintly to you, as her dim old eyes, with their far-off look, gaze back to the days before the gringo came.

FOR TOURISTS.

In the Spanish restaurant, far up town, things are different. It is delightfully cosy, but it is self-conscious —its very sociability has, as it were, a label on it!. It is decorated with strings of chilis and stacks of corn husks and Mexican pottery, all designed to make the tourists say, "Ah!" Also there are pictures of Mexico City, better in intention than execution, the bull in particular being splashed over with something that looks like lobster salad but is probably gore! But the food is most excellent, and, after all, that is what one goes for, I suppose.

The night we were there, we heard an altercation in the kitchen. The waiter came out grinning—he's incongruously Irish!—and explained expansively he was "havin' an awful time with the cook, because somebody had ordered ham-and!" The people begged with tears in their eyes—they said they were far from home, that they were orphans, and had never eaten in the Spanish language, and hadn't the slightest idea what it might do to them; but all to no avail—they might have chili con carne, frijoles, or whatnot that was Spanish, but not one drop of ham-and. I don't know that I ever saw such a firm cook. And by and by they subcumbed, and were looking rather happy over their tortillas when we left.

An institution—like the church and the public school—which began about the time Fifth and Spring was considered a healthful summer resort, is the quaint little restaurant, where religious signs and those of a highly practical nature jostle each other on the walls. "In Providence put your faith," rests beside the caution that "We are not responsible for hats and umbrellas!"

LE DERNIER CRI.

Perhaps the restaurant most interesting of all—because the least conscious of itself, as yet—is the Syrian restaurant on North Main street. The tourists and "Bohemians" haven't found it yet; and it runs on from day to day, magnificently innocent in its dirt, its fly-specked mirrors, its pistachio-decked windows, its delicious, thick oriental coffee, and its after-dinner cigarettes! Here dark-eyed Syrians, Egyptians and Italians chatter over their food, undisturbed by the curiosity of the stranger. But it can't last, of course—why, it's deliciously true the waiter can't even speak English—but it will have its turn of curiosity-hunters, and then "improvements" will set in with unrelenting severity!

La Comeda Espanola.

Which, in the nervous idiom of the newcomer to the land of tortillas and enchiladas and so on, means a combination of things to eat so hot that he drinks catsup and mulligatawney to cool his mouth after dining.

Honest, I hate to tell you about that place!

NEARLY A THOUSAND COME.

The last colonists of the season, nearly a thousand arrived, yesterday over the Southern Pacific, Salt Lake and Santa Fe routes. There were forty-eight coachloads of the home-seekers and visitors.

Railroad officials who have handled the winter's colonist traffic say it has been greater than ever before. It is estimated that 65,000 took advantage of the rates. The excess of colonist travel this year over that of last year, is estimated to be about 15 per cent.

Roots and Herbs
Nature's Remedy

Almost every American man or woman can recall grandmother's collection of roots, herbs and barks made every year for home use.

It is interesting to note that the most successful remedy for woman's ills had its origin nearly forty years ago in one of these collections of herbs and roots.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was originally prepared by Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., by steeping on her kitchen stove a combination of roots and herbs. This she furnished free of cost to her woman friends who had need of such a medicine.

The cures resulting therefrom caused its fame to spread far and wide. The demand increased until today a visit to the laboratory at Lynn, where this medicine is made, reveals an immense brick building, the entire fourth floor of which is piled high with bags full of herbs, barrels of roots and bins of seeds, and a pungent, aromatic odor fills the place which reminds one of the old attic in the farm house with sage, catnip, thoroughwort and other herbs hanging from the rafters.

None but the choicest herbs are used in making Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; all carefully selected for their ability to remedy the ills for which they are prescribed and tested for their medicinal strength, and tons and tons are used annually in making this greatest of all medicines for woman's special ills.

We ask every thinking person this question: Isn't a purely vegetable remedy, made from the roots and herbs of the field—which are nature's own remedy for disease—preferable to drugs and narcotics in the treating of such diseases?

No other remedy has ever attained such wonderful success as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in treating woman's ills; it acts in harmony with the feminine organism and soon restores natural and normal organic conditions.

Every sick woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it cannot harm her, and there are a hundred chances to one that it will completely restore her health.

Rehearsals of Beauty Buds Indicate Success.

Pretty Maids Galore Dance for the Children.

Beautiful beyond description are the costumes to be worn by the 300 young society people who will take part in "Jappyland," the oriental musical carnival, which will be presented May 2 and 3 at the Auditorium, under the auspices of the members of the Los Angeles Ebell and members of the board of directors of the McKinley Industrial Home. Many of these beautiful creations, together with scenery and electrical effects, have been imported from Japan and the production will be oriental throughout.

Director Coates, who was called East on account of the death of his mother, returned Saturday. While he was away the young people were rehearsed by Miss Gilmore, who conducted the amateurs through the difficult parts.

The rehearsals are being held at Goldberg-Bosley assembly rooms, having outgrown the small rooms of the club. The Parasol Dance is a fascinating little skit in which the following young people will appear: Miss Gentry Wiekizer, Miss Kathleen Tottenham, Miss Muriel Tottenham, Miss Edith Turner, Miss Lily Olshausen, Miss Eleanor Nevarre, Miss Maud Rinn, Miss Eleanor Sutch, Miss Gladys McDonald, Miss Zillah Brown, Miss Mary Bacon, Miss Mabel Seeley, Miss Power, Miss Cullen, Miss Helen McDonald and Miss Mary Grant.

SULPHURRO

Cordial Letters Tell of More Benefits to Sufferers

Here are Some Appreciations of Sulphurro

Friends of Medicine Write From Near and Far.

ONE "RECOMMENDS IT TO WORLD OF MISERY."

Men and Women Cured by Stewart's Liquid Compound of Sulphur Anxious to Have Friends Restored to Health.

By F. W. STRANG

SEATTLE, April 20.—Appreciations of Sulphurro's power as a medicine continue to reach the offices of the C. M. C. Sulphur Company, in the Polson Building, corner Western avenue and Columbia street, Seattle, in numbers from all parts of the country, and even from eastern States. Here are some of the comments of Sulphurro's friends:

B. M. Francis, 801-2 Paulsen Building, Spokane: I received the bottle of Sulphurro and cannot say too much in favor of your wonderful remedy. For years I had rheumatism in the back, shoulders and arms, and it was while I was practically laid up in Seattle that I heard of your remedy through a friend there. I have taken about a quarter of a bottle and am entirely cured. I have not had an ache or a pain since.

Harry B. Spencer, Waldorf Apartments, Seattle: I find Sulphurro is one of the greatest medicines in the world for rheumatism, catarrh and sore throat. I can recommend it to the world of misery.

Clara S. Hinshilwood, No. 5620 Rainier avenue, Seattle: I have used Sulphurro for acute stomach trouble; it has helped me very much; also I use it in my bath, and find it most refreshing. It makes one feel so delightfully clean, as it allays all irritation of the skin.

Other letters on file in the Sulphurro offices, and which may be seen by anyone desiring, say:

"I believe Sulphurro has done me more good than any medicine I ever took. My trouble was catarrh of the stomach. I will always feel indebted to you for your kindness to me."

Removes the Cause.

"For a year my wife had been suffering from a catarrhal affection of the inner ear, accompanied by a buzzing sound, which was very irritating and annoying, causing sleeplessness and extreme nervousness, and which seemed incurable. After a few doses of Sulphurro the buzzing ceased and she is very grateful for your remedy.

"I had been suffering for several years with rheumatism and for some months prior to using Sulphurro, I was able to get around only a little, and that with the aid of a cane. I immediately began to improve and feel it has already helped me very, very much, as I am able to go around without a cane and with very little difficulty. I certainly wish to indorse this medicine as being most efficacious as a general body tonic and for rheumatism."

A Seattle woman writes:

"The first application of Sulphurro relieved a very stubborn case of bronchitis."

One of the best-known men in Seattle, whose letter is open for inspection, writes:

"I am a strong advocate of Sulphurro, and one of your best living advertisements."

A woman living on one of the Seattle rural delivery routes is appreciative in these words of tribute:

Woman of 62 Is Grateful.

"I am glad of the opportunity to tell what benefits I have had from Sulphurro. I am 62 years old and was very feeble for my age. Since taking Sulphurro I have grown strong and can walk two miles without stopping. My complexion has cleared wonderfully."

Again—

"I want to tell you what Sulphurro has done for my daughter. She had never been strong. Though not sick, but was always tired, and could not not stand long enough to have a skirt fitted. * * * Now she is as strong as any one. Words cannot tell how grateful I am, for I had tried everything I had ever heard of for [illegible] but nothing did her any good [illegible] now."

So much good has Sulphurro done in individual cases that many men and women write they are getting [illegible] to take it in the expectation of similar improvement. Here follow extracts that show how keenly interested many are in the welfare of others:

"I believe you have the name of a number of my friends, for whom I procured Sulphurro from you, during the past year. I see these friends frequently and they all speak in the highest terms of the benefit that Sulphurro has brought to them."

"I take pleasure in recommending Sulphurro as a most effectual remedy."

"I gave some to a woman who had a goitre that they said could never be cured. Already it is helping her. Every year for thirteen years I had rheumatism during November and December, but did not have it this winter."

Discovery Cures Baseball Captain

Cohn & Rosenhaupt, Lawyers, Hyde Bldg.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 8, 1912.

Mr. C. M. C. Stewart, Seattle, Wash.:

My Dear Mr. Stewart: Your representative has just called upon me and inquired as to my experience with Sulphurro after I had been suffering for years with rheumatism. While he had not asked me for an open letter, I have suggested to him that I would be very glad indeed to furnish a letter for publication in regard to this remedy. I first suggested its use to Mr. Harry Coulter, the captain of the Spokane baseball team, who was and had been suffering for years from rheumatism, and in his case it resulted in a perfect cure. I have also recommended it to many others for stomach troubles and rheumatic ailments, and each case I have heard of flattering results. In my own case, I have been giving me great relief, and I heartily recommended it for the cure of such ailments that have come under my observation. Yours truly, (Signed) HARRY L. COHN.

Insomnia Finds Sulphurro Its Deadly Enemy

Sleeplessness the Advance Agent of Much More Serious Ills.

PHYSICAL BEING MUST REGAIN ITS HEALTH.

Difficulty of Resting at Night Merely Sympton of Other Disorder—To Obtain Relief Cause Requires Removal and This Sulphurro Will Do.

Sleeplessness—weary, wakeful tossing through the watches of the night—is the bane of many lives. Insomnia drives its victims to the verge of despair, for it feeds upon itself. The longer the period of wakefulness lasts the greater becomes the nervous strain, and the more difficult for the wrought-up system to soothe itself in slumber.

Many men and women have been dragged down to the very depths by the curse of sleeplessness. Five hours' sleep may have been ample for Napoleon. "He is a hog who wants more," said the Little Corporal—but you and I do not agree with him. We want from seven to nine hours' sleep a night and our lives are shortened if we fail to get it.

But insomnia is merely a symptom of some other disorder. To obtain relief, the cause must be removed. Hundreds of people in Seattle and the Northwest are now getting nightly refreshing sleep every night, since they began the use of Sulphurro.

Sulphurro is the greatest enemy of insomnia that has ever been known because it cleanses and purifies the system so that nature can bring on her boon of slumber.

Insomnia is a nervous disease. The world of medicine knows that the nervous system cannot be considered as separate from the rest of the body. The one depends upon the other and when the organs of the body are not in perfect condition the nerves are affected. These organs must be righted and made to perform their functions before the nerves will respond.

The fast modern style of living does not offer us time to [illegible] as much as we should of the contents of our physical beings. The body is neglected and the nerves are overtaxed. "carry us along." Such [illegible] mean an early breakdown, both physical and nervous. Insomnia is the advance agent of nervous prostration and kindred attacks.

Whatever happens, you must have your sleep. Sulphurro will put your physical being into such a condition that you can rest, and such rest will aid in restoring the body to complete activity. Study the [illegible] accompanying each bottle.

Sulphurro in file and it may be had on sale at all drug stores. Or address C. M. C. Stewart & Co., 71 Columbia street, Seattle, Wash.

BY W. D. HORNADAY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CITY OF MEXICO, April 14.—It is the opinion of men who have kept in touch with affairs of Mexico that the future stability of this government depends largely on whether the masses of the country have formed the revolution habit. It is a chronic malady that has long afflicted countries of Central and South America. Through the maintenance of a rigid and all-powerful dictatorship Gen. Porfirio Diaz, under his long regime as President of Mexico, was able to keep the distressing malady out of the country, and in the few instances where there were symptoms indicative of its possible appearance he quickly stamped them out.

An analysis of the existing situation in the republic shows that, beyond men who are fomenting and actively conducting the armed revolts against President Francisco I. Madero, Jr., can hope to accomplish nothing better than what the present government is trying to do. They claim to represent virtually the same principles that Madero is striving to put into effect, and the advocacy of which was supposed to be the cause of his overthrow of the Diaz administration.

Pascual Orozco and other men formerly prominently identified with the Madero cause are affiliated, that the plan of San Luis Potosi, which was promulgated by Madero and made the platform upon which he waged his revolution, is not being carried out by the President, the fact remains that important steps in this direction have been taken by Congress upon his recommendation. WANT CONFISCATION.

In southern Mexico, where Emeliano Zapata and his armed hosts have been carrying on a warefare against the government ever since they started his foray, the demand of the masses is for the confiscation and division of the vast landed estates among them. This is what they are fighting for, he says. It is not assured by any means that they would accept Gomez, or any of the others who are identified with the latter's cause, for President. It is known that Zapata wants to be chief executive of the nation. Madero thought he was dealing with "only tiger of Ayala," as Zapata is called, would abide by the result of the revolt, but the former continued to wage his campaign just as actively as before the peace commissioners were dispatched. He has assured them in a half-hearted way that he is supporting his cause. But he is not the same thing to Madero.

The trouble with which the revolutionary forces that are now operating against Madero in many parts of the country were formed and the character of men who comprise them lead to the conclusion that it is not any principle they are fighting, but that they find that kind of soldiering an easy way of gaining a living for themselves and families. In other words, they have formed the revolution habit, and, if it continues to spread and becomes well fixed among the masses it may mean long years of turbulency for the country. It is the same habit that kept Mexico in almost unbroken state of internal warfare for many years previous to the rule of Diaz. It only was during the most despotic and severe measures that Diaz was able to suppress the disturbing element that had been carrying on its forays and depredations, and through unceasing watchfulness and vigilance was able to keep an upper hand over the people until the weight of years enfeebled him and Madero was given his revolt to bring about his downfall.

MADERO SUPPORTED.

It is apparent that the men who helped to oust President Madero and who by force of arms are not upheld by the rule of reason. It is immaterial how the country can be governed by the success of a revolution, whether it be that of Orozco, Zapata, or any other self-appointed leader.

The disturbed conditions that exist in the very existence of the financial and business element is not to a man the adherent that it was different when the latter was making his attempt to retain power. There was a strong undercurrent of sentiment on the part of the conservative native and foreigners in this country in favor of Madero which he advocated. His friends and earnest supporters in this element.

It is not safe to predict what the result should a victory be gained by the forces of armed revolution now closely upon the inauguration of Madero as President. Indications point to a more settled condition of affairs there is every reason to believe it would mean a long lull in the turbulency that is now widespread. There is a lack of so-called leaders to arouse the masses to join in an armed revolt against the constitutional authorities. The masses do not feel the long impoverishment. It would mean a loss of the fight of the "haves" against the "have nots." The thousands of the lower class who are easy to gain a livelihood in revolutionary bands would be glad to offer their services if it would assure them employment of the country.

TO GO FORAGING.

These all go along and do the foraging for the fighters. A campaign, therefore, means little work for the men. The women and children bring to them the food supplies and do the cooking. It is a sort of nomadic life that appeals to their primitive nature.

While the sentiment of the conservative class is almost unanimous in supporting President Madero's administration there is a general feeling on the part of this element that there should be no temporizing with the men who are responsible for disturbing the country's peace.

All fair-minded people say Madero should be given an opportunity to show what he can do in the matter of putting into effect his several important proposed measures of reform. No patience is had with those who say he has not done his duty in this respect. He has not had the opportunity. In the first place, Congress has not given him its undivided and enthusiastic support required to inaugurate immediately great and far-reaching reforms of government.

PRESIDENT HANDICAPPED.

The administration has a bare majority in the House of Deputies. It is not large enough to be a satisfactory working force, and this fact has been a handicap to the President in some of his plans for bringing about the ultimate uplift of the masses of the people.

There is just enough vestige of the old Diaz regime left in government affairs of the nation, as well as in many of the States to retard the rapid consummation of President Madero's advanced ideas of political and governmental matters.

It will take time to eradicate this unprogressive element of officeholders, but Madero and his supporters believed they will be able to carry out all of the provisions of the plan of San Luis Potosi if the harassment of the administration will only cease.

If the future shows that either Madero or any of the leaders opposing him who now occupy public attention is not capable of establishing stable government there is one of two things that is deemed inevitable. One is the possible appearance upon the scene of action of a "man on horseback," a man of the Diaz type, a veritable dictator and possessing at the same time capabilities that would make him well fitted for the office of President. The other is foreign intervention.

NOT ENOUGH FOR ALL.

Nearly Two Hundred Persons Apply for Lots in Angeles Forest Townsite—One Hundred to Give.

One hundred and ninety applications have been filed with Supervisor Charlton of the Angeles National Forest, for a lot in the town site to be opened by the government on the new trail leading from Sierra Madre to Sturdevant's Camp. If they all stick there will not be enough lots to go round, as the plat only provides for 100 building sites.

Work is being pushed on the trail between Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson, and fifteen men are blasting out rock with dynamite and making the roadway, which will be three feet wide, leading from the point where the electric cars stop on Mt. Lowe, to the Mt. Wilson Hotel, 6000 feet above sea level. The ascent however is but 1000 feet, as the beginning of the new trail lies 5000 feet above the level. The trail will be approximately five miles long, and it is expected that the job will be completed in two weeks.

WANT THEIR MONEY BACK.

Los Angeles Men Bring Suit at Visalia for Large Sum Alleging Evasion of Contract.

VISALIA, April 19.—Julian C. Wright, Ole Nelson, John Nelson, Alex P. Nelson and John P. Flammer and Barbara Flammer, all of Los Angeles, have brought suit against Gilbert F. Stevenson, the Woodlake realty magnate, for the recovery of $28,750.

The plaintiffs claim that when the Woodlake district was opened up for citrus development they purchased certain realty of Stevenson, paying $27,000 for the property, on the representation by Stevenson, they claim, that the water necessary for irrigation would be furnished them. It was also agreed, it is claimed, that the water would be ample in quantity for all necessary orchard purposes. They claim that after they had expended $1750 in setting out trees they discovered that the provision for irrigation was not nearly sufficient for the land they had purchased, and that surrounding property was being cared for from the same small plant. They claim that as misrepresentation was used in the sale of the property, their money should be returned to them, together with the sum of $1750 which they expended in improvements. E. M. Dillman, also of Los Angeles, is a plaintiff in an identical suit for the return of $10,000.

Stevenson has entered a general and specific denial. The plaintiffs in the action stated today that they would present their case to the realty boards of this county, and ask these organizations to use their efforts in preventing others from making similar investments under similar circumstances.

Stevenson is the owner of an extensive Woodlake property which he had opened up in small tracts, immediately following the construction of the electric line into that territory.

BEGIN PARK DEVELOPMENT.

Porterville Women Turn First Shovelful of Earth in Ambitious Plan for Beautification of Park.

PORTERVILLE, April 20.—With appropriate ceremony, the Improvement Club, an organization of women, at the Luther Burbank Park this afternoon turned the first shovelful of earth for the work of constructing the pavilions and other buildings incidental to the improvement work which has been planned for the park this year and which will be complete with funds from the club treasury.

One of the largest buildings will be a pavilion large enough for many picnic parties and which will be provided with conveniences that those of outing parties may use it as a luncheon-room.

The building is to be in true Mission style of architecture and will be covered with vines and ivy. A large auto parking has been provided in the park, and ample accommodations for horses and carriages.

TO BUILD BRANCH.

C. S. Freeland, the chief engineer of the P.N.E. railroad, has completed the surveys for the branch line of the railway to run from this city to the mining district of the Upper Tule and the extension work will be started within the week.

Chief of the expenses incident to the construction of the road will be a modern bridge over the Tule River.

Over this line will be transported every ton of commercial magnesite produced in the United States, chiefly for the Coast paper mills, although a small quantity is used in manufacturing artificial marble.

DINUBA.

DINUBA, April 19.—Following the organization of the Melon Growers' Association preparations have been made for planting out the largest acreage of melons in the history of this district. It is probable that over 1000 acres of early melons will be planted and probably an equal quantity of the later varieties. Last season the melon growers made a huge profit and all things considered, it was one of the most successful seasons in the history of the industry.

EXETER.

EXETER, April 20.—Mrs. R. Bartholimew, the superintendent of the W.C.T.U. work in this and Kings counties, was here from Tulare today to make arrangements for the bi-county convention of the union. Uncle Sam Wants It.

GROWS NOTHING, PRODUCES OIL.

PATENTED AS AGRICULTURAL, IT PROVES MINERAL.

Government Is Suing to Recover Six Thousand Acres in Elk Hills District Secured by Railroad Company—Warm Debate Over Which Concern Hired Expert.

An evident desire to show that the prospecting for oil in the Elk Hills district previous to December 12, 1904, when the land was patented to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, by the national government, was done under the Southern Pacific Company, which, it is set forth, is a separate and distinct corporation from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, characterized the hearing before Special Commissioner Longley, yesterday. The suit was instituted by the government to vacate the patents for the land, issued by the government when it was supposed the area of 6000 acres was not mineral bearing, but agricultural in character.

The principal witness was W. E. Ott, employed by J. B. Treadwell, in charge of the oil properties of the Southern Pacific in 1893-4, as manager of the leases owned by the corporation. He testified that on several occasions the land had been visited by President Harriman, Manager Kruttschnitt and other Southern Pacific officials, who made a personal examination of the territory.

Prof. Josiah Owen, a geologist, also in the employ of the company, visited the land and spent days looking over it. This was before the patents were issued by the government. Ott declared that there was evidences of oil all over the Elk Hills district, and that he made an examination of the territory from McKittrick to Sunset, involving the Midway field, where afterward were developed fine paying wells.

On cross-examination the witness said he had been hired by oil expert Treadwell, but whether in behalf of the Southern Pacific Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company he could not say. He declared that it had always been his idea that the corporations were the same, but he could not positively say anything as to their identity, except that he thought he had been working for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. Stationery that he said he had used in his work at McKittrick, bore the stamp of the Southern Pacific Company.

Dist.-Atty. McCormick protested against C. R. Lewers, attorney for the defendants, spending so much time on immaterial matters, but the latter responded that the distinction is important.

"I know it was the Southern Pacific Railroad Company," shouted the witness, "and you are only trying to trap me."

Attorney Lewers remarked that he was only trying to find out if the witness knew by whom he was employed.

I. N. Chapman, a veteran engineer and surveyor, who has been familiar with the public domain in California and Nevada for fifty years, and is now city engineer of Alameda, made a number of trips through the Elk Hills, and he said that in his opinion they are more valuable for oil than either agriculture or pasturage, for the hills are denuded of vegetation most of the year. The witness qualified as an expert in the classification of land, and declared that in his opinion the lands in question are certainly oil-bearing.

ANGELENOS BUY BIG TRACT.

Porter Ranch, Consisting of Fifteen Hundred Acres, Near Beaumont, Is Acquired for Subdivision.

BEAUMONT, April 20.—The negotiations for the purchase of the Porter ranch tract, comprising about 1500 acres and adjoining Beaumont on the north and east, have been completed and this valuable body of land becomes the property of Strong & Dickinson, of Los Angeles. The consideration is said to have been in excess of $150,000. The opening of this large acreage to fruit growing and intensive cultivation will be of great benefit to Beaumont and insure still more rapid growth of the city in population and trade.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Postmaster James A. Kelly, registration officer, reports the enrollment of 265 new voters in the Beaumont precinct up to the time he closed his books Saturday. About one-half of the new voters registered are women.

Ground was broken this week for the erection of a new store building by B. S. Casey at the corner of D street and California avenue. The new building will have a frontage of thirty-two feet and will be equipped in a modern manner for business purposes.

R. P. Stewart has purchased of John B. Reavis of Pasadena an undivided one-half interest in 160 acres of land one mile northwest of Beaumont. The consideration was not made public, but is reported to be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

Lewis Ripple of Pomona has purchased of W. B. Johnson, the Johnson apartments, located at the corner of Fifth street and Maple avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Boyd gave a 6-o'clock dinner Tuesday evening to a large party of friends in honor of the thirty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Fanning.

Miss Grace McCoy has been elected primary teacher in the Beaumont schools, succeeding Miss Culvert, of Los Angeles, who resigned on account of illness.

Several hundred visitors are expected at the district convention of the I.O.O.F., and Rebekahs, which will be held in Beaumont next Friday. A special train will be run from Riverside to convey the delegates from that city, San Bernardino and Colton. A feature of the programme will be an exhibition drill by the Riverside Cantons. The evening sessions will be followed by a banquet.

DEVELOPING NEW OIL FIELD.

Los Nogales Company Has Reached Great Depth in Its Spadra Well. News Briefs.

POMONA, April 20.—Work on the Dr. Fundenburg Los Nogales Oil Company's property, southwest of Spadra, is being prosecuted diligently. The well, which is being bored, has been sunk to a depth of 3650 feet and now the boring is continuing through a formation in which great quantities of gas are being found.

The conditions are the same as those in the Whittier and Brea Canyon localities, before oil was struck.

FAMOUS WIDOWS GET PENSIONS.

Only Small Sum for Wives of Nation's Heroes.

Few Exceptions to the Strict Rule of Congress.

Mrs. Schley and Mrs. Evans May Get More Money.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEW YORK, April 11.—Senator Isidor Rayner, of Maryland, has introduced bills to place upon the United States pension roll at the rate of $100 a month the widows of the late Rear-Admirals Winfield S. Schley and Robley D. Evans.

This action may start afresh the much-debated question as to the obligations of the government toward the widows or families of popular military heroes, and in this case a little interest may be added to the general situation by the fact that Mr. Rayner, before he entered the Senate was counsel for Admiral Schley in the famous controversy with the late Admiral William T. Sampson growing out of the conduct by Schley of the battle of Santiago.

A little study of the pension system as it applies to what may be styled "famous widows" discloses some queer things.

For example, not one of the many women who have been granted pensions ranging from $600 to $2500 per annum because of the distinguished military services of their husbands was entitled to any such sum under the general pension laws. Each was made the beneciary of a special act of Congress.

Should George Dewey, the hero of Manila and the only full admiral in the naval service of the United States, die tomorrow, his widow would not be entitled to a pension exceeding $30 a month, and she might not receive even that.

It is possible, if not probable, that a precedent for action in the case of Mrs. Schley, at least, has been set by the case of Mrs. Sampson, who now upon the pension roll at $12 a month from the government under the general law. Admiral Schley died last fall of apoplexy, and his widow, after due personal application, was placed upon the pension roll at $12 a month. Had her husband died as the result of wounds or illness incurred in military service she would have been entitled to $30 a month, as was Mrs. Sampson, whose husband's mind gave way after the strain of the Spanish War.

In considering special pension cases of this as of any other character, the Committee on Pensions is accustomed to take into account the income of the would be beneficiaries from the various sources, more especially that which might be derived, from the estate of the husband. Senator Rayner has not submitted any data to show how much property was left by Admiral Schley, and he has been requested by the committee to do so. It is understood that the estate of Rear Admiral Evans is only about $5000. The committee is accustomed to calculate an income of 3 per cent. upon the property left by the husband hence it would estimate that Mrs. Evans will be in receipt of an annual income of a little more than $200.

His physician reported and the examining board of the Pension Bureau affirmed that Admiral Evans died as the result of his military service, he having been severely wounded several times; hence, without any act of Congress, Mrs. Evans, who is a woman of about 75, would be entitled to a pension of $30 a month. Except for the precedent of the Sampson case, it might be predicted with reasonable certainty that the Pension Committee ultimately would recommend in the case of Mrs. Schley and Mrs. Evans pensions of $50 a month.

Congress sometimes, although rarely, is extremely sentimental in the

FAMOUS WIDOWS GET PENSIONS.

Only Small Sum for Wives of Nation's Heroes.

Few Exceptions to the Strict Rule of Congress.

Mrs. Schley and Mrs. Evans May Get More Money.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEW YORK, April 11.—Senator Isidor Rayner, of Maryland, has introduced bills to place upon the United States pension roll at the rate of $100 a month the widows of the late Rear-Admirals Winfield S. Schley and John D. Evans.

The action may start afresh the long-established question as to the obligation of the government toward the widows or families of popular military heroes, and in this case a little interest may be added to the general situation by the fact that Mr. Rayner, before he entered the Senate was counsel for Admiral Schley in the famous controversy with the late Admiral William Sampson growing out of the conduct by Schley of the battle of Santiago.

A little study of the pension system as it applies to what may be styled "famous widows" discloses some curious things.

For example, not one of the many widows who have been granted pensions ranging from $600 to $2500 per annum because of the distinguished military services of their husbands was entitled to any such sum under the general pension laws. Each was made the beneficiary of a special act of Congress.

Should George Dewey, the hero of Manila and the only full admiral in the naval service of the United States, die tomorrow, his widow would not be entitled to a pension exceeding $30 a month, and she might not receive even that.

It is possible, if not probable, that Congress will take action in the case of Admiral Schley, or at least, has been set by the case of Mrs. Sampson, who now is on the pension roll at $12 a month. The husband died as the result of wounds or illness incurred in military service she would have been entitled to $100 a month, as was Mrs. Sampson, but her husband's mind gave way after the close of the Spanish War.

In considering special pension cases more than those of any other character, the Committee on Pensions is accustomed to take into account the income of the widow or beneficiaries from the various sources, more especially that which may be derived, from the estate of the husband. Senator Rayner has not submitted any data to show how much property was left by Admiral Schley, and he has been requested by the committee to do so. It is understood that the estate of Admiral Evans is only about $10,000. The committee is accustomed to consider an income of 3 per cent. on the property left by the husband, so that it would estimate that Mrs. Evans will be in receipt of an annual income of a little more than $200.

It is probable reported and the extension of the Pension Board of the Pension Office affirmed that Admiral Evans died as the result of his military service, having been severely wounded in battle; hence, without any action of Congress, Mrs. Evans, who is now in receipt of about 75, would be entitled to a pension of $30 a month. Then, for the precedent of the Schley case, it might be predicted with reasonable certainty that the Pension Committee ultimately would recommend in the case of Mrs. Schley and Mrs. Evans pensions of $50 a month.

Congress sometimes, although rarely, is extremely sentimental in the matter of pensions, and sometimes is not.

Joseph R. Hawley of Connecticut was a distinguished general of the Union Army, and later served his State for many years in the Senate—for so many, in fact, that he was unable to perform his full Senatorial duties the last few years of his service. The Senate passed a bill granting his widow a pension of $50 a month, but it developed in debate that his estate was worth something like $50,000, and the House killed the bill.

Mrs. John A. Logan was more fortunate. Her husband was a major-general during the Civil War and afterward long a Senator from Illinois and a candidate for Vice-President with James G. Blaine in 1884. Congress granted Mrs. Logan a pension of $2000 a year, but she appears to be, with one exception—the widow of Maj.-Gen. Francis P. Blair—the only woman receiving that exact sum in recent years.

The widow of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan was granted a pension of $2500 a year, and these three are among the very few cases in which pensions exceeding $100 a month have been granted to widows for the strictly military services of their husbands.

Mrs. George B. McClellan received a pension of $2000 per annum, but Gen. McClellan had been a candidate of the Democratic party for President of the United States.

Mrs. James A. Garfield and Mrs. William McKinley were the wives of Union soldiers, but their husbands had been Presidents of the United States and the pension of $5000 a year allowed them by Congress appears to have been rather Presidential than military. Like pensions were granted the widows of Presidents Polk, Tyler, Lincoln and Grant.

The list of widows receiving as high as $100 a month because of the military services of their husbands is not very long, only seventeen names appearing on it in 1907. It then included the names of Mrs. Nathaniel P. Banks and Mrs. John M. Corse, both of Massachusetts. Gen. Banks had been Governor of Massachusetts and Speaker of the National House of Representatives. Gen. Corse, a postmaster of Boston under Cleveland, was known as the hero of Altoona Pass, from his famous dispatch to headquarters, reading in effect: "Cheek and one ear shot away, but I can whip all hell yet."

Mrs. George A. Custer, whose soldier husband was rendered immortal in American history through the Indian massacre associated with his name, received only $100 a month, as did Mrs. Walter Q. Gresham, whose husband was a brigadier-general and was Secretary of State in the second Cleveland administration. A general of as sterling ability as Abner Doubleday was honored through a widow's pension of only $100 a month.

Writing too hurriedly to revise the foregoing list, it may be said that in a list of eighty-three military and naval heroes whose widows had been specially pensioned by Congress from 1861 to 1887 the names of only four women appear as receiving pensions of more than $50 a month. Mrs. David G. Farragut, widow of the hero of Mobile Bay and Vicksburg, Mrs. George H. Thomas, widow of he who was called "The Rock of Chickamauga," and Mrs. Winfield S. Hancock were allowed $2000 per annum. Mrs. James Shields (brigadier-general) received $100 a month.

Since Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota has been chairman of the Senate Committee on Pensions, the committee has adhered rigidly to its rule that the widows of army and navy officers, of whatever rank or distinction, shall not be allowed pensions of more than $50 a month. It is, perhaps, unlikely that any departure from this rule will be made in the cases of Mrs. Schley and Mrs. Evans.

Vienna's Curious Eccentric.

[London Chronicle:] Vienna can boast a curious eccentric, who turns life upside down, a rich young Pole, who lives in sumptuous style, but always summons his servants by bugle call. His favorite pastime is driving an omnibus, attired like an ordinary "busman, and, though he is said to spend a fortune each year in clothes, he wears no garment until it has been worn by his valet. He has astonished the guests at a ball by appearing in a costume of pure white, save for the shirt and tie, which were black. To complete his oddities, when dining, which he invariably does alone at a table d'hote, he reverses the usual order, beginning his meal with the sweets and ending with the soup.

Delayed Shipment Easter Woolens - JUST ARRIVED

Railroads Pay Us Big Damages---We Get Entire Shipment for Half Original Cost

$45, $40 and $35 Suits Made to Order Tomorrow---Monday---for Just $16.00

Built to Your Measure

Eighteen hundred full bolts of Spring woolens that were ordered to be delivered in Los Angeles three weeks before Easter have just arrived. These woolens were shipped in plenty of time for an early delivery in this city, but through a misdirection of a railroad clerk in Kansas City, were sent to Dallas, Texas. Tracers were sent out for the shipment and it was finally located, but too late to make delivery at the time agreed upon. Our loss in trade occasioned by this carelessness was tremendous, and we immediately took the matter up with the railroad company and gave them a choice of an immediate settlement for damages or a civil suit, with the result that the damages paid us amount to half the cost of the entire shipment of woolens.

A Personal Word From Mr. Stetson

In all the years that I have been in the tailoring business I can truthfully state that I have never experienced such a wonderful opportunity as the one I am placing before the men of Los Angeles tomorrow.

The conditions are so unique that I wish to draw particular attention to them. I want above all other things to have all my old customers avail themselves of his chance.

In a word, the wealthy railroad companies are going to pay just half of the price of every spring suit ordered from me tomorrow.

The quality of Stetson tailoring is too well known to require any fulsome praise. I have just this to say, that never in my entire business career have I ever cut a cheap suit. My work is all high-class. This delayed shipment brings the cost of the highest-grade woolens down to just one-half their worth—it enables me to give tailoring values that have no precedent on the Pacific Coast.

There will be no skimping, no undue hurrying, no lack of service. Every suit will be right up to our regular faultless standard, or you pay us nothing. There have been many tailoring sales in this city—but surely never before one of this character. There's nothing more to say except this one thing—be on hand early tomorrow.

Remarkable Tailoring Chance

We realize that our opportunity of doing a big Spring business has passed, and we know that we cannot dispose of this enormous stock at anything like regular prices—neither do we want to do so, for we have already received from the railroads in damages half the cost of these woolens.

The men of Los Angeles are the ones who are going to benefit by the railroad's mistake, for it is our intention to turn these splendid woolens into cash immediately, and with that idea in view are going to take orders for suits tomorrow at less than half the regular price. Everything will be made up in magnificent style. Fit and workmanship guaranteed.

Stock consists of Imported Tweeds, Reed & Taylor Cheviots, fine Broadcloths, Serges, Saxonys, Basket Weaves, Cashmeres, etc., in all the very latest patterns, colors and shades.

CIPHER WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Easy Method of Providing for the Secrecy So Much Desired in Telegraphic Messages.

[Scientific American:] The use of secret writing in wireless telegraphy is bound to prove especially advantageous as according to the present state of affairs everybody acquainted with the Morse alphabet is able to intercept any wireless telegram at short distance, even with the ear, unassisted by any receiving apparatus.

If the order of letters in the alphabet be changed in any way, placing the alphabet in its right order above this row of letters and replacing each letter of a document by the corresponding letter of the permutated alphabet, a ciphered document, viz., a document in secret writing, will be obtained. Now it is a well known fact that none of the secret alphabets so far suggested was able to resist the art of deciphering. As in fact each letter occurs with a given frequency in each language (the German e, for instance, ninety times, the n sixty times, the s fifty times, the t forty times in a total of 600 letters,) it is merely required to figure the numbers of equal letters in order at once to know which are the letters e, n, s, t, etc. Any less frequent letters are simply guessed, after ascertaining the identity of the rest.

Prof. Zehnder's secret writing readily adapts itself to the typewriter, any chance of deciphering (in the absence of a key) being removed by using for each word another permutated alphabet. In this case any attempt at deciphering by calculation will be hopeless indeed, as each letter occurs with about equal frequency. A typewriter allowing the alphabet to be exchanged for each line or even each word could readily be constructed on the type-roller system.

This scheme suggested by Zehnder as far back as thirty years ago for the secret political correspondence of Abyssinia had never been made public until its present contemplated application to wireless telegraphy.

TAXATION AND ARMAMENTS.

Every European Country Is Now in Debt to About the Limit the People Will Bear.

[Philadelphia Record:] The expenditure on military establishments, especially war vessels, has increased so enormously during the past dozen years that international bankruptcy stares the civilized world in the face. This is no rhetorical expression. It is the substance of a statement made recently in Parliament by a member of the British government. Our taxation is relatively light, and if we have enough of the jingo fever in our veins we may contemplate the naval mania of all the great nations, our own included, with equanimity. But that is not the case with England, Germany, France and Russia. Their populations are already heavily taxed; their taxes are increasing; Germany is rapidly increasing its debt; England is no longer able to continue the reduction which had gone on for many years prior to the Boer War. France cannot stand much more taxation, and Russia is kept on the verge of destitution by the exactions of the government. The present pace of naval construction can scarcely be endured for another twenty years.

Making Optical Glasses.

[Harper's Weekly:] Optical glasses cannot be cut unless fixed immovably. To this end they are glued to iron frames of different sizes and various shapes. Until recently, when finished the plates of glass have been knocked from the frames with a light mallet, cautiously struck upon the edges of the plates. The work was hard and, as the least shiver of the edge, though imperceptible, disqualified the lens, the workman needed a very light, skilful hand. The discovery was made by an expert optician that the blocks of crystal separated more easily when they had been exposed to the cold during the night. This discovery has effected a revolution in the manufacture of special glasses.

Types of Modern and Ancient Greek Theater.

poet and musician, but they have never been able to present it as they could wish for want of such a theater. This will be one of the first entertainments which they will offer at the completion of their project.

The club's membership includes many authors, actors, musicians and artists, whose talent would often find expression through such an avenue and they feel sure that the playgoers, the women's clubs, the dramatic schools and the different church societies would all take advantage of the opportunities which a Greek theater offers. Pageants like that annually given by the Friday Morning Club and the class day exercises of all the High Schools would there find an adequate setting.

CONVINCING ARGUMENTS.

The simple Elizabethan style of acting, like that affected by the Ben Greet players, would find a wide scope upon such a stage, while the fact that such a theater can be made to accommodate an almost unlimited number of persons, adds to its desirability. The ideal climate of Los Angeles, with its sunny skies every month of the year, makes the Greek theater the perfect public assembly point for conventions and every manner of municipal affair.

Some of the men in the Gamut Club who are interested in seeing both Greek theaters constructed are F. W. Blanchard, president; L. E. Behymer, vice-president; C. E. Pemberton, secretary; C. B. McCollum, manager; A. W. Francisco, R. D. Wade, J. B. Poulin, Harley Hamilton, Ralph Wiley, Stoddard Jess, W. C. Patterson, W. M. Garland, Hancock Banning, Percy H. Clark, Charles A. Elder, Frank P. Flint, John F. Kanst, Lee C. Gates, T. E. Gibbon, James A. Gibson, S. C. Graham, G. Allan Hancock, J. B. Hedrick, Irving H. Hellman, H. E. Huntington, P. Janss, Dr. Granville MacGowan, E. A. Montgomery and Judge Curtis D. Wilbur.

STADIUMS OF TODAY.

In the beginning the Greeks danced and sang for their harvest festivals each autumn upon a threshing floor in the hollow of some bright dale among the hills. Seated upon the hillside, the people in numbers watched the festival. Later came the production of the Greek drama and the development of the Greek theater which consisted of an elevated stage in a natural glen and rising tiers of marble on the hillside as seats for the multitude.

Perhaps the modern development of the Greek theater has deviated but little from the original idea. Among the few Greek theaters in America the Stadium at Harvard ignores the natural plan most of all others. For the Stadium is built of steel-concrete walls fifty feet high in lieu of hills. It is U-shaped and of course has the sky for its dome. When it was first built it was opened with a Harvard-Yale football game witnessed by 38,000 persons, and of this vast audience 23,400 were seated in the Stadium proper. It is really on the order of an immense grand stand except that it is fireproof.

In the West the two best Greek theaters, if, indeed, they are not the only ones, are at Tacoma and at Berkeley. The latter is in constant use, as the students of the University of California give a concert in it each Sunday afternoon, these entertainments being regularly attended by about 5000 persons. It has nineteen tiers of seats which also serve as steps, and the last row of seats is on the hilltop. The stage is 150 feet long and twenty-eight feet wide. It is backed by a wall forty-two feet high. Despite the fact that it is in the open, the acoustic properties are excellent. A voice carries in it like a whisper in a cave. Its seating capacity is only 8000, but that at Tacoma seats 30,000, and the people often use it for public gatherings.

At least two troupes now play in the open air altogether during the summer. The Ben Greet Players and the Coburn Players have introduced this novelty in the United States and their work is inspiring many new theaters on this plan. The Ben Greet Players give six Shakespeare plays in the open and the mood of nature often conforms to the spirit of the play in a picturesque manner. Where there is no Greek theater the plays are given in a woodland, a park or in an open field. The first entertainment of the sort undertaken in modern times was a Greek play staged in the open by students of Cambridge, England, in 1882.

LOOKING FOR THE WOMAN.

Detectives Believe Mysterious One Warned Darrow of Franklin's Impending Arrest.

According to a report accredited to County Detective Browne, a mysterious woman, who warned Clarence Darrow that his confidential man, Bert Franklin, was about to be arrested for bribery, is sought.

It was asserted by detectives yesterday that this woman, if found, may play an important part in the trial, as tending to show a connection between Franklin with his $4000 bribery money in his pockets and Darrow hurrying to the scene.

Preparations are under way for the Darrow trial which will begin May 15. Subpoenaes for eastern witnesses have already been sent out. The prosecution will have between twenty and thirty witnesses all told. Capt. Predericks will prosecute, assisted by Joseph Ford.

Deputy Keetch, who was associated with Ford in the grand jury investigation of Darrow's alleged jury bribery, is now engaged on some important work for the District Attorney and probably will not be assigned to the case.

SORRY HE MISSED CHANCE

Sees Now Where He Might Have Made Money by Investing Here Several Years Ago.

"That our company failed to see the great possibilities of investment in Los Angeles ten years ago is one of my greatest regrets," said Willard S. Brown, general manager of the Northern Fire Insurance Company of New York, yesterday. He is staying at the Alexandria while here on his first visit. The company, at which he is head, is also New York agent for the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company of San Francisco.

"After years of endeavoring to get to Los Angeles and see for myself what others have told me of this splendid city and its remarkable growth, I have finally arrived and am certainly sorry that on previous opportunities I did not come," he said. "That our company has never invested here is not strange because until five or six years ago we believed Los Angeles investments were not classed among the best in the country, but with the tremendous forward strides they have proven better than the best."

When the matter of present investment was broached, he said that one of his reasons for coming was to be thoroughly familiar with the country, its resources and plan of development, so that possibly at some future date his company will place capital here to help in the upbuilding of the city.

"I suppose if I put off this matter of investing some money here, it will be the same thing in ten years from now should I live till that time. I will probably be willing to acknowledge lack of foresight if Los Angeles continues to grow in the future as in the past."

From Los Angeles Brown will go to San Francisco. While here, agents of his company will entertain him and afford him an opportunity of a close inspection of Los Angeles.

MAY BE NEW CHIEF CLERK.

Parmelee Is Slated to Succeed Bromley in the Justice Court by Unanimous Appointment.

E. R. Parmelee, clerk in Justice Young's court, is slated to be the next chief clerk in the justice court, when the term of T. W. Bromley expires May 1. While none of the four justices of the peace would discuss their plans, yesterday, it was virtually admitted that they would select Parmelee for the position. It pays $150 a month salary.

Parmelee is a veteran in point of service and, according to those who have observed his work, is accurate and efficient. He is noted for courtesy.

Bromley got into public notice several months ago, when it was discovered that some valuable legal papers had accidentally been destroyed. It appeared he placed some of the documents in a waste basket and the janitor innocently dumped out papers that had been a part of the official records.

The chief clerk of the justice court has supervision over all papers filed. The position is comparatively new. Bromley being the first appointee. The four justices who make the appointment are Young, Summerfield, Forbes and Reeve. It is understood that all favored Parmelee in an informal caucus, taken recently.

DELANO.

DELANO, April 20.—Parker Dear, manager of a Los Angeles investment company, has arrived here with his family to make his home in this district while he assumes charge of the development of a large tract of land, and planting the same to citrus fruits. This is one of the large orchard projects which are planned for this district this season. Mr. Dear's initial order being for 5000 southern-grown navels. Contracts have been let for the leveling of 480 acres of the company's holdings and a competent horticulturist will be in charge of the planting. From figures which have been compiled by the Board of Trade, about 800 acres will be put to early oranges in this district this spring, provided trees of the proper grade can be secured.

A GLANCE in the glass gives joy after using Satin Skin cream and face powder.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, April 20.—Last night one side of a sand-box near the headgate in the San Gabriel Canyon washed out, and this morning there was no water in the irrigating ditch. John Durrell, caretaker of the ditch, went up to the canyon and turned the water from above the headgate into an old tunnel, which runs through a spur in the mountain, and comes out near the mouth of the canyon. During the few days that it will take to repair the damage, ranchers in this valley will receive water for irrigating purposes as they received it a score of years ago, before there was any Pacific Light and Power Company here.

Contractor Ott of Los Angeles, while crossing the bridge that spans the San Dimas Wash on Azusa avenue, met with an accident. His automobile turned turtle and was considerably damaged. Mr. Ott, himself, escaped with minor injuries.

A. J. Griffith has the figures to show that one of his orange groves lacked but five boxes of yielding twice as much this year as it produced last year. Mr. Griffith attributes this remarkable increase to high fertilization.

MOON MAN MAKES GOOD WITH LONG LIST OF SALES.

LYNN C. BUXTON, the new distributor for Southern California and Arizona for Moon cars, has buckled down to business, and in the thirty days he has had the agency has turned over several sales, and has a number of prospects in his pocket, in addition to placing a number of good subagencies.

The Moon is one of the handsomest cars in the popular-priced class that has made its appearance this season. The cars are made by an old and well-established factory, with an established reputation, and the Moons are built on lines that appeal to any motorist. While they are classed as forty-horse-power cars, the motor shows full forty-five-horse-power by actual brake test.

The touring car and torpedo models are built on lines that appeal to the most exacting, but the Moon roadster is one of the sturdiest cars ever turned out by the factory. As the factory puts it "It's built for the folks who have a champagne appetite and the other kind of an income."

Buxton has his selling quarters in the handsome salesrooms on South Olive street.

Lotteries in Europe.

[London Chronicle:] Although lotteries are to be abolished in France, they are still flourishing institutions in other parts of Europe. Throughout the German empire they are largely adopted for State revenue purposes. In Prussia alone lotteries yield a profit to the government of over £4,500,000 a year. One German lottery has been established for 158 years. Lotteries are also extensively used in Italy, Austria, Hungary and Holland. They were prohibited in France so far back as 1836, and this prohibition remained in force until 1878, when a £480,000 lottery was authorized in connection with the exhibition.

How Ladies Improve Looks!

"Many ladies, old and young, make a round of tortures with their nerves and many are so frail, thin and bloodless that their splendid features are lost to view while a vain attempt to conceal the irregularity of the figure destroys the health themselves and really excites the pity or ridicule of the world," said a well known and largely employed practicing physician in a recent lecture at a young ladies' college. "I do not mind exposing what is the secret of mine to all such, as I see in it no harm and may result in much happiness and health. It is simply this: Be not thin, bloodless, nerve-tortured, but by taking regularly for periods of from six weeks to two months, as directed, a good and easily obtained pharmaceutical product known by the proprietary name of Nuxated Iron, you will put on healthy flesh, become as plump as you desire within reasonable limits, put up in sealed packages with full directions for home use."

VALLEY ROAD CALLED T

TULARE, April 20.—Definite statement was made today that the official title of the new electric railroad through the orange and alfalfa districts of this county will be the "Big Four Railway." The name is chosen in view of the fact that the road will eventually connect the four largest cities of this county, Visalia, Porterville, Tulare and Lindsay.

Surveyors took the field this morning and will run the initial preliminary survey between this city and Visalia. When this branch of the line is completed, the lines will be run from Tulare to Porterville through the dairy district.

David Olive, Jr., the San Francisco railroad man who is in charge of the work, states that the road will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will be about fifty miles in length.

It is the general impression here that the first work to be done will be through the dairy district to Porterville, as this line would tap a rich country now without transportation facilities while the line between this city and Visalia will be in competition with the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific.

Resolutions were adopted at a special meeting of the Board of Trade last evening in which the co-opera-

GOING OVER THE DETAILS?

Head of County Clerk's Registration Department Closeted with Prosecutor in Charge of Inquiry.

Thomas McAleer, head of the registration bureau in the County Clerk's office, which is now the subject of grand jury investigation, was closeted with Deputy District Attorney Hanna, yesterday. It is presumed he was going over some of the details of the department with the deputy who is handling the official inquiry. McAleer has refused to discuss the subject outside. He was before the grand jury at its last session and may be recalled tomorrow.

The grand jury will act upon its own initiative in making some report on conditions in County Clerk Lelande's office. Except to interrogate the witnesses and otherwise aid the jurors as is required by law, the two deputies of the District Attorney have not taken an active part in the probe. It is their position that the alleged extravagance in Mr. Lelande's office should be inquired into by the grand jurors themselves.

PRIEST WELL REMEMBERED.

On Fifteenth Anniversary Receives Gift Check for $2000 and Is Otherwise Reminded of Good Will.

About thirty clerical friends of the Rev. Clement Molony, pastor of St. Agnes' Catholic Church, gathered around the table on Thursday night, and felicitated him upon the fifteenth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Priests from Redondo Beach, Ocean Park, Long Beach, Hollywood, Pasadena, Pomona, Anaheim and many other places, came to pay their respects. The banquet was given in the parish rectory, the dining-room being artistically decorated for the occasion.

Father Molony was completely taken by surprise when Father Quinlan of Pasadena after having referred to the arduous labors performed by Father Molony during the fifteen years of his priesthood, in the name of the assembled clergy, presented him with a handsome piece of cut glass. Remarks were also made by the Very Rev. P. J. Stockman, Rev. John Lauricher, Rev. Peter O'Reilly, Rev. George Donahue and the Rev. Stephen Cain. Father Molony responded feelingly. He was also remembered by his lay friends in the parish, and although no public announcement was made of the fact, it leaked out that a check for $2000, intended for the purchase of an automobile, was presented to him on the evening of the celebration.

PROMINENT COLORED MAN.

Mayor Alexander and General Secretary Luther of Y.M.C.A. Will Speak at Mass Meeting.

Mayor Alexander, General Secretary D. E. Luther of the Central Y. M.C.A., and other prominent citizens, will join with the colored clergymen of the various denominations in Los Angeles in an educational mass meeting in Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, San Julian and Eighth streets, on Monday evening, April 29, the occasion being the first visit to the Pacific Coast of Dr. James E. Shepard, president and founder of the National Religious Training School of Durham, N. C.

Dr. Shepard will arrive in the city next Saturday, and will stay at the Angelus. He is one of the most distinguished colored educators and orators of the South. For eight years he was the field secretary of the International Sunday-school Association in the South, and during that period organized interdenominational Sunday-school conventions in all the Southern States.

He will preach in the South Park Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, April 28, before the colored branch of the Y.M.C.A., at 3 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, and in the evening he will preach in the Pasadena Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Robert Freeman is the pastor. On Monday morning he will speak at the ministers' meeting and in the evening will be the principle speaker at the mass meeting in Wesley church. The Colored Men's Business League will tender him a banquet Tuesday evening, April 30, and on Wednesday, May 1, at 12:30, he will be the principal speaker at the Federation Club luncheon in the Wright & Callender building. On Wednesday evening he will deliver a lecture on "The Negro Problem," in Immanuel Presbyterian Church.

VALLEY ROAD WILL BE CALLED THE "BIG FOUR."

TULARE, April 20.—Definite statement was made today that the official title of the new electric railroad through the orange and alfalfa districts of this county will be the "Big Four Railway." The name is chosen in view of the fact that the road will eventually connect the four largest cities of this county: Fresno, Porterville, Tulare and Lindsay.

Surveyors took the field this morning and will run the initial preliminary survey between this city and Visalia. When this branch of the line is completed, the lines will be run from Tulare to Porterville through the dairy district.

Basil Olive, Jr., the San Francisco railroad man who is in charge of the work, states that the road will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will be about fifty miles in length.

It is the general impression here that the first work to be done will be through the dairy district to Porterville, as this line would tap a rich country now without transportation facilities while the line between this city and Visalia will be in competition with the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific.

Resolutions were adopted at a special meeting of the Board of Trade last evening in which the co-operation of the commercial organization is pledged to the new line.

Tulare's invasion by the I.W.W. was not as scheduled today, and instead a few stragglers of the I Won't Work army were met at the north limits of this city, given a sack of potatoes and a sack of beans and were warned that the climate of the city proper was such as to be conducive to very ill health, indeed.

Mayor Heitzig was prepared for any emergency, and evidently aware of the fact that scores of deputies were prepared to resist any organized attempt to beg from door to door, or to "occupy" the city, the leaders advised their faithful subjects to stay out of the town.

Some of the members of the "industrial army" left word with the officers today that there are fifty more members of the organization following, and a watch will be kept for them as well.

Joseph Marchant, who appears to be the chief of the advance army said that "friends of the cause" would contribute the funds to carry the army across the desert. If this is not done, he states, they expect to walk, following the auto road, which is about a score of miles shorter.

Railroad men are carrying arms and are said to be prepared to resist any attempts to capture trains, as was done in Northern California some weeks ago.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—For a whole week the public interest has been at fever heat over the Titanic disaster. Everything else was subordinated to the latest news from the scene of the shipwreck. Uncertainly over rthe fate of Assessor Washington Dodge kept the excitement at white heat. His presence among the women and children is explained by his friends that he was a sick man and in case of need his services as a physician would come in handy.

There is no dirt flying over at the exposition site, but there is an awful lot of muddy water being dredged from the bottom of the bay and pumped over the swampy portions of the grounds. It is hoped that enough of the sediment will stick to fill in the low places. W. T. Sesnon and R. B. Hale have gone as a "commission extraordinary" to Europe to boost the fair and the best wishes of the community accompany them.

It is uncertain whether Miss Anna Milbrath, the sixth wife of "Sir" Harry Westwood Cooper, will return to Oakland. She says that she does not like the place and she may decide to stay with her relatives in the East. Whether she returns or not it is to be hoped that the man who ran away with her will come back and stand trial for bigamy and a few other offenses.

Edward L. Baldwin, a wealthy druggist, killed himself in a fit of melancholy over his continued ill health. His sudden demise is certainly not a very good advertisement for the efficacy of his drugs. He left a note to his wife and daughter as follows: "Forgive me, dearest ones, for this rash act. I have tried for a long time to regain my health and it seems impossible. I feel that I am going to break down entirely and I love you too much to be a burden. You have been the best wife and daughter that ever lived. I cannot continue my work with my present health. I feel it better to leave you now and hope to meet you both in a world where there is not so much sorrow and sickness."

Within the city limits is Sutro Forest and within the forest are about 100 frisky coyotes. The Board of Health is sure that some of them have rabies. Mayor Rolph proposed to have a grand hunt after the animals, but the health authorities have decided to exterminate by means of poison. As no one loves a coyote, there will be no licensing or muzzling of the brutes.

Mrs. Ray Hirsch was given a divorce from her lawyer-husband, Abraham. She alleged that he broke the record for laziness. He would sleep until noon, return from his office at 2 o'clock, and then refuse to see any clients who called on business. Besides that, he had the peculiarity, not usual with husbands, of preferring to live with his mother-in-law to establishing a home of his own.

Edna Loftus, once a stage beauty, may have lost her theatrical charm, but she still has the ability to break into the calcium light. She is fond of motoring, but according to Chauffeur J. W. Gilbert, she is not enamored with paying for it. He has had her arrested for defrauding him, so she will have a chance to speak her part before a police judge.

The members of the San Mateo Development Association are vigorously working to get lower transportation rates. The Southern Pacific, in answer to their complaint, has told the State Railroad Commission that there has been no discrimination against San Mateo county. The company says that its rates are higher in that county because it gives a better service than in Alameda county.

In a controversy between School Superintendent Roncovieri and the Board of Education it was brought out that changes will be made in the civil service examinations for teachers. Grammar is to be eliminated and applicants are to be examined as to practical knowledge of English speech and formation of sentences. The school children would be delighted if grammar was eliminated for them, as well as a few other branches. PLUTO.

LADIES CHOOSE PARTNERS.

Eastern Star Members Plan Social Ball and Whist Party and Grand Pennant March.

Westlake Chapter No. 268, O.E.S. will entertain the Eastern Stars of the city and their friends at a ladies' option social ball and whist party in the Goldberg-Bosley Assembly Rooms. It will be optional with the women to choose their partners for the first ten dances.

A special feature will be the pennant grand march by the Seventeen Stars of the Los Angeles Constellation of Eastern Star Chapters, in which will be worthy matron and worthy patron of each of the seventeen chapters of the stars, the King and Queen of the White Shrine of Jerusalem, and the Royal Matron and Patron of Southgate Court of the Amaranth, led by the present grand officers and Past Grand Matron Rosa J. Burns and Patron of the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star of California. Each will be the recipient from Westlake chapter of a beautiful pennant on which is inscribed the name of their chapter or office and the year 1912, the banners displaying the emblematic color scheme of each chapter represented.

Immediately following intermission the Westlake drill team composed mostly of Westlake's officers, under the direction of W. F. Adams, Worthy Patron of Westlake Chapter, will execute figures and evolutions.

Superior Stationery Service

The Feagans & Company Department of Stationery places at the disposal of Los Angeles society a high-class service such as it has heretofore been necessary to send to San Francisco, New York and other eastern cities to obtain.

The Feagans standard knows no limitation except perfection. We are not satisfied with merely doing things a little better than other stores do the same thing—we believe in doing everything we attempt as well as human agency can do it. We can say, with a knowledge whereof we speak—that our department of stationery in the character of the service it is qualified to render—stands second to none in this country.

Are You FAT?

I Was ONCE.

I Reduced Myself.

I was Fat. Uncomfortable. Looked Old. Felt Miserable, suffered with Rheumatism, Asthma, Neuralgia. When I worked or walked, I puffed like a Porpoise. I took every advertised medicine I could find. I Starved, Sweated, Exercised, Doctored and changed climate but I ruined my digestion, felt like an invalid but steadily gained weight. There was not a single plan or drug that I heard of that I did not try. I failed to reduce my weight. I dropped society, as I did not care to be the butt of all the jokes. It was embarrassing to have my friends tell me I was getting Stout, as no one knew it better than myself.

SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE.

I began to study the cause of FAT. When I discovered the cause I found the remedy. The French Method gave me an insight. I improved on that. Removed the objectional features, added more pleasant ones, and then I tried my plan on myself for a week. It worked like Magic. I could have at the end of the first week when the scales told me I had lost ten pounds by my simple, easy, harmless, Drugless Method. It was a pleasure then to continue until I regained my normal self in size. I feel fifteen years younger. I look fifteen years younger. My Double Chin has entirely disappeared. I can walk or work now. I can climb a mountain. I am normal in size. I can weigh just what I want to weigh. I am master of my own body now. I did not starve, but eat all I wanted to. I did not take Sweat Baths. I did not Drug. I used no Electricity, or harmful exercises, but I found the Simple, Sane, Common Sense, WAY of reducing my weight and I applied it. I have tried it on others. My Doctor says I am a perfect picture of health now. I am no longer ailing. I am now a happy, healthy woman. Now I am going to help others to be happy. I have written a book on the subject. If you are fat, I want you to have it. It will tell you all about my Harmless, Drugless Method. To all who send me their name and address I mail it FREE, as long as the present supply lasts. It will save you Money. Save you from Harmful Drugs. Save you from Starvation Diets. Harmful Exercises, possibly save YOUR LIFE. It is yours for the asking without a penny. Just send your name and address. A Postal Card will do and I'll be glad to send it so that you can quickly learn how to reduce yourself and be as happy as I am. Realizing the Artistic Possibilities of California History.

A glimpse of the historic pageant presented by members of the Ebell—a spectacle which has done much to draw to the attention of the general public that the early annals of the Southland possess picturesque values possessed by almost no other period in the story of the world.

IN THE nearly simultaneous presentation of two historic pageants, costumed and staged in a beauty and elaboration with few equals in amateur theatricals, Los Angeles has been brought, during the past week to a vivid realization of the picturesque and artistic possibilities of her own history.

The magnificent resume of the Southland's half-forgotten annals by members of the Ebell Club, followed by a no less magnificent vivification of the oldest legend of Los Angeles itself by the Friday Morning Club, constitute together a veritable renaissance of the time-dimmed past.

The wonderfully picturesque and dramatic possibilities of our own particular history seem to have suddenly dawned on the public. We have had presented to us this last week a historic pageant, under the auspices of the History and Landmarks Section of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and a pantomime play, founded on incidents of California history, by the Friday Morning Club.

It is unfortunate that two such elaborate and artistically conceived affairs should have come so close together. But the variety, the coloring, the interest, which may be portrayed with our Indians, our missions, and our Spanish and Mexican Californians as an inspiration have been admirably demonstrated by these performances. The grouping of picturesque types, in colors ranging from the dun hues of the Franciscan friars to the gaudy feathers and trappings of the natives and the glittering brilliancy of the Spanish dances made charming scenes against the background of adobe walls.

The joyous spirit of the Indians and the Californians at play gave brightness and grace to their games, dances and songs. The heroism of the fathers who had left all in their devotion to the cross; the brave hearts and untarnished honor of the Spanish gentlemen, the simple fidelity of the "leather jackets"—the soldiers who helped to conquer this new land and the unconquerable spirit of the first Americans who traveled through forest and desert to the land of gold—all this is material for the true artist.

The costuming of both of these events was a revelation. One had not supposed that so many genuine treasures of the days of long ago could have been discovered in Los Angeles—or in California. Lace mantillas, silken shawls and embroidered scarfs handed down from the dower chests of a past generation and strings of pearls and jewels, only brought out on gala days, lent grace to fair faces.

Swords with sinister stains on their blades; bowie knives hacked in actual service; blankets and serapes that once warmed savage bodies gave a touch of realism to the scenes. The music, especially the Indian songs and choruses, was distinctive, while the dances, both Indian and Spanish were full of life and grace. The "Sun Dance" of the Pageant and the impassioned posing of Slender Arrow, in the Friday Morning Club performance were worthy of any stage.

WIND STARTS THREE FIRES.

Chafed Electric Wires Cause of Blaze Which Cremated Little Boy and Destroyed Home.

The high windstorm that broke over this city late Friday afternoon was the indirect cause of the fire that destroyed the John Carlin residence, No. 2515 West Twelfth street, in which he was severely burned while trying to save his 3-year-old son, who was cremated. The police ascertained yesterday that the wind, blowing through an open window rubbed the wires together, until the insulation was worn off. Then a spark was generated and flimsy furnishings of the room were ignited.

"My little boy hadn't been in bed two minutes when my wife discovered the fire and called to me," sobbed Carlin at the Receiving Hospital yesterday. "I made two efforts to get to the boy, but the flames drove me back. He only gave one terrible scream, and it was all over. The little chap didn't want to go to bed. He asked me to let him play a little longer, but I said no. I undressed him, put on his nightie, and then gave him to his mother. She carried him upstairs and put him to bed. I only had time to take off my shoes, when my wife raised the alarm. If I had only let the little chap sit up a bit longer, as he asked, I would have him now."

The Carlins have three other children, older than the boy burned to death.

The wind also blew down the big chimney of the P. E. Trumble residence, No. 611 North Manhattan place, scattering brands all over the living room. The fire that followed did about $25 damage.

There was also a blaze in a pool room at Main and Market streets. A cigar stump, thrown into a box of sawdust and fanned into flames, caused it. The loss was nominal.

FIFTH-STREET STORE HOP.

Under the caption, "Did I Hop?" the clubs of the Fifth-street store gave a dance last night at Kramer's. The grand march, led by Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Walker, and in which about 100 couples took part, started at 9 o'clock, and was followed by a programme of eighteen dances.

GO TO SEEK EVIDENCE.

In Addition They Get Into Trouble and Are Arrested—Couple's Marital Troubles.

The marital troubles of J. C. and Carrie D. Pierson, which have been partially aired in the divorce courts of Reno and Los Angeles, will be further ventilated in the local Police Courts, Tuesday morning, when Mrs. Pierson, Jessie Tuttle, Jack Davenport and John Shorebridge, all of No. 1137 West First, will be tried before Justice Rose on the charge of disturbing the peace. The complaint was signed by Pierson, and the four defendants appeared in court yesterday through the instrumentality of Warrant Officer England.

Pierson told Deputy City Prosecutor Nimmo, who issued the complaint, that several nights ago he attended the theater with a woman acquaintance. After the show he accompanied her to her apartment where they had a light luncheon. While enjoying a social half hour, Pierson declares the four defendants forced an entrance into the room and besides threatening to assault him, disturbed his peace.

The defendants told a different tale after arraignment in the court yesterday. They declared that a private detective shadowed Pierson and the woman.

The attorney for the quartette asserted that Mrs. Pierson asked her three friends to accompany her that they might be witnesses for her in another action for divorce which she says she intends to institute at once, based largely upon the alleged developments of the visit to the apartments.

The Piersons have been separated for several years. Each has tried to secure a divorce, it is said, but without success. Mrs. Pierson went to Reno, took up a residence and instituted a suit, but her case was thrown out of court. Then she filed an action in the local courts. The case was assigned to Judge Monroe in the Superior Court. He ascertained that Mrs. Pierson endeavored to secure a divorce in Reno and procured copies of the complaint.

When Mrs. Pierson took the witness stand she was asked if she had ever sued Pierson in Reno. She said no. She was asked if she had ever sworn to a complaint before against her husband. This she also denied. Judge Monroe then produced copies of the Reno proceedings and threw her case out of court.

Since then, it is said, Mrs. Pierson has employed detectives to watch her husband, with the above alleged results.

MONEY FOR SUFFERERS.

Chamber of Commerce Receiving Subscriptions for Survivors and Dependents of Titanic Disaster Victoms.

The Chamber of Commerce is receiving subscriptions for the benefit of the sufferers from the Titanic disaster and the fund will be forwarded to responsible organizations in New York which will see that the money is well expended. Acting Secretary Gurley said yesterday that about $150 has already been received. The Princes Theater will give a matinee Tuesday afternoon for the benefit of the Chamber of Commerce fund and the entire proceeds will be turned over to the Chamber. "We believe that many families were left destitute when their husbands and fathers were drowned in the disaster and we want to do our part in helping the sufferers," said Gurley. "The Chamber will gladly receive subscriptions in any amount and give credit for the same."

KNIGHTS TEMULARS WIN CUP.

Los Angeles Commandery, No. 9, Knights Templar, of this city, returned from the meeting of the Grand Commandery at San Diego, bringing back a magnificent silver cup, awarded them for efficiency in drill. There were twenty-four men in the drill team, under command of Maj. Andrew J. Copp, Jr., and their work was applauded at every evolution by the thousands gathered to witness the spectacle. Maj. Copp made a brief speech in response to the words of commendation from the Grand Commander, and following the drill a banquet was served at the U. S. Grant Hotel. The cup is eighteen inches high and about fourteen inches in diameter, gold-lined, and is known as the Spreckels cup. It is now in the hands of Brock and Company, to be properly inscribed.

SOME GHOSTS ARE "SPORTS."

So Says a Wellesley Senior Who Has Come to the Defense of the Helpless Phantoms.

[New York Tribune:] Miss Agnes Rockwell, a fair Wellesley senior, has come to the defense of ghosts. She declares they are much abused and are really not bad. In an extensive article, "A Plea for Ghosts," in the Wellesley College News, Miss Rockwell says:

"A most flagrant instance of misshandling of ghosts in fiction has driven me to take up my pen in their defense. It must have long been apparent to all considerate litterateurs that of all the faithful servants who wait upon the pleasure of the insatiate novel reader, none is so abused and mistreated as the ghost.

"In protest, first, against the assumption that ghosts are common property. This is a fallacy I can hardly condemn too severely. The helpless ghosts are no better than mediaeval serfs or Greek slaves; rather worse, for neither money nor death can buy their freedom.

"If it is painful to the delicate ghost to have his privileges unduly stressed, it is equally painful to him to have them usurped by freebooters. Yet there have been those so bold and shameless as to rob these innocent beings of their prerogatives, and transfer them to pet characters.

"The finest specimens of these types, and in my opinion the only authentic ones, flourish in England. All other ghosts are 'sports.'"

Universities East and West.

[Century Magazine:] The thirteen State universities of the Middle West dispose of over $11,000,000 of working income and maintain 2000 professors and instructors, teaching 25,000 young men and women. The thirteen leading endowed institutions of the East, namely, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Brown, Boston, Tufts, Syracuse, Williams and Amherst, have 24,000 students, taught by 4000 men, and enjoy a working income of about $13,000,000.

The difference between the two groups is not great, but the significant thing is that the western universities have been growing in attendance about twice as fast as the eastern institutions. At present they have four times as many students as they had twenty years ago, and five times as large a teaching force.

MOTORS AND CANAL BOATS

trucks. Everyone is familiar with the use of railway cars for the transfer of freight, and everyone is becoming familiar with the use of motor cars for similar purposes. My investigations in western cities for the past year lead me to believe that the East is behindhand in the development of this particular kind of transportation. That it is growing in favor, however, is demonstrated by the fact that it is the avowed purpose to run motor trucks between New York and a great industrial and commercial centre that is now being worked out under my direction, within thirty miles of Manhattan Island.

TRUCKS CHEAPER THAN TRAIN.

"That such a proposition is entirely feasible has been demonstrated time and again. Two simple instances that arise within my own knowledge may be cited. A man in the eastern part of Pennsylvania finds he can deliver pianos by motor truck more cheaply and expeditiously than by train. A manufacturer in Connecticut was desirous of making a quick shipment to catch a fast trans-Atlantic liner, in order to get his product into an exposition about to be opened in England. Because of the delay due to winter conditions, neither the railroads nor the water transportation companies could guarantee delivery in time. He hired motor trucks, with relays of chauffeurs and drove for two days and nights through heavy snow, ice and slush and mud, and his exhibit was installed on time.

"Motor trucks are being used to produce merchants to convey their merchandise from New Jersey to Coney Island and they actually save considerable money through the elimination of the need of long leases, the motor truck makes such quick deliveries. Such examples might be given by the dozen or the score.

ADVANTAGEOUS.

"Solely as the result of my own investigations, I have in several instances recommended the employment of a large number of motor trucks for the transfer of merchandise between docks and factories, shops and railway stations, and for all kinds of haulage where the rigidity of rail transfer would be a failure, and for all distances up to those at which the cost of terminal charges have to a certain extent lost the overwhelming proportion to be found in short hauls. It is said that the railways leaving New York City, for example, have to haul freight originating there 150 miles before they can overcome the terminal costs. Such costs are entirely eliminated by the use of the automobile truck, which is believed to be especially adapted to such conditions as those which exist between the ports of Los Angeles, its harbor, and all points within the greater city of the future.

"A motor truck can negotiate a 5 per cent. grade with such ease that per cent. of grade is almost the standard that I recommend under many conditions. At some of the stations at New York, 20 per cent. grades are mounted every day by motor dock-trucks whenever the tide is low. They have to move between the vessels and the freight piers."

RIVALRY AMONG SOCIETY DAMES

Political Hostesses Anxious for Premier Place.

One Favorite Assumes Role of Gipsy for Charity.

Fashion Revival Expected at Rendezvous Club.

LONDON, April 6.—Side by side with the rapidly-moving drama in the political world there is considerable activity behind the social scenes, where friendly rivalries for the premier place of political hostess for the government are hotly contested.

Contrary to her usual rule, Lady Wimborne has so far played a more or less self-effacing part, doubtless in order to give her daughter-in-law Mrs. Frederick Guest, once Miss Fitzpatrick of Pittsburgh, the best possible chance of distinguishing herself.

Mrs. Lewis Marcourt, formerly Miss Burns of New York, now the wife of the popular secretary for the admiralty, contented herself with Tuesday afternoon at homes, doubtless feeling her position as a political hostess secure, it seemed at first that the rapid strides Mrs. "Freddy" Guest was taking into the limelight might lead her into the coveted position, especially as the Countess of Granard had been resting on her laurels.

Suddenly, however, the Countess of Craven has sprung to the front, largely through the co-operation of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, who live next door to their daughter in Chesterfield Gardens.

That part of the social world whose interests are political have not hitherto looked upon the Countess of Craven as a competitor for fame and prestige in any but the purely social realm. So, when she issued invitations to over a thousand guests to a political reception, a profound sensation was caused.

As the attendance included Premier Minister and Mrs. Asquith, the American Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and a large sprinkling of the diplomatic corps, it was recognised on all sides that she achieved in a few hours what other ambitious women fail to bring about by means of many well-planned receptions.

Having seen their daughter safely launched as a political hostess, the Bradley Martins left the country, and will not be in London again until the beginning of June.

PLANS GYPSY TOUR.

Undisturbed by the clouds on the industrial horizon, Lady Arthur Grosvenor is arranging to repeat the pleasant experiences she enjoyed last year, when, accompanied by her two children, Barbara and Izel, she took an extensive caravan tour through some of the finest south country scenery.

This summer Lady Grosvenor plans a tour from Cheshire through England and across to France, where a considerable stay will be made at the chateau of Westminster's hunting domain.

Last season Lady Grosvenor covered 500 miles in thirteen weeks and beat all records as a society gypsy.

She did not travel in her own name, for on the side of the caravan was painted in white letters the legend, "Eyeira, Licensed hawker, Broxton, Cheshire." In every respect she lived up to her assumed character, and did a regular trade in wicker-work baskets and clothes pegs.

Once, at a church bazaar, which took the form of a gypsy encampment, she levied a 4-cent toll upon the public who wished to view the interior of her caravan and raised quite a respectable sum for charity.

When she is out for this sort of fun, she generally wears a neat myrtle green blouse with sailor collar, a tight-fitting dark-red skirt, brown velvet sloush hat and white silk neckerchief.

Two light caravans have been specially built for the forthcoming tour, which her horses will be capable of drawing over twenty miles a day. Another society caravaner, Lord Limington, is at present touring in the affected districts of Persia, with the object of studying the political situation.

FROM EARL TO MARQUIS.

The elevation to the peerage of the notorious Earl of Yarmouth by the death of his father, the Marquis of Hertford, has brought him once more into the limelight. Some people have been raking up the incidents in his career, and citing them as eloquent illustrations of the way life's best opportunities can be wasted. His appearance in the Gilded Chamber is not looked upon in the light of a political acquisition.

The new Marquis of Hertford began to provide food for the gossips in 1884, when he had accumulated debts of about $30,000, which his father paid from the sale of heirlooms, and then made him an allowance of $125 a year.

Later in the same year he went to Romania and created a sensation by performing a skirt dance at a charity entertainment in Hobart town. For the next two years he engaged in sheep planting and poultry raising, but, towards the end of 1889, it can be recalled how he appeared in America as an actor. Within twelve months of that he made a composition with his creditors. His subsequent marriage to Miss Alice Thaw, and her unsuccessful petition for annulment five years later are known to all the world.

The Marquis's recent exploits include the production of the musical comedy, "The Pigeon House" at the London Coliseum, and the loss of about $50,000 over the venture. Last year a receiving order was made against him on his lenders' debts, his deficiency having been set down at $67,500. His financial position is not much improved by his rise in the scale of peerage, as the Hertfords are comparatively poor, the greater part of the property having been left in 1870 by the fourth Marquis to Sir Richard Wallace, whose widow bequeathed to the British nation, Hertford House, and the splendid display of pictures, for which the Wallace collection is famous.

A RENDEZVOUS CLUB.

Much of the activity in London at the present time is concerned with arrangements for forthcoming functions, and the business woman of all is Mrs. Geoffrey Cornwallis-West, who is organizing "Shakespeare's England," the finest exhibition of the summer season.

A latest enterprise in this connection is to take steps to establish a club in the Ground of Earl's Court, which she intends to make a society affair. It will be known as the Marmaid

Mrs. A.B. Berret as La Petrona

The season's subscription is fixed at $15.

Mrs. West is arranging the color scheme of the club's interior, and the walls will be used to exhibit some of the rare old prints and pictures lent for this purpose by newly elected members.

If they all turn up in the latest fashion revival—the Elizabethan ruffle—the scene will be interesting enough to draw daily crowds of scoffing cockneys.

This Elizabethan ruffle is taking the place of the fur varieties now that the days are milder. Made of the new shot taffetas—the favorite material of the season—the new necklet is much narrower than its forerunner, and it makes a pleasing addition alike to tailored costume or dress. Instead of the old ribbon fastening the ends of the new neck accessory are brought together at the side under posies of spring flowers, such as violets or snowdrops.

The ruffle is completed by a small hand bag of the same material made with the same frayed silk ruching round the edges. In quaint shapes, these bags are quite small and have cords of the taffetas by which to carry them. The cords, however, are comparatively short and are not worn over the shoulder. Instead, they are merely hung from the wrist or carried in the hand.

The craze for shot taffetas is finding expression in every article of feminine attire. Not only are women arraying themselves in taffeta gowns, tailored suits, hats, blouses and dress accessories in general, but shoe manufacturers are also joining in popularizing the fabrics by utilising it for fashionable footwear.

Educating Municipal Officials.

[Christian Science Monitor:] Dusseldorf, one of the conspicuously well groomed cities of Germany—and for that matter of the world—has established a precedent that may be followed to great advantage in America. It has established a college for the instruction of municipal officials who have a real career open for them in that city and country.

According to advices from Germany, although her cities, perhaps, have the best public officials in any nation, the recent development of municipal policies has proved that even in this field further instruction is necessary. The rapid growth of German communities has forced many of their officials into spheres of greater responsibility than they faced at the time they entered office, and it is, therefore, incumbent upon them—especially those who hold higher and more responsible posts—to study in order to fulfill the duties connected with executive positions. And to their credit it must be said that they are eager for instruction.

Municipal administration in all its phases has become a distinct branch of modern politics in Germany. Consequently the necessity has become evident that men should be especially educated for it. For a number of years several cities, at their head Berlin, have established training schools for employees of certain departments, like the police department, for all kinds of municipal officers of the lower rank.

Dusseldorf, however, has conceived a plan under which a special school for the higher municipal officials has been established. This institution of learning, standing absolutely under the control of the municipality, opened on October 20. Its courses are intended to cover two semesters of three months' lecture periods each, at the end of which the students will have to undergo a graduating examination. The course of study will cover all phases of municipal law; the modern problems in the life of a city, such as labor and social questions; the relief of the poor, public sanitation, the organization of city government and city charters.

THE TIMES-MIRROR CO.

POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

President Taft's personal tax return now on file at the Hamilton county Courthouse at Cincinnati, shows that he is $30,720 richer in property subject to taxation than he was last year. In that time he has accumulated $50,000 worth of stocks, while last year he held only $10,000 worth. His cash has decreased from $3720 to $840 and his debts are listed as $6500. The total value of the President's property is given at $51,940.

Gov. Albert W. Gilchrist, of Florida, has been called a "little pinhead" by Congressman Frank Clark, and he resents it. "To those who do not know me," he says, "I will state that I am 6 feet 2 inches and weigh a tenth of a long ton."

Gov. and Mrs. Dix of New York will spend several weeks abroad. The Governor hopes to spend some time in the Black Forest in Germany for the purpose of studying scientific forestry. The Governor intends to dispose of the thirty-day bills, several hundred in number, sent to him when the Legislature adjourned on March 29. The period for the consideration of these measures does not expire until the last week of this month.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

James M. Wilcox of Central Village, Ct., is believed to be the oldest active tailor in the country. He is 91 years old and has been in the tailoring business in Central Village for the past sixty years. Just now he is in Providence, getting a line on the latest fashions.

Francis P. Whittemore of Nashua, N. H., who celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday anniversary last week, is believed to be the oldest active printer in the United States. He has been following this trade in the same building in Nashua for sixty-eight years.

Representative W. B. Francis of Ohio, has asked the House Committee on Invalid Pensions to give immediate consideration to a bill granting a pension of $100 a month to Mrs. Sarah Brandon of Jacobsburg, O. Mrs. Brandon's first husband was Charles Brandon, a soldier of the Mexican War, by whom she had twenty-two children. Upon his death, she married William Sweeney, and had eleven more children, thus making her combined family consist of thirty-three children. Sixteen of Mrs. Brandon's sons enlisted in various regiments. She is now 114 years of age.

Public Business Education.

[Indianapolis Star:] It surely seems reasonable that a system of public business education should be established. The medieval conception of education as a thing for the few favored by fortuna with ample leisure—monks supported by dithes, scholars supported by pensions and noblemen supported by landed estates—survived for centuries after the modern era began. We made a great innovation in America when we established free public schools, open to everybody. Since then much has been done in the way of making these facilities for education still more free and even compulsory upon children of school age—but until about twenty years ago it never occurred to us as a people that the schools should be not only open to all, but useful to all. Since then technical schools and manual training schools have come into being and found their place in our system, but there are still many gaps to be filled.

For more than thirty years we have been fighting for foreign trade and realizing that commerce is the great function of the present-day life; but, aside from private business colleges turning out stenographers and correspondence schools teaching salesmanship, we have no institutions for commercial education and training.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

Rewards of Educators.

[Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph:] Figures published by the Federal Bureau of Education give evidence that the rewards of genius engaged in the educational field are considerably below those attainable in other of the learned professions and in many industrial avocations. The highest paid head of a State-aided institution of learning is the president of the University of California, who receives $12,000 a year and house. The presidents of Cornell University and the University of Illinois each receive $10,000 a year and house, and the president of the University of Minnesota, $10,000 a year without house. Other presidents' salaries run down as low as $2400. The best paid full professor enjoys an income of $6000 a year and the least paid tutor struggles along on an allowance of $50.

When it is considered that there are lawyers in the country earning from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, that some medical men command almost as large earnings, and that many engineers, presidents of manufacturing concerns and others engaged in industrial pursuits are equally well rewarded, one may well marvel that so many men of superlative intelligence devote their lives to pedagogy.

WORKING AN ECLIPSE.

Coming Event to be Used to Settle Important Questions in Connection With Wireless Telegraphy.

[New York Times:] A remarkable experiment in connection with wireless telegraphy will be made at Paris during the eclipse of the sun on April 23, which will obscure four-fifths of the sun's rays in France.

It has been noticed for a long time that the distance to which marconigrams can be dispatched varies greatly, according to the time of day and the direction. A message sent by rapid vibrations, which will not carry more than 700 miles during the day, can be sent two or three times that distance at sunset, especially toward the south, while, when slower vibrations are used, it can be transmitted further during the day.

It is believed that these curious facts are due to the ultra-violet rays of the sun, but this has not yet been ascertained, on account of the great changes in atmospheric conditions which take place between day and night.

It is thought an eclipse, when the greater part of these rays will be rapidly cut off, will be an ideal occasion for making decisive tests, and the wireless station on the Eiffel Tower will send messages continually from a little before the eclipse until a little after it in several directions, especially north, south, and west.

If it is found that the force of these messages varies with the progress of the eclipse, it will be considered proved beyond doubt that the ultra-violet rays of the sun are a powerful factor in the energy of the Hertzian waves.

POISONERS OF INDIA.

Government Report Details the Methods and the Character of the Deadly Agent Used.

[London Chronicle:] Arsenic is commonly employed by the professional poisoner in India, who will poison a whole family to make sure of one victim. The report of the Bombay government analyist throws some light on the methods.

The poison is usually given in sweet-meats and generally by a "strange womah," who has been met in the street and who mysteriously disappears. This "strange woman" is found in every analyist's report for the last twenty years and in circumstances so identical that it would almost seem to be the same person. Will this elusive person ever be captured by the Indian police?

Arsenic has perhaps been more frequently used than any other poison for criminal purposes. It has been proved identical with the "wonderful elixir" of the seventeenth century, when secret poisoning became to frequent in Italy that the clergy, despite the rules of the confessional, acquainted Pope Alexander VII in 1659 with the extent of the practice.

It was found that young widows were abundant in Rome and that most of the unhappy marriages were speedily dissolved by the death of the husband. A secret society of young matrons was discovered which met at the house of La Spara, a reputed witch, who supplied them with a slow, tasteless, colorless poison, carefully calculated to kill a husband in just the time that suited the purchaser.

La Spara and thirteen of her companions were hanged, a large number of the culprits were whipped half naked through the streets of Rome, while others of the highest rank escaped with heavy fines and banishment.

BUYS FINE HOME.

G. H. Casler, manager of the Manchester Branch of the Higman Lumber Company, purchased yesterday from J. A. Swank, president of the realty firm of Swank & Letton, his handsome home at No. 4160 South Figueroa street, the consideration being $10,500. It is Mr. Swank's intention to erect immediately a fine new home in another section of the city and plans for this place are now being drawn.

GUNNING, NEW MUSICAL STAR.

EARLY EXPERIENCES OF YOUNG PRIMA DONNA.

Feature of "Balkan Princess" Was Minister's Daughter and Began as a Singer in Her Father's Choir. Musical Numbers in "The Balkan Princess."

Louise Gunning hails from austere Boston, and she herself is a somewhat dignified person. Gunning pere was a minister of the Baptist persuasion. Louise sang in his choir. She aspired to the stage. But when she broached that conviction to others, and it was pointed out that a position in the chorus was naturally the first rung of the ladder, which she was about to raise, in the hope of ascending, she demurred. So she set about working the thing out in her own way. She went to New York.

Early one October morning she crossed the Brooklyn Bridge and visited Evans & Mann, who were staging "The Mandarin" at the Herald Square Theater. She sang for the managers and felt sure that she was entitled to, well—if not leading, then the next role in order. But the best she could get was an offer in the chorus.

"I couldn't think of it," said Miss Gunning, taking the managers back a peg. "I shall never go in the chorus. Never!"

Before the producers could recover she had disappeared. A week later Miss Gunning received a large, official-looking envelope, which bore the imprint of the Herald Square Theater. It contained the information that she was expected to report for rehearsal the following morning at 10 o'clock. "They have reconsidered," thought Miss Gunning, "and I'll get a nice part." Ten o'clock the next morning found her at the theater, where the managers greeted her cordially, as they handed her a slip of paper upon which was written, "Mandarin's Wife."

Her surmise had been correct. She was to be a principal! "Joyously skipping, gaily tripping," as they say in "Pinafore," Miss Gunning passed the portals of the stage door and timidly proffered the slip of paper to the stage director, who was surrounded by the company. He glanced at the paper and told her to stand "over there." When she got "over there," she found that she was indeed a Mandarin's wife, but there were twenty-four of them in all! Miss Gunning stuck to her determination, and no "Mandarin's wife" was she. It almost seemed that her counsellors had been right, but little did she care. She was "set."

"I had a natural voice," says Miss Gunning, "and I had already persuaded my father to allow me to sing in his choir. The next step—and a natural one—was to take part in church entertainments. It seemed as though I had planned the whole thing out; at least my father said so, after I had landed on the stage.

"My first engagement was in vaudeville, and I made my own costumes and selected my own songs, most of them being Scotch. Last summer I sang at a benefit in Atlantic City and some of my friends, who remembered having seen me in Scotch clothes, asked me if I would sing some of my old songs.

"Well, one night Charley Hoyt heard me sing and afterwards sent his card to my dressing-room. He engaged me for a small part in one of his companies, and this proved to be the entering wedge, for a short time afterwards, I became leading woman with 'The Mandarin' company.

"After that followed pleasant engagements with DeWolf Hopper in 'Mr. Pickwick,' with Frank Daniels in 'The Office Boy,' and a joint starring tour with Louis Harrison in 'Veronique,' as well as an engagement with Mme. Schumann-Heink in 'Love's Lottery.' The season after that I had the leading feminine role in 'Tom Jones.' Then came a two-season starring tour in Pixley and Luder's 'Marcelle.'

"And so from church choir to comic opera stage hasn't proven anything so dreadful after all. I found that hard work and determination were needed in both places and also that noble character and human frailty were quite as common in one place as another.

"I naturally entertain a reasonable pride in my contentment," says Miss Gunning. "It is such a common weakness for stage folk to be dissatisfied with the particular branch of their art in which they are engaged. Comedians usually long for tragedy. Serious actors glance affectionately, too often, in the direction of comedy. Such seems to be the perversity of the artistic nature.

"But truly, I don't wish for anything else than my present environment. I believe there is a fertile field in America for the musical comedy and light opera star. The work is not so easy, moreover, as might be imagined by musicians who look toward more grandiose vehicles. There are, even in the lightest modern offerings, considerable vocal exactions, and there is always the accompanying demand for an exhibition of histrionic ability. So long as I don't grow fat, I hope to remain in the sphere which I like so well."

"The Balkan Princess" is presented in a prologue and two acts, with three massive settings.

Probably no light opera in many years has contributed more musical favorites than are contained in the score of "The Balkan Princess."

"Holidays," "Stealing," "I Like You All," "I Char," "Love and Laughter," "Dear, Delightful Women," "Don't Let's Ever Meet Again," "Arms and the Man," "Lady and Gentleman," "Wonderful World," "The Opera Ball," "Dreaming" and "A Man's a Man" have all made pronounced successes and proved the most popular that Paul Rubens has ever written.

Louise Gunning,

A new star to the West, who will be introduced to local audiences tonight at the Hamburger Majestic Theater, in "The Balkan Princess."

The Week.

BLANCHE BATES, NOBODY'S WIDOW.

NEW LEADING WOMEN AT BURBANK AND BELASCO.

Miss Gunning, in "Balkan Princess," at Hamburger Majestic. "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" by Fischer's Company. Vaudeville Announcements.

Blanche Bates, whose acting, coupled with the mighty plays and managerial acumen of David Belasco, hascaled the artistic heights in such creative roles as "Madame Butterfly," "The Darling of the Gods" and "The Girl of the Golden West," all Belasco masterpieces, returns to Los Angeles tomorrow evening to inaugurate a brief week's engagement at the Mason Operahouse and reveal her own bright, sunny and happy self in her latest histrionic triumph, "Nobody's Widow," designated in the advertising as a farcical romance from the pen of Avery Hopwood.

Last season this delightful actress succeeded in influencing Mr. Belasco to allow her to play her first stage love and ambition—comedy—with the result that her success as "Roxana Clayton," the widow, has equalled anything she has heretofore played, and established her as a comedienne with charm and talent as rare as she disclosed while depicting the more serious roles. Her reception in New York City was most emphatic, where she played for eight months one of the most successful engagements of her career.

As its title implies its heroine is a widow with limitations, and therein arises the incessant humor that begins with a titter at the rise of the curtain, and develops into a veritable cyclone of laughter at the final fall.

This widow, Roxana by name, who after all is not a widow, despite her weeds, is the heroine of a romantic adventure which overtakes her at the villa of her friend, Betty Jackson, whom she is visiting at Palm Beach. Roxana, while traveling in England six months prior to the commencement of the comedy, fell in love and hastily married the Duke of Moreland, who courted and won her under the name of John Clarton. This alias she only discovered one hour before the wedding ceremony—one hour after the nuptials are tied she discovers him in another woman's arms, fervently kissing her.

Roxana immediately packs her trunks and returns to America, circulating the story that her husband died of enlargement of the heart directly after her marriage, and wears widow's weeds for him. At a house party given by Betty, the supposedly dead husband turns up, and the many complications arising from his appearance there afford the author excellent material for a splendid comedy.

Miss Bates has never given finer exposition of her ability as a comedienne than she does as the fascinating, up-to-date widow, and Mr. Belasco has given her a company of importance, including Bruce McRae, Adelaide Prince, Kenneth Hunter, Edith Campbell, Alice Claire Elliott, Minor S. Watson, Arthur Hyman and others. There will be one matinee, on Saturday, only.

Burbank.

Miss Muriel Starr, the new leading lady of the Burbank Stock Company, will make her first appearance this afternoon, when the Burbank organization will offer for the first time in the entire West Wilton Lackaye's recent success, "The Stranger."

In selecting "The Stranger" for the first appearance of Miss Starr the Burbank management has picked a particularly fine vehicle, for she will be seen in her original role of Mary Warrington, which she created when Wilton Lackaye recently produced the play successfully in New York.

Miss Starr comes to the Burbank company with a splendid reputation as a leading woman of exceptional ability, won in the support of prominent stars, and also as the feminine head of several important eastern stock companies. She is young, vivacious and good looking, and possesses a personality that promises to make her a great favorite with Burbank audiences.

As Mary Warrington in "The Stranger" she will portray a bright young southern girl, brought up to think there is nothing of so much importance as birth and family, and who, upon getting out into the world, discovers that there are other things of just as much importance.

The play, which comes from the pen of Charles T. Dazey, treats in a most interesting fashion upon the old conflict between pride of birth and race and the price of effort and achievement. Probably there is no social barrier in the world harder to break down or surmount than the wall of pride and prejudices which surrounds, or did surround, the old southern families, and upon this basis Mr. Dazey has written a play full of real life; brilliant with epigrams and sparkling with humor, with two wholesome romantic love affairs going on at the same time made more attractive by contrast.

Forrest Stanley will be seen in the Wilton Lackaye role of John Marshall, the young self-made man, who, without the advantage that wealth could give, still holds the heritage of fine instincts and high ideals. The other members of the company will all be found cast to splendid advantage, while scenically the piece promises to bring forth a delightfully picturesque series of stage setting.

Belasco.

The advent of a new leading woman in the person of Alice John and the return of Harry Mestayer to the local stage, will not be the sole attraction to be found at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night. In addition to two such unusually important events, the Belasco company will offer James Forbes's successful comedy, "The Commuters." Mr. Forbes is well known to theater goers everywhere for his two other comedy hits, "The Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman." In "The Commuters," Forbes is seen in his happiest vein, while his comedy reflects the writer in his merriest moments.

Miss John comes to Los Angeles with a splendid reputation in the East, where most of her stage work has been done. She is recognized as one of the most promising of the younger leading women of the native stage, her work in "Seven Sisters" and "Thy Neighbor's Wife" proving very conclusively that she is a remarkably fine young actress whose only requirement, perhaps, is a season of experience of the kind she will gain during her stay at the Belasco.

In "The Commuters," Miss John will have the role of a young wife whose home is in a small New Jersey town, adjacent to New York. The husband, after a night of gaiety in Gotham, brings home with him one of his bachelor friends and it is largely the "I'll-fix-it-for-you spirit" shown by Bachelor Sammy Fletcher, the role to be played by Mestayer—that occasions the uproariously funny incidents that make "The Commuters" a genuine comedy delight.

Majestic.

"The Balkan Princess"—she of the lilting song and the graceful dance, is coming to the Majestic tonight to tell in a burst of song, the tale of her trials and triumphs, her piques and relentings. It is a story of love and romance, seductively charming, embellished with coaxing melody and contagious comedy.

The success that has attended this tour of "The Balkan Princess" with the original star, Miss Louise Gunning, in the title role, has amazed even the most optimistic. It is on tour for the first time, after a year of reigning success in both New York and London. Of Miss Gunning, the most highly-praised light opera prima donna in America today, Ashton Stevens, a Chicago critic, said some seasons ago: "Give me lots of Louise Gunning and we'll all be happy."

Probably no musical comedy or light opera in many years has contributed the number of genuine musical gems as that contained in the score of "The Balkan Princess." "Holidays," "Stealing," "I Like You All," "I Char," "Love and Laughter," "Dear, Delightful Women," "Don't Let's Ever Meet Again," "Arms and the Man," "Lady and Gentlemen," "Wonderful World," "The Opera Ball," "Dreaming" and "A Man's a Man" have all made pronounced successes and proved the most popular that Paul Rubens has ever written.

At each performance Miss Gunning will sing "His Return," a colorful and rapturous burst of melody, in which her voice is heard to range up to the rarified regions of her famous "E in alt" as though she were nightingale, lark and every other bird of the realms of song—a musically seductive and inspiring number.

In the story, Princess Stephanie of mythical Balaria, must marry to keep her throne, but is indifferent to the anxious eligibles and interested only in a wayward grand duke who likes her hat, and hopes to start a revolution. He is a frequenter of a gay Bohemian restaurant and it becomes the cause of the princess to subdue him to ruling with her. One of the best reviews ever written of "The Balkan Princess" referred to it as a "musical 'Prisoner of Zenda.'"

People of the stage, from the casts of the various companies appearing in Los Angeles this week.

Fischer's Lyceum.

From the most modern of modern musical comedies to the most atmospheric of comic operas of the Civil War days is a long leap for the Fischer Follies Company to make, but the capabilities of the company could not be better demonstrated than by such a stretch. And so, beginning Monday night, the Fischer Lyceum will witness a remarkable transformation—from tights to hoopskirts; from modern dress to soldier suits and the garb of our grandmothers.

For "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" is the new bill announced and its locale is the South in war time. The opera is no stranger to local audiences, but the manner of its production—sumptuous, correct and full of the very atmosphere of the day—will be, and it is promised that in its present guise and with its correct ensemble and settings, it will be a revelation.

In casting it, too, many topsy turvy transformations result, compared to the casts so far presented. Herbert Cawthorne, for instance, instead of being a Dutch comic, is to be seen as an old negro slave; Texas Guinan is a demure southern girl, while May Boley, the irresistible fun maker, is the daughter of the northern general. Lon Chaney drops his Italian garb and impersonations and becomes a southern planter, and little Jane Urban plays a boy!

So are the others switched about. Miss Oakley appearing as a widow and not as a freak, and Madison Smith as a young blade of war times, the only one who seems identified with the line of work he has so far done is Bob Lett, who, as a ne'er-do-well, is quite at home, making comedy. Reece Gardner will be brave in a soldier suit as an officer, and—here is an oddity—the ponies will be slaves, in black faces! Naturally, there are many lilting melodies in the opera from Julian Edwards's pen, this being its first production since his death, by the way. There will be a spectacular side indicated by the engagement of a company of soldiers, troops mounted and on foot, cannon and all the pomp and circumstance of war.

The opera tells a connected and touching story of the war days, without rancor or bitterness and its picturesque side is fully met by its musical worth.

Following it comes "Tillie's Nightmare," with May Boley in the Marie Dressler role—a treat long anticipated with much joy.

Orpheum.

Perhaps the most unique personage yet to be offered on any stage is Charles Kellogg, who heads the coming Orpheum bill, opening Monday matinee. Mr. Kellogg styles himself "the nature singer," but he is far more than that; he is a naturally gifted person who has lived his life in the world of the Sierras, and brings to vaudeville a breath of out of doors. He has the unusual natural faculty of imitating birds and beasts, in so natural a way that when he meets them in their own haunts they are not afraid. He demonstrates all this on the stage; he imitates birds and babies; he shows the power of vibration in his voice, by putting out a four-foot flame of gas by his vocal efforts alone, and he demonstrates in many ways the efficiency of vocal vibrations. He covers a range of 12¼ octaves and can sing four or five notes at once. In fact, the one difficult thing in regard to Mr. Kellogg is to convince the public that he really does what he is said to do; it looks so like fakery that it seems incredible.

Four new acts besides will come to make the new week's bill a wonder. The fearless CeDora, who rides a motorcycle at terrific speed in a golden globe fourteen feet in diameter, is one of the thrilling girls of the stage and in her way also has no equal. The Whittakers are English comics, who have a pantomimic novelty, "Dick Whittington," during which one impersonates an immense cat with great success. Art Bowen draws and sings at the same time; his cartoons are particularly effective, and his songs are quite in tune with the pencil and crayon work. Orville Stamm, the most remarkably developed boy in the world, a home product, will make his professional debut in an exhibit of athletics.

"Everywife," the symbolic play, McKay and Cantwell and Bernard and Butler will remain, with the usual excellent music and the world's news in motion views.

Pantages.

The headline act for the coming week at Pantages will be "The Naked Truth," a musical comedy in one act with Joe Edmonds in the principal role. The story is based on the old legend that within hearing distance of a fabled well in a fabled town in Switzerland, anyone speaking an untruth would immediately lose a portion of his clothing. The title of the comedy is based on the ultimate result of persistent mendacity under such circumstances, and the story is told, principally in song, by Edmonds and a cast of eight. Though the powers of the well are not proven to the utmost, they come near to being so, when the two lovers seat themselves on the rim of the well. The fun reaches an acute stage, and the truth is eventually a great deal nearer the condition suggested in the title than the Easter styles for Truth declare to be proper.

The Bob Zarrow Four return with their merry cycling comedy "The Isle of Joy." This quartette of fun makers are individually and collectively in strong favor with vaudeville patrons here, and will be greeted by friendly audiences.

Following these two splendid numbers will come "Rube" Strickland the "violinologist," by which title Strickland intimates that in the character of Hiram Q. Skidder from Skidville he is no longer a violinist, but an expert in the manipulation of that instrument along other lines than those established by Ysaye, Remanyi, Joachim and other noted but conventional artists.

The protean playlet, "That Woman Next Door," by Leavitt and Dunsmore, gives Mr. Leavitt an opportunity to display diversified talent as a character comedian in five widely differing roles. Miss Dunsmore is "That Woman Next Door."

Fischer and Green are a veloible Yiddish team, in characteristic conversational comedy. Those who know them claim they are among the best of their class. Starr and Vail present a classy "sister" act and are said to be fully worthy of a place on this notable vaudeville aggregation. A biograph reel of laughing pictures will not be lost among the attractions.

Empress.

With one big headliner and two splendid feature acts, Sullivan and Considine will bring to the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon a new seven-act bill which promises to be one of the most attractive in many weeks.

The mysterious practice of thaumaturgy will be demonstrated in a most remarkable and interesting manner during the week of the new bill, by Miss Eva Day, a young successor to the famous Ana Eva Fay, in many respects, although her demonstration is in more than one way unlike that of the famous Miss Fay.

She has divided her entertainment in two parts, the first of which she calls occult demonstration, while in the second part of her demonstration she answers questions received from those in the audience.

The first feature of the new bill will be the elaborate one act musical play, "More Ways Than One," which will be presented by those two well-known vaudeville favorites, Beatrice McKenrie and Walter Shannon, with an excellent supporting company.

The second feature is the German orator, Senator Francis Murphy, who is very much of a perfect imitation of the famous vaudevillian Cliff Gordon. In fact, it is presented by permission of Mr. Gordon. Carl Randall, a clever young entertainer, should furnish much melody and mirth in his bright new songs and dances and Sheridan and Sloane have a lively rag-time musical offering termed a "Tag Day Episode." Mosetto, one of Europe's famous jugglers, with his fun producing assistant will also play an important part on the new bill, which will be completed with the new comedy motion pictures.

Grand.

When the Armstrong Follies company present "The Winning Widow" next Monday night at the Grand Operahouse, Will H. Armstrong will return to childhood days, for he will be seen in a most laughable burlesque of a baby character. To say the least such a characterization should be screamingly funny and in the hands of Mr. Armstrong not a single laugh should be lost.

"The Winning Widow" will be a burlesque of a well-known play, Ethel Davis will be the widow and Gus Leonard will appear as Doctor Killum, a quack who never pays his bills and is forced to move from place to place in order to avoid his creditors. An allowance is given the physician and his wife by an uncle, on the theory that there is a 5-year-old baby in the family. A visit to the uncle's country residence necessitates the appearance of a child. It is at this juncture that Mr. Armstrong is called into the play. The lines and situations which have been originated by Edward Armstrong are of the rapid-fire order and will furnish many a hearty laugh.

Song numbers in plenty will be introduced at opportune moments and a sensational barefoot dance will be presented by Clara Howard and the Baby Dolls. This dance will be a burlesque of the Russian classic and though humorous will be artistic. Miss Howard will sing a new song, "The Ragtime Land."

Ethel Davis will be heard in "My Dream Man," a ballad of exquisite melody and feeling, and a new number entitled "Bring Back My Lovin' Man," and Will Armstrong will be heard in a tropical number entitled "Months and Months and Months," in which satires of local persons will be introduced. "The Society Texas Tommy" and the "Budd Sisters," a trio of mirth-makers, will also be features. Amateur night will fall on Tuesday and the Baby Dolls will as usual be seen in the Chorus Girls' Contest Friday night.

Princess.

Beginning Monday matinee the policy of the Princess will change. The Donald Stewart Musical Comedy Company will begin a ten weeks engagement, and will open with, "The Waiter and the Chef," a comedy that is full of laughs. Mr. Arthur Harrison is the new director, and will only produce plays that are extreme comedies.

The cast is an exceptionally strong one including such well-known talent as Harrison and Jeffers, Dutch comedians of national reputation; Helen Drew, soubrette of the famous Drew family direct from the Circle Theater, New York; Miss Jeane Moore, understudy of Alice Nielsen, a big favorite as a prima donna; Miss Elsinore Richmond, characters, O. J. Post, recently with the Frank Rich Company, leading man, Donald Stewart, himself and a big beauty chorus.

The Living Pictures, which have proven a big attraction, will be continued for a third week, with entire change of subjects, representing famous figure painting by famous artists.

Adolphus.

The Mortonesque idea of stage perfection will be more in evidence next week, beginning Monday at the Adolphus Theater, when the second week's offering by the Adolphus Extravaganza Company will be "Miss Manhattan," the production in which Frank Morton starred for three years in the East.

Just three words epitomize the quality of the offering—a scream, a roar, a shout. "Miss Manhattan" is one of the best musical shows on the western burlesque wheel. It is more than a mere musical comedy show, it is an extravaganza with a plenitude of songs, colors, mirth and action.

Frank Morton, the popular comedian, will be seen in the role of the Duke. Gladys Vaughan will interpret the role of Geraldine Summers, the dissatisfied wife. Jack Bradshaw will play Jack Summers, the "rounder" husband. Winnie Baldwin, the winsome and popular soubrette, will be seen in a role peculiarly suited to her, that of Babette, a French maid who is in love with Dobbs, the chauffeur of the Summers family, played by Edwin Worthington. Joseph Jaencke, a new addition to the Adolphus forces, will play Pierre, the French butler, with whom Babette is always quarreling. Miss Evelyn Whaley, prima donna, will be seen as Mrs. Van Astorbilt. Emerald Green, a Titian-haired addition, will be cast as Bedellah. Miss Green is considered a "find" since she is one of the best coonshouters in the business and her engagement with the Adolphus forces will give Los Angeles theatergoers an opportunity to see and hear a second Blossom Seeley. The story is told in music, seasoned with a little more music. Lloyd Hamilton, formerly with James K. Hackett, will be cast in the part of Giambastiani, an organ grinder. There are also twenty beauties who will augment the offering.

MELODIGRAND

Piano, Says:

"To deny that a great improvement in vibratory control has been made in the construction of the Melodigrand sounding board, would be to aver that further progress along these lines were both impossible and unnecessary, while in fact, this most vital field of resonance is absorbing the studious attention of our great piano experts.

"After a critical examination of the Melodigrand pianos, I am convinced that this new invention, has not only improved (equalized and clarified the entire scale), but has also added years of vital durability.

"It is an accepted fact that unequal (angular) vibrations are classified as mere sound, while equal (oval) vibrations only are musical. This principle is the alpha and omega of the art vocal, and this, having been accomplished to perfection in the Melodigrand pianos, I heartily commend them."

We wish every woman in town could see the $30.00 Suits we are making a specialty of this season. As a matter of fact, we know of nothing to compare them with at nearly half as much more.

In the first place they have the STYLE, the SNAP, the general air of newness about them. Then, the materials are so unusually good, the tailoring so nearly faultless and the fit so perfect, in the majority of cases not a stitch of alteration is necessary.

They come in the new Grays, Blues and Shepherd Checks. Plain tailored, demi-tailored or Norfolks. The price is $30.00—and they are worth more.

The guests sat down to a collation of chop suey served with chop sticks, rice, tea and Japanese cakes, which was served by Japanese maids, who looked like butterflies in their wide sleeve kimonas. Azusa.

At a meeting of the Azusa Woman's Club on Wednesday several of the members brought old articles of historic value. Among the most interesting was a handsome, chased gold watch, brought by Mrs. Gordon, and belonging to her husband, Capt. J. T. Gordon. This watch was made entirely by hand, was bought in Liverpool 113 years ago, cost $175, and still keeps fairly good time in spite of the fact that it once had a bath in the San Gabriel River. Mrs. C. H. Lee brought a copy of the "Pomotropic," the local newspaper, printed in 1894, when J. W. Jeffrey was editor. It was a special issue, but was a revelation to all who saw it. It contained sixteen large pages, and each page had a large illustration of some building in Azusa, or some place of interest near-by. The president reported that each club in this district had been asked to appoint one member as part of a committee to meet once a month, and to keep in touch with the work of the Juvenile Court. Mrs. F. L. Dingman was appointed on this committee. After the business and programme, ice cream, cake and coffee were served by the hospitality committee consisting of Mesdames W. W. Heth, F. L. Clark, D. H. Petty, A. Katz, and R. E. Smith.

The large living-rooms were beautifully decorated with gold of Ophir roses, bridal wreath and ferns and an improvised altar was arranged in exquisite style, where the waiting clergyman, Rev. R. A. Van der Las, performed the impressive wedding ceremony. The bride was attended by her father, and they advanced to the strains of the bridal chorus, played by Mrs. Alfred Hasen. The charming young bride was attired in an exquisite though simple gown of sheer white material and carried a bridal bouquet of pink roses, and she wore orange blossoms in her hair. After the nuptial vows were spoken, Mr. and Mrs. Scott were the recipients of many congratulatory remarks and sincere good wishes. Following the wedding a supper was served and later the bride and groom left for a wedding journey.

Riverside.

A unique society event of the week which furnished amusement for the rich while swelling the fund for the poor, was the charity benefit entertainment given Thursday evening at the Loring Theater by Twig No. 5 of the Evergreen Charity tree. From month to month during the winter fruit has been harvested from the various Twigs of this vigorous tree, but none have gathered a heavier crop than did the members of Twig 5 at their recent successful harvest. From foyer to stage, from gallery to balcony, every seat of the pretty theater was filled with friends of the Twig and of the cause. For their entertainment reels of the ever famous Cinderella drama were displayed, interspersed with cornet solos by Gustav Hilverkus, giving variety between the scenes. Other local talent was in evidence in the persons of Harold Freeman and Walter Patterson, who won applause in some characteristic Mutt and Jeff stunts. Perhaps the most applauded performer of the entertainment was Eugene Wilkerson of Colton, who, dressed half as maiden, half as man, gave to the audience a tragic rendition of the "Miserie" from Trovatore. With his golden haired, pink crepe de chine frilled side to the company he trilled the soprano of the opera. With his bewhiskered, trousered side to the house he roared the basso of the song. So fetching was this specialty that the impersonator was recalled repeatedly. Other features of the entertainment were pictures of "The Vendetta," a thrilling Italian tale; a monologue, a Scotch dialect sketch and a song and dance specialty by Geoffrey Morgan, a number of captivating soubrette tricks by Maizie Martell and, in closing, a display of pictures showing the comedy, "His Brother's Double." The proceeds of the successful entertainment will prove a material aid in the work among the poor of the city.

Among the many charming affairs for brides-to-be, which have formed a conspicuous part in this spring's social functions, none have been more delightful than was the bridge tea given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. L. F. Darling of East Arlington avenue, in honor of Miss Evelyn Trevelyan, whose engagement to Robert Irving has recently been announced. Feathery bamboo and training vines intermingled with pink rosebuds formed the decorative material for the pretty affair, and bridge furnished the amusement. Seated at the table assigned to Miss Trevelyan were three other brides-elect, Miss Malloch of Hamilton, Can., fiancee of Norman Irving; Miss Ethel Smith, who will in June become the bride of Lieut. Ralph Haines, U.S.A., and Miss Dorothy Wheelock, who will in the same month celebrate her marriage with Norman Dole of San Francisco.

SOCIETY.

Each of the brides-to-be received pretty prizes and others making high scores were Mrs. E. R. Skelley, Mrs. Stuart Malloch and Miss Dorothy Bettner. Tea was served in the dining-room where Mrs. George Trevelyan and Mrs. Willoughby Anderson of Halifax, N. S., presided over the tea and coffee urns. Assisting in serving were Misses Jean Adair, Agnes Baird and Dorothy Bettner.

The presence of spring was emphasized in the profusion of blossoms which adorned the home of Mrs. Harwood Robbins of No. 421 West Fourteenth street, when she received a large company of her friends on Wednesday afternoon. Masses of Duchess and Maman Cochet roses created a color scheme of pink for the reception-room, Marechal Neil and Sunset roses cast a yellow glow over the entrance hall; trailing branches of the rosy Marie Henriette brightened the library, and multi-colored nasturtiums combined their riot of golden shades in the dining-room. Nearly one hundred guests were received by the hostess and her assistants, Miss Davenport, Mrs. M. A. Collins and Mrs. O. D. Vaughn. Those who served tea were: Mrs. Frank Ross, Mrs. Gaydan Cage, Mrs. Harry Hawes and Mrs. Alfred Lewis. The young ladies assisting in the dining-room were: Misses Elizabeth McClure, Verna House, Lois Wall, Lena Kennedy, Georgia Lewis, Mabel Ross and Beatrice Ross.

One of the prettiest of the spring weddings was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Earles, of No. 1066 East Eighth street, when Miss Corena May Kimbley became the bride of Jesse W. Wells. Over fifty relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. A. W. Adkinson of the First Methodist Church. The playing of "Love's Logging" by Miss Loleta Kimbley announced the approach of the bridal party, which was led by two bridesmaids, Misses Elita and Gertrude Kimbley. Little Dorothy Kimbley followed as flower girl, and the bride, coming last, met the bridegroom at the alcove provided for the marriage service. Masses of white roses and twining smilax formed a fit setting for the bride in her snowy draperies and her surrounding attendants with their filmy gowns and accessories of delicate pink. Following congratulations refreshments were served, and the young couple left for their wedding journey. Their future home will be at Bishop, where Mr. Wells is connected with the bank. Both the bride and groom were previously employed in the Citizens' National Bank of this city.

Mrs. S. L. Herrick and her sister, Mrs. W. M. Gillick, entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Herrick, No. 1437 South Lemon street. Roses in varying shades provided contrasting color schemes in the several rooms thrown open to the guests. The diversion of the afternoon was whist, and eleven tables were devoted to the players. Pretty prizes were awarded the winners, and refreshments were daintily served. This was one of a series of social gatherings with which the hostesses are entertaining their friends.

Monrovia.

SPRING sunshine and the opening of many beautiful flowers have been reflected during the week in charming functions and a number of happy weddings. Dancing cards and teas have followed in succession and the social calendar has been crowded. Tuesday evening occurred the marriage of Miss Mary Woodson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garland H. Woodson of East Lime avenue, to Mr. Eward M. Scott of Duarte. Mr. and Mrs. Woodson and their attractive daughter are among the more recent arrivals from the sunny South and Mr. Scott is a native of Mississippi. A touch of the Southland was manifest both in the arrangements for the wedding and in the warm welcome extended to the guests. The home was lovely with exquisite decorations of Gold of Ophir roses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Richard Vander Las before an altar of white and pink carnations. As the bridal party entered, Mrs. Orville Nave played softly upon the piano, "Call Me Thine Own." Mrs. Alfred Hazen sang in her rich voice "Sweethearts," and after the ceremony the "Rosary." The guests were received by Mrs. Edward Jernegan, Mrs. Alfred W. Hazen and Mrs. Harold Hulme and among those present were Messrs. and Mesdames Homer Fort, Edward Jernegan, B. W. Gerhart, C. H. Barwine, A. W. Hazen, W. W. Davis, F. M. Scott, George H. Hutchins, Mesdames Meeridith, Ludie Cross, Jeannette Allison, Harold Hulme, William Graham, Nixer, Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Price, Miss Gerhart, Miss Hutchins. Out-of-town guests were Mr. L. Jacobs, Miss Aileen Jacobs, Miss Annie Bond and Mrs. J. V. Nolan of Pasadena, Chaplain and Mrs. Nave, Miss Nave, Mrs. Charles Judy, Misses Edith and Nina Lander, W. P. Lander, and Mrs. B. A. Holmes, Mrs. Crossley, Mrs. Will Meredith and Miss Annie Malony of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, Long Beach.

Another notable wedding of the week, beautiful in all its appointments, was that of Miss Elizabeth Mary Bovee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bovee, to Howard A. Irwin of Bakersfield. The ceremony was solemnized Thursday evening by the Rev. Charles Fisher at the home of the bride's parents on West Linnwood avenue in the presence of half a hundred relatives and intimate friends. Cecile Brunner roses were employed in the decoration of the beautiful bower arranged for the wedding party and formed the bride's bouquet. The same exquisite little flowers peeped forth from the folds of her lovely gown of white marquisette. All of the appointments were in pink and pink roses were used in profusion in the dining-room where the bridal cake was cut.

At high noon Thursday the marriage of Miss Fay Cameron of San Diego to Mr. Fred Miller was solemnized in St. Luke's Church by the pastor, Rev. Henry Quimby. Mr. and Mrs. Benedict Schupp were included in the bridal party. A wedding breakfast followed at Hotel Leven Oaks. The marriage of this popular young society girl of San Diego comes as a complete surprise to her many friends. For the past week she has been the guest of Mrs. Schupp on East Wild Rose avenue and has attended a number of pleasant functions, but no hint of the coming wedding was given.

Miss Elizabeth Bovee was the honored guest at a number of pleasant functions given early in the week. Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Will L. Hanna entertained at cards twenty intimate friends in her honor. Whist was the game of the evening and the pretty decorations were in pink and green. The same color motif appeared also in the score cards and refreshments. Those present were Miss Bovee and her fiance, Howard Irwin, and Mr. and Mrs. O. J. McCurley, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Seymours, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict Schupp and Miss Fay Cameron, Misses Miller, Ella Miller, Pearl Stark, Florence Kelly, Ethel Hendrickson and Bessie Thayer, and Messrs. Oswald Gierlich, John Dunn, John McBratney, Fred Oswald and Fred Hilts. Tuesday evening Miss Bovee was again honored, Miss Rogers handsomely entertaining the choir of the First Presbyterian Church. A musical programme added greatly to the pleasure of the evening. During the supper hour Miss Bovee was presented with some handsome cut glass.

The engagement of Miss Mabel Guthrie, youngest daughter of Mrs. C. N. Guthrie, to Dydey Smith of Eugene, Or., has been announced, and many delightful little affairs are being given for the charming young bride-elect. Saturday afternoon the Misses Anna Crews and Helen Davis gave a pretty card party at the home of Miss Crews on East White Oak avenue. Whist was played and the games were followed by an elegant little dinner. The dining-table held a center-piece of Cecil Bruner rosebuds and radiating from the lovely cluster were satin streamers ending in silver slipper bon-bon holders. Covers were laid for twelve and the guests were Miss Mabel Guthrie, Miss Blanche Guthrie, Mrs. M. J. Enberger, Miss Pearl Post, Miss Laura Newcomb, Miss Edna Chess, Miss Eloise Armstrong, Mrs. T. J. Davis and Mrs. R. F. Crews.

One of the delightful functions of the week that rejoiced the younger set was the dancing party given Friday evening in Odd Fellows' Pavilian by Messrs. Kenneth Harvey, Harold Dupar, Ernie Brewer and Bartle Harvey. Mesdames H. E. Dupar, J. W. Harvey and Charlotte Beamer were chaperones and assisted in receiving. Smeby's orchestra furnished some delightful new music suggestive of the springtime, and the pretty and elaborate decorations were in green and white. Buffet refreshments were served. About 100 were present.

Mrs. E. C. Thl, assisted by Mesdames C. E. Slosson, John H. Bartle, George Bookhout, Francis, Moffatt and Miller and Miss Hutchins, gave an "at home" Monday afternoon in the church parlors of the First Presbyterian Church to the ladies of the congregation. About fifty were present and passed a pleasant afternoon. Tea was poured at 5 o'clock.

Elected unanimously as president of the Saturday Afternoon Club, Mrs. Clark H. Marsh begins auspiciously her wardship of one of the largest and oldest women's organizations in this section, outside of Los Angeles and Pasadena. The office entails a deal of hard work and each president has vied with her successor in broadening the scope of club endeavor and seeking practical direction for the syndicated energy of 300 inquiring and inquisitive women who this year have added responsibility of the franchise to consider. Mrs. Marsh, who is the wife of the Rev. Clark Marsh, pastor of the First Christian Church, is splendidly equipped for leadership, and has the solid support of the organization which has made her its president. The club contributes greatly to the social life of the city and is also foremost in civic work.

Brawley.

CARDS have been received announcing the marriage of Lewis M. Dietrich and Miss Effie Bresaher.

Mrs. W. H. Best of Brawley was honored by the Imperial Valley Federation of Woman's clubs at the annual session held in El Centro the latter part of the week, when she was elected president. Mrs. J. C. Gay, also of Brawley, was elected corresponding secretary. The club and women of Brawley and Alamorio who attended the annual convention were Mesdames W. H. Best, J. C. Gay, V. E. Stockwell, G. C. Gayford, Thomas O'Brien, T. M. Bartlett, Edith Abbott, J. W. Klasgye, J. H. Huddleston, A. L. Sebille, Miss Vera Prewitt and Miss M. J. Hurlburt.

Henry Kohns was tendered a farewell surprise at the home of C. A. Schoneman Tuesday evening. Mr. Kohns leaves shortly for his home at Capsae, Mich.

Mrs. Charles Goodwin of Los Angeles is the house guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Elmore.

A public reception was held in the library Monday evening, when the Brawley branch of the county and State library was formally opened. The committee having this delightful social event in charge consisted of Supervisor R. E. Wills, Mrs. W. H. Best and Mrs. George Gay. Miss Frances Clippinger, formerly of Huntington Beach, has been appointed librarian for Brawley.

Elsinore.

LAKE ELSINORE Lodge, Knights of Pythias, celebrated the fifth anniversary of its founding Monday beginning at 1 o'clock with a parade in which the band, the goat, the local lodge and autos marched up and down the principal streets. Business was generally suspended for an hour. The streets were crowded with people who followed the leaders to the lake shore after the parade and witnessed the boat races. Wilby Yates and Delbert Crane in the former's yacht Betty went around the course in 52.10 and G. G. Willsey and Mr. Parkhurst in the Indian were just a minute and ten seconds behind. This makes the second race which the Betty has won for the Keck challenge cup and the second for the Sweet trophy. As only two boats started and three are named in the regulations the race yesterday may not be counted. At 6 o'clock the valient Knights dined their big crowd of guests at an elaborate banquet in the lodge hall and the banquet programme as previously published was given. A dance followed in Bank Hall.

Thirteen members of the Elsinore Woman's Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Stewart of Rice street where the postponed meeting of the club was held. Inglewood.

THE most interesting social event of the past week was "The Big Minstrel Show" given by the Inglewood Volunteer Fire Company at Masonic Auditorium on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The people of Inglewood attested to their appreciation of the good work done by our "fire lads" in the past by greeting them with a large and enthusiastic audience on each of these occasions. While the work of C. H. Howell and W. F. Miller as end men and Attorney Freeman H. Bloodgood as interlocutor was particularly pleasing, each member of the company was well received and deserved the applause with which each new stunt was greeted. The programme was concluded each evening with a laughable farce entitled "The Mischievous Monkey—Or Fun in an Hotel," written especially for the occasion by our fellow townsman, W. F. Miller, who also served as an efficient coach for the entire minstrel show. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the fire department.

Mrs. Charles H. Eager returned to Inglewood Monday from Hotel Van Nuys, Los Angeles, where she had been a guest for the past two weeks. Mrs. Eager, who is president of the Los Angeles Dickens Fellowship, entertained very delightfully at the Van Nuys during that time, at a number of beautifully-appointed dinner parties and also at a luncheon which was given to the board of the Dickens' Fellowship.

Last Friday evening the I. O. O. F. of Inglewood served a banquet to about 100 of their members and friends in Masonic building. The tables were very beautifully decorated with great bowls of California poppies and calla lilies. Following the delicious menu, cards and music were enjoyed until a late hour.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Aerick during the evening.

A musical entertainment, under the supervision of Miss Emma A. Ellis, musical director of the High School, was given Thursday evening. The programme consisted of solos, duets, quartettes and choruses by the members of the glee club of the school and of selections by the High School orchestra.

Tropico.

THE Thursday Afternoon Club held its annual Reciprocity Meeting in the K. of P. Hall, Thursday, making an all-day session of it. The hall was beautifully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, making a very artistic display, as evolved by the decorating committee, under the supervision of Mrs. L. C. Rice, chairman. The banquet room received equal attention from the ladies who presided over the material; and all sat down to a bountiful repast, at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Dwight Griswald, president of the club, presided in a gracious manner, welcoming visitors and members, cordially. The programme rendered, was "Violin Obligata," by Mrs. Edgar Ayres, with Mrs. Emil Tholen, accompanist; a talk on the "Glympses of the Works of the Fine Arts League of Los Angeles," by Mrs. W. H. Housch, addresses by Mrs. W. C. Mushet and Mrs. Calvin Hartwell of Los Angeles; "Solo" by Mrs. Stella Orth of Glendale; "Five Minute Talks" by the presidents of the visiting clubs, and a "piano solo," by Mrs. Warren West, of Tropico.

It has been one steadfast yearn upon the part of the masculine contingent to have a fuss made over him, and this longing bids fair to be realized when the ladies assume the man's prerogative Friday evening, when the Fraternal Brotherhood gives a Leap Year dance, the ladies doing the honors, while mere man will demurely sit, and endeavor to look coy, pale and interesting.

Mrs. Mae Burlingham, who was sent as delegate from N. P. Banks Corps, No. 67 to the W.R.C. convention at Stockton, returned home on Tuesday.

Mrs. Warren King, of Boyle Heights, is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. D. Flanders, on Brand boulevard.

Eagle Rock.

THE Rev. Martin Post and Mrs. Post were delightfully entertained at luncheon, April 15, with former parishioners of Sterling, Ill., who are spending the winter in Los Angeles. The occasion was a very happy celebration of Dr. Post's birthday. Many cards of greetings from those who could not be present and the hearty congratulations of those present made the day stand out as a red-letter day in Dr. Post's life.

Misses Lois Candee and Helen Jeter entertained the O.F.F. Club at the home of Miss Candee on the evening of Saturday. Miss Mabel Miner, who had been elected to membership, was initiated. Misses Candee and Jeter proved themselves hostesses and in the enjoyment of various games and dainty refreshments the evening passed all too quickly.

CHILD HAD ECZEMA ITCHED TERRIBLY

Small Sores All Over Face. Scratched Which Made Them Worse. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Her.

1711 W. 30th St., Chicago, Ill.—"My child suffered greatly with eczema. A small sore began in a few places on her face and finished almost over it. The pimples were scattered over my child's body. They were sore and caused many of them to suffer much from them. I could not get any sleep. The itching made her so restless she did not seem to be able to rest. I had tested three weeks when I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I found great relief after the first application, and by the time I had used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment she was entirely cured. I have not used any other soap since, and we always recommend Cuticura Soap and Ointment to our friends." (Signed) Mrs. Emil Neverdeen, Nov. 16, 1911.

What Is It That Makes the Home Happy?

As He Does

In the daily round of toil the great struggle for financial advancement requires every effort a man possesses to keep apace with that never ceasing march of progress.

No man is by nature selfish. There is no man with a home but who takes real pride in feeling that he honestly wishes, and intends to give, his family the very best that his means will allow.

He is the family breadwinner—on him falls all expense, and he is glad, too, that the task is his, for he loves his family, and they, in turn, are proud of him. And so it is that the Home-making he leaves to the good wife—the Helpmate whose happiness, whose welfare, is his daily care.

He provides the means—she cheers the pathway—and they all rejoice in the joy of their Home. The real comfort of every home is in the furnishings that surround it, which can best be obtained here, where you get the most for your money, both in style and merchandise.

It is our constant aim and effort to give you full dollar value for everything you buy here, and we know that no business can possibly succeed unless their customers remain satisfied. When you buy at Colyear's you are assured absolute satisfaction.

As She Thinks

Human nature is much the same the world over, and we are all susceptible to those kind acts in life which others do for us through motives of love and unselfishness.

From morn till night she busies herself with the daily tasks set before her. She never falters in her duty, in her pride, in making the home home—attractive and cheerful for her own. She it is who beautifies the home and makes it a true abiding place for you, Mr. Man. She wants pretty Furniture to make her home attractive—then you are pleased with your home, and when a visitor comes, who is it that after the greeting is over, exclaims—"Oh! come and see my nice new furniture!" Of course, she is glad to show it. That is one of her proudest moments—the one when she can show her cosily furnished Home, which He was so glad to buy for her.

Perhaps you have had this experience. 'Tis a pleasant satisfaction to feel that she is happy in her pretty home, through your efforts, Mr. Man. Keep on making her happy through the beauty of your home. It will repay you a thousand fold.

As You May Do At Colyear's Store

At eventide, when the day is done and the Family is all together, then perhaps mother, daughter or brother tells of their desire for a New Davenport, a Garland Gas Range, a Morris Chair, a nice Rug or some other article of furniture. It may be that you think you are not ready to spend the cash at this time. If you only knew what pretty things we had in our store, and how reasonable are our prices, and that if you wish we will be glad to open an account for such furniture as you may want—then why not come now and buy what you want—there is no need to wait any longer. All we ask is that you give us the pleasure of a call—if you buy, then we both profit; if you don't buy, there's no harm done. But come anyway.

FOR years we have had the reputation of being the Highest grade Jewelry House in Los Angeles.

We enjoy this reputation. Indeed, it is a genuine asset to an Establishment of this character.

However, our prices are really no higher than those you are asked elsewhere—FOR SIMILAR QUALITIES—many times they are even lower.

Our reputation for quality is due to the fact that we carry only Merchandise of genuine worth — and not the cheaper grades.

In Every line we handle there is a point below which we will not go in buying goods—because it means the carrying of qualities we cannot guarantee.

For FORTY-THREE YEARS we have transacted business upon this basis. Surely it must be THE basis which appeals to well-informed Men and women.

Otherwise this house would have gone out of business long ago, instead of steadily growing in size and influence:

AUTO-MASSAGE SELF-REDUCING CORSETS

No 353 $3.50

IN three months time, this has become one of the most famous and popular corsets in the world.

CORRECT STYLE
It is a splendid figure-reducing corset; completely controls the surplus flesh and gives utmost possible slenderness below the waist-line.

AUTOMATIC MASSAGE
The combination of elastic "Holtite" Straps (inside of the corset) and the new Self-Reducing Straps of triplicate construction, produces a genuine massage with every movement of the figure.

This gradually softens the fat, which is then removed by natural processes, and you find that your figure is really smaller.

But there isn't the slightest sensation except that of increased comfort. Three models:

No. 353—with low bust
No. 354—with medium bust
No. 355—with high bust

Price—$3.50

The very long, clinging skirt gives the modish "inslope" when you stand—but its Lastikops attachments let it spread easily when you sit down—the corset can't "bind" or "ride up."

Simply as corsets, these models easily rank in the $5.00 class, saying nothing of their wonderful figure-reducing functions.

came to Santa Monica Thursday from McAllister's ranch, where she has been for two months, and after a few days in Los Angeles, she will go to New York, to join her mother and grandmother, who left Santa Monica several weeks ago. Miss Turner is known as the "Vitagraph Girl," and she has played the principal part in many of the pictures taken by that company. After a nervous breakdown last fall, the company sent her to Santa Monica to recuperate. With her mother and grandmother, who accompanied her West, she remained several weeks, then went to the Santa Monica Mountains in the hope of regaining her health. Several weeks ago, with Mrs. McAllister, Miss Turner went to Portland to deliver a series of lectures at one of the theaters there. The trip proved too much for her and since her return she has had a relapse, which determined her to return to her home in New York. Since coming to Santa Monica she has made many friends who will regret to hear that she is leaving, as she announced upon coming here that she would make her home in Southern California.

STAGE BEAUTY SECRETS

Prominent Actress Tells Some Secrets Women Will Be Glad to Know.

We are often asked, says a prominent actress, what we do to keep our complexions so clear, and ward off the signs of approaching age. Nearly every actress today uses a greaseless cold cream. We have long since given up the greasy creams, as they make the skin flabby and grow hairs, while a good, greaseless cream feeds the skin and keeps it free from wrinkles. I always make my own cream, using two ounces of powdered cerol to a pint of boiling water, stirring until thick and creamy. This makes a marvelous cream and so much cheaper than the ready-made kinds. To keep the form plump and pretty we find nothing to equal the gallol tonic made by mixing an ounce of trus gallol with a pint of sugar syrup. The effects of this tonic are simply wonderful. It seems to feed shrunken tissues and rounds out the form very quickly.

To keep the hands soft and white and free from roughness, after washing thoroughly apply freely a simple lotion of amarol dissolved in water, two ounces of amarol to a pint of boiling water is the way I usually mix it.

Most Beautiful Woman in the World

Thais Magrane.

Thais Magrane, the clever and talented actress, plays the stellar part in the great play, "The Spendthrift," at the Belasco Theater, and she certainly makes the best of it. She is considered by many to be the most graceful and beautiful woman on the American stage. Miss Magrane uses only the world famous Melorose preparations. Following is a signed statement by her:

Gentlemen: Your Melorose Cream I have tried and find splendid for the skin. Your Face Powder and Rouge are equally as good. Sincerely, (Signed) THAIS MAGRANE.

The perfect toilet dainties, MELOROSE BEAUTY CREAM, FACE POWDER AND ROUGE, 50c size only 45c; NAIL POLISH 25c.

MORE leading actors and actress use the famous Melorose preparations than any other kind. Indorsed by thousands.

PERFECTION OF FACE and FORM to those who use Willard White Co. preparations.

Mme. De La Vie, the world's greatest writer and lecturer on Health and Beauty Cult, and many other high authorities, recommend only Willard White Company's Vaucaire Galego Tablets for developing the bust and as a general tonic and flesh builder, and maintain that they are much better than the liquid. Thin, nervous, undeveloped women should try them. The Sun Drug Stores sell this wonderful preparation at 75c for the $1 size box; will fill mail orders. Send 2c stamp to Willard White Co., Chicago, Ill., for samples of Melorose Cream and Face Powder and Booklet FREE.

CAUTION Never accept a substitute. Many worthless articles are being offered and clerks claim they are "just as good." Ask for Willard White Co.'s. Then you are sure of the best. All the above goods are sold and recommended by The Sun Drug Stores.

CULTIVATING YOUR MEMORY.

No one is so humble-minded that he likes to be forgotten. We all resent the fact that our personality has not made an impression. Pretend indifference, as we may, it flatters our soul to be remembered.

The woman who forgets names and faces lacks social grace. The gift of remembering people often makes the difference between success and failure in making friends.

There are women who think it is rather smart not to remember names. They like the feeling of belonging to a small circle, and always look blank when meeting those whom they know but slightly.

This is foolishly short-sighted. The well-bred woman is she who tries never to forget a name. To be forgetful and unable to help it is misfortune; to assume forgetfulness is ill bred.

If a memory for persons is important to the woman in society it is indispensable to the business girl. In an office the gift of remembering any one once met is a greater factor for success than more showy talents.

A girl with this gift saved her employer thousands of dollars. A man passed through the outer office to the chief. The girl recognized him as a man she had seen before in a distant State. She knew him to be worthless, a crook, and when it leaked out later that he was negotiating an important deal with her firm, she told her employer the man's record.

If you will not cultivate this memory for the sake of ambition, do so because it will make you loved. A noted manufacturer, who has recently died, used to go through his factory every day, calling each one of his 350 employees by name. Is it strange that there were no strikes in that factory or that the chief's funeral was crowded with mourners from every station in life?

How often we hear, "Isn't it dreadful? I just cut So and So. I never can remember people." Others will tell you memory is a gift and make no attempt to correct forgetfulness.

You do not remember because you are heedless or you are vague. When you meet a stranger impress his appearance on your eye and his name on the brain by conscious effort. Look steadily at him during conversation and in the course of the talk repeat his name several times, and face and name will return when you meet.

Perhaps you forget from indifference. You think the person unimportant; so, instead of studying his features and mastering his name, you let your eyes and wits wander, giving perfunctory politeness, if not absolutely rude. Naturally, your mind is a blank five minutes after parting, as far as that person is concerned. Well, that question is one of judgment.

Besides cultivating powers of observation, study to link the name and face with some point of interest. It is better to be remembered in a half-hearted way than not at all. The woman who is liked is she who can say to the casual acquaintance: "How are you, Mrs. Jones? Did you ever get that dog we were talking about when I saw you last?"

Mrs. Jones is deeply flattered at this pleasing touch and will ever after sing her praises.

Often we will hear, "I never forget a face, but I cannot remember names." Sometimes it is the name that is kept while the face slips. Either is better than neither; but the disconnection must be overcome if a woman is to earn a reputation for good manners.

To fail to remember is a defect that can be remedied. See that you start on the cure at once.

Miss Maud Johnson, 17 years old, of Peoria, Ill., has just received from the Governor her official appointment as a deputy State Humane Officer for Peoria county. Miss Johnson is the youngest person in humane work in Peoria and the youngest State official ever appointed.

Vida Beauford, 13 years old, of Skowhegan, Me., has not been absent, tardy or dismissed once in the seven years she has been attending school.

MISSION PLAY NEARLY READY.

FIRST PRODUCTION ONE WEEK FROM MONDAY.

Allegory of Three Acts Depicts Rise, Glory and Decline of Franciscan Power—Interesting Facts About the Forthcoming Local Presentation.

Preparations are now practically completed for the most unusual dramatic event in the history of the Southwest, as far as local appropriateness and historic allegory are concerned, viz., the premiere of John Steven McGroarty's "Mission Play," a histrionic tableau based on the rise, supremacy and decline of the Franciscan missions, which brought civilization and religion to the shores of California, and established, in various localities, a culture and aristocracy approaching that of old Spain.

The "Mission Play" will first see the light on Monday evening, April 29, in the new Mission Theater at San Gabriel, which, for the past sixty days, has been building exclusively for this production. This playhouse shares with the Little Theater of New York the honor of being one of the most unique institutions of its kind in America. It is in all senses of the word a "regular" theater, being built in compliance with all known edicts of comfort and safety, having a comfortable, spacious and handsomely-decorated auditorium, and a stage complete in all appurtenances. The finishings and furnishings throughout are of that early-Californian description which we denominate "mission," and furnish "atmosphere" in advance of the curtain's rise.

Mr. McGroarty's drama is based upon fifteen years of study and the facts found in its author's own history of California.

The first act is laid in San Diego Bay, or, rather, upon the shores of that portion of it now known as "False Bay," where history alleges that the starving populace, the motley garrison of Spanish soldiery and a few handfuls of disheartened priests —all captained by that great zealot of the faith, Padre Junipero Serra — awaited the return of an expedition from the north, all some years before the outbreak of the American revolution. Upon the return of this expedition depends the founding of the chain of Franciscan missions. The dramatic action centers about the revolt of all the Europeans against Serra's authority, their discontent at conditions, and his sublime, Elijah-like faith in the purposes of God and the loyalty of the soldiers and sailors of the King of Spain.

The second act is laid at Carmel, many years later, and shows the mission era in its prime. Carmel was Serra's favorite of all the missions, and here bloomed the great idea of Franciscan industry, culture and holy aspiration in all its wonderful flower —a super-European engraftment upon the desert of the American West.

The final scene is in the ruins of Capistrano, just as we find it today, and as the great earthquake of 1812 left it. The spiritual significance of this act is very great. It is the sunset of mission glory, the shore-line where the pure river of Franciscan pioneering is finally swallowed up in the more practical sea of advancing Americanism. Mr. McGroarty's handling of the varying types here has been remarkable in effective characterization, and several great figures are introduced.

The general director is Henry Kabierske, originally of Munich, but for many years of the United States, and a producer of pageants, spectacles and dramas of very successful order. In fact, the biggest pageants yet given in the United States have been of Mr. Kabierske's planning and execution.

Mr. Kabierske will have the assistance, as patron and fellow director, of Princess Lazarovich-Hrebellanovich—the Eleanor Calhoun of other days, in California. Princess Lazarovich, whose success at the Odeon and the Comedie Francaise, in Paris, has been made a matter of public record in France, is not only an actress of the highest distinction, but a queen of letters as well, as several volumes are to her credit. She will participate in the production of the play and have an important character for her own creation, one of the most distinctive and vital in the piece, in the final act.

The stage will be under the personal charge of Ben Horning, an actor of experience and reputation. To Mr. Horning has been instructed the dramatic creation of the great Padre, Serra.

There will be an orchestra of fourteen instruments, under the direction of R. V. Musso.

Divertisement will be furnished, in one of the scenes, by a troupe of Castilian dancers, recently from Spain.

The old mission chorales—not now in use will be sung by a chorus of trained voices, as in the days of the Spanish-Mexican ascendency.

The total cast, including a company of genuine Indian supernumeraries, will aggregate more than 300 persons.

Performances will be given each evening, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

No Sunday performances have been announced.

SPRING MAID COMING.

Mason Plans Return Engagement of Sprightly Musical Show With Little Mizzi Hajos.

"Day Dreams, Visions of Bliss," has sung little Mizzi Hajos in "The Spring Maid" in many applauding cities of the country, and down dropped the words into the music and has made a circle of tune that grew and widened, that spread beyond the sounds of the fiddle, beyond the confines of the theaters, until if one listened with his mind's ears, he could hear echoed back the same strains she had sung at "The Spring Maid's" creation, as well as the dancing feet of America and those over seas from the cities of Europe, following the sway of this far-reaching melody.

"The Spring Maid" has been praised with unusual lavishness of phrase in many cities since it was heard in the West and the Pacific Coastland found it so good and said so in superlatives, and everywhere it has been recommended. It will be the first time that a great and expensive comic opera has made the long trip across the country twice in a single season, but the insistent call will bring back Fraulein Mizzi Hajos, and the organization of singers and all the elaborate scenic production to the Mason Operahouse for a single week, beginning Monday, April 29.

LUNA PARK.

All's fun and sensation at Luna Park these days. One hundred thousand patrons registered at the gates and testified in many ways their approval of the numerous new devices provided for their entertainment.

There is to be a novelty in which all may participate each week, the one provided for today being a log-rolling contest, the winner to receive a prize of $20.

Such has been the success of Princess Olga and her troupe of ferocious India leopards and jaguars that they will be continued indefinitely, the beautiful little Danish girl and her savage pets having made a sensational hit.

The Royal Italian Marine Band, of which Prof. Frank Gregory is the director, will give concerts every afternoon and evening from now on, the programmes including both popular and classic selections. This is the largest permanent band in the United States and includes such rare instruments as oboes, bassoons, French horns, harps and string bass, which insure perfect rendition of the most difficult of music.

The Crooks and Lawson Troupe of Clowns, a dozen in all, have been engaged for the entire season to make fun for the little folks. They will offer a comical novelty today in "Mary the Milkmaid," which is calculated to amuse all generations.

New ideas have been introduced for the hilarious "Nemo's Trip to Slumberland" that are bound to be effective. Then there are "The House That Jack Built," "Pluto's Domain," "The Falls of Niagara," "Fun's Prison," "Whirl of Joy," "Children's Half-Acre," "Davis's $15,000 Carousel, the augmented zoo, dancing, skating, billiards, bowling and forty more attractions which insure a joyful time to all who visit gay Luna Park.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The late Lord Lister of London gave evidence of extreme modesty regarding the perpetuation of his name and more merit than is frequently seen. Though standing at the head of the medical profession, and providing for the distribution of all his fortune of £60,000 to charitable institutions, he accompanied these bequests with the request that "I don't wish that my name should be in any way associated with these sums in the future." He bequeathed £16,000 ($50,000) each to four London hospitals and double that amount to Medicine. To the University of Edinburgh he left the insigna of the Prussion Order of Merit, and the English Order of Merit, and all his medals, diplomas, honorary gifts and distinctions. These latter include caskets containing the freedom of the cities of London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. Concernig these he says:

"I expressly declare it as my intention that the university authorities for the time being shall be perfectly at liberty to dispose of all or any part of the gift, for example, by having the medals melted down or the diplomas or other writings destroyed at any time and manner that may seem to them desirable."

His manuscripts and sketches are left to the Royal College of Surgeons after requesting that his nephew destroy or dispose of such as are of no paramount scientific interest.

Being done with his worldly possessions he did not want any one else hampered in the use and enjoyment of the same.

William Greenough, a lawyer of New York, is an honor to his community. Recently a poor woman named Mrs. Innocenza Pariagrecco, a poor woman with four children, was sent to Ludlow-street Jail in default of a judgment of $1000, obtained against her by Miss Fannie Samarco for alleged slander. The plaintiff was obdurate and insisted that the poor woman should go to jail, though she had to take her baby with her. The following morning Mr. Greenough informed Sheriff Harburger that he had read of the imprisonment of the woman and wanted to go on a bond for her release. A $2000 bond was quickly prepared by the Sheriff and approved by Justice Platzet, and the woman was permitted to go home with her husband. When the Sheriff told her of her freedom she fell to her knees and kissed his hands in her gratitude.

Though the recognition has been a tardy one, Conlon is still alive, and will enjoy the distinction that has come to him.

HOW I ENLARGED MY BUST SIX INCHES IN THIRTY DAYS

After I Had Tried Pills, Massage, Wooden Cups, and Various Advertised Preparations Without the Slightest Result.

A Simple, Easy Method which any Lady can use at home and quickly obtain a large and beautiful Bust.

BY MARGARETTE MERLAIN.

Well do I know the horrors and intense humiliation of being flat-chested, of having the face of a woman set on the form of a man; and I cannot find words to tell you how good I felt, and what a terrible load was lifted off my mind when I first saw my bust had really grown six inches in size. I felt like a new being, for with no bust I realized I was neither a man nor a woman, but just a sort of creature half way between.

The very men who shunned me, and even the very women who spoke to me carelessly by when I was flat-chested and had no bust, admired me most ardent admirers shortly after I obtained such a wonderful result with my bust. I therefore determined that women who were flat-chested could profit by my accidental discovery, if they have a bust like my own. I felt imposed upon by charlatans and fakirs who sold me all sorts of pills and appliances for enlarging my bust, but did me no good whatever. I therefore determined my unfortunate sisters should no longer be robbed by those "fakirs" and frauds, and I wish to warn all women against them.

The discovery of the simple process with which I enlarged my bust six inches in thirty days was due solely to a lucky accident which I believe was brought about by Divine Providence, and as Providence was so good to give me the means to obtain a beautiful bust, I feel I should give my secret to all my sisters who want it. Merely enclose two 2-cent stamps for reply, and I will send you particulars by return post.

I will positively guarantee that any lady can obtain a wonderful increase in her bust in thirty days or less, and that she can easily use the process in the privacy of her own home without the knowledge of anyone. Address Miss Margarette Merlain (Dept. 1180), 36 Great Portland street, London, W., England.

For instance, how strong, direct and simple is the handling of masses—the rocks and mountains—the purplish shadows—the brilliant sunlight falling on the green grass—in "Mission Canyon," perhaps the most interesting picture in the collection, though "Fog," a subtle rendering of heavy mists floating over mountains, is not far behind it in artistic interest and beauty. In its composition this picture has been made especially effective through parallel lines of sloping hills. "Wild Lilac," too, has interest and charm. The pale lilac color of the flowers in the foreground is repeated in the clouds and distant mountains, giving an effect of delicate harmony.

Another notable picture is "A Glimpse of San Bernardino Mountain." The lovely valley that leads to the snow-crowned peak is bathed in sunshine. To the left of a winding road is a eucalyptus tree that is well massed and modeled. Above the mountain are piled immense clouds particularly well painted.

In "Near Monterey," a picture with a color scheme of much refinement, we have sand dunes with cypress trees. The pale sky holds hints of lavendar. "Sands at Carmel" gives us the sweep of the beach seen from a height. We have a glimpse of blue tidal waters, and we look on the steady gray-blue of the distant mountains.

On the whole, here is an exhibition of pictures more than worth while. It will be held in Kanst's smaller gallery.

Pictures By Breuer.

A collection of four large landscapes of California and one of the Canadian mountains, by Henry J. Breuer, are now on view in the new studio of Oscar Maurer, at Del Mar, in San Diego county.

Breuer's virile canvases are seen all too seldom, for he is not a prolific worker. Sometimes the net output from his brush is only two or three canvases in a year.

In the collection on exhibition at Maurer's studio there is a superb rendition of Mt. Shasta, full of virile realism, yet endowed with the poetic fancy that only the true artist can express. A contrast in color, feeling and subject is "The Sand Dune," a picture in which the sky is particularly noteworthy. The slightly overcast heavens have in them the irridescence of finely disseminated rainbow hues, and this wonderful natural effect the artist has reproduced with great fidelity. It is an affect difficult to analyse, supremely difficult to put down on canvas.

Breuer's versatility becomes apparent when one turns from "The Sand Dune" to "Gray Day," which has been painted in the softest hues of his brush. Against a background of showery clouds from which much water may yet be expected, there stands forth a group of boldly outlined poplars painted in delicately modified greens. The picture reminds one of a Corot, though it is in no sense an imitation of the great Barbizonian's work.

Oscar Maurer's studio is on the main highway between Los Angeles and San Diego, directly opposite the Stratford Inn and only a few minutes walk from the railroad station at Del Mar.

ART NOTES.

The April number of the Print Collector's Quarterly, published by Frederick Keppel & Co., New York, is a memorial to Frederick Keppel, who died March 7, and who has done so much for the cause of good art in America. The contributors to the number are Benjamin Burges Moore, Campbell Dodgson, Francis Bullard, Frank Weitenkampf and Robert J. Wickenden, who write on the etchings and woodcuts of Piranesi, Durer, Felix Bracquemond, Jean-Francois Millet, and on the prints in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. There are no less than sixty-seven beautiful illustrations.

An exhibition of paintings which promise to be both interesting and comprehensive is that which is to be given in the Blanchard gallery, to open May 1 and to continue till the end of the month. It will be one of the important attractions offered by Los Angeles during the Shriners' Convention. Painters and sculptors from every part of Southern California, as well as artists in Arizona and New Mexico, have been invited to contribute.

Annie L. Pogson of Hollywood, painter of landscapes and flowers, has just started for a month or two of sketching in the Hawaiian Islands.

An exhibition of paintings by various artists is now on in the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street. Pictures by Franz Bischoff, Hanson Puthuff, William Koch, Jacob Koch, Frederick Roland Miner and others are shown.

At Kanst's gallery seven canvases from the able brush of Jean Mannheim are on exhibition. These are not new, for the most part, but belong to a former manner of painting. There are one or two strong landscapes and two delightful genres. Dutch interiors beautifully painted.

Twenty pictures by George Debereiner, Dutch interiors and landscapes, are now on exhibition in the art gallery of the Long Beach Public Library.

An interesting exhibition of landscapes and shore studies by Ralph Davison Miller is being held in the Steckel gallery.

Charles Gilman is driving for the twenty-sixth year on the Center Sandwich and Ossipee (N. H.) stage line a horse that will be 36 years old in June.

For three packages of his favorite tobacco T. H. Phillips of Kaylor, Pa., who is in the Armstrong County Jail at Kittanning, Pa., has given two deputy Sheriffs a quit claim deed for three pet ducks and one Virginia fox hound, which Phillips has at home. The transaction is in written form, describing the property in detail, and is signed and witnessed.

John Breen, a Cincinnati freight handler, made a wager with a Cincinnati saloon keeper a month ago that he could eat one dozen bananas each day for thirty days and top off the feat by eating five dozen hard-boiled eggs and two dozen raw oysters. He successfully finished the task and announced that he would begin in a few days to see how quickly he could eat another thirty dozen bananas. Breen weighs 190 pounds and is six feet two inches tall. Besides eating the bananas he undertook to drink at least five glasses of beer each night and several large portions of whisky. He did it all and got $10, the amount of the wager.

A pair of shoes in the possession of James O'Sullivan, a Boston merchant, have been lying around since the spring of 1859, when he purchased them in London. They are still serviceable, though out of fashion, and look good for another century or so of wear.

"YOUR MONEY BACK WITHOUT A QUESTION"

BLUNDERS IN ETIQUETTE.

Correct Social Usages Which Many People Fail to Observe Day by Day.

THE social code seems to be a secret into which a large number of people have not been initiated. The raw facts, or major divisions of its rules, seem generally known, but the minor divisions, the finer points of etiquette, have either escaped without being captured by the modern man and woman, or else in a goodly number of instances people are too lazy to observe these social statutes.

Mark the pitfall of the 5 o'clock tea; here if ever may one be "weighed in the balance and found wanting." A woman who had always passed as very well versed in etiquette, received cards to a "small tea, 4 until 7 o'clock." So she arrived promptly at 4 and departed at 7, because the cards read that way.

The hostess must beware of asking the ingenue to receive with her. One who had not taken due precaution in this item was horrified suddenly to see the young lady emerge from the tea-room carrying a dish of peppermints, which she passed straight around the drawing-room to the electrified guests.

Another instance is known of a young bride invited to "pour" at a tea. At 6 o'clock she arose from her post, made her way to the helpless hostess, and calmly stated. "You know, George is so very particular, and our soup goes on the table promptly at 6:30 o'clock, so I have to go."

The hostess herself is not at all times without fault. On one occasion the hostess had turned aside for a second and had not heard the name announced of the guest just entering. She failed, too, to recognize her, and murmured with a thoughtful smile, "Let me see, what name?" Again a hostess is known to have said to a guest, "Did you come in a carriage?"

All this recalls the story of the newly rich woman who said she was going to call on Mrs. Smith, for she heard she made such lovely faux pas, and she wanted to get the recipe.

It is imperative to keep track of one's social engagements, more for one's own peace of mind than for that of the hostess. A young man in New York was invited to attend a concert at which a friend was to sing in the home of a woman he had not met. He failed to note the date carefully, and when he arrived at the designated home he was surprised to find no rush of guests assembling, no carriages in waiting.

However, he boldly entered the hall and sent his card to the hostess named. In response she sent down the disconcerting message that though she did not know him she would be willing to see him. When she appeared he explained that he had come to the musicale

"Oh," she said, "that's not until tomorrow night."

And with the rudeness too well known to the society of now-a-days, she left him to make his way out of her home as best he could, and to come again, or stay away, as he liked, quite unconscious that thereby she had made herself the social blunderer rather than the man whose awkwardness she sought to condemn.

Here might have entered tact, the salvation of the social situation. Like the "quality of mercy," tact "is twice blessed, it blesseth him that gives and him that takes," and to the man or woman possessing it is accorded, rightful prestige. Tact, like charity, "covers the multitude of sins," but it must be "ready to wear," or it loses its individuality.

It is a truism of etiquette that those who express the most mannerism have frequently the least manners. Many who are anxiously grasping at the fringe of society never understand this fact. A young girl who received at a cotillion with some intimate friends after the dancing began, took out in one of the figures a young man who had newly entered the social arena of this most exclusive set.

"Aw," said the young man, with an attempt to make himself elegant, "Have I met you?"

The girl answered, brightly and quietly: "Why, as I was receiving I met everybody."

Needless to add, the young man was absent from other social functions which required an invitation. Had he been versed in the social code, he would have known that in any instance at a private ball it is quite good form for the woman to take a man out in the cotillion, without their having been former acquaintances; the inference, of course, is that being friends of the one hostess they are of the same social status; but it is not the man's privilege to carry the acquaintance beyond that dance.

Cotillions being under discussion, it may be remarked that while it is a compliment to your hostess to admire the favors and not to leave them on the chairs of the ball room, it is not good form to help one's self to one's neighbor's favors, particularly when she happens to be looking in the other direction.

Just why it should be deemed a joy to carry off four or five favors which never belonged to you, is unknowable, and can only be explained by the mad vanity of the average society woman. It is equaled in the man by the silly pilfering of small articles, such as a girl's handkerchief, or glove, as a memento of an occasion which, in twenty-four instances out of twenty-five, has no reason to be held in memory.

A girl at a small dance was distressed to hear a sudden rip and tear, and feel herself jerked suddenly back as she started to sit down. Turning quickly she saw that her partner, a mere acquaintance of hers, had stepped on her dress, and torn off about a yard of trimming. To her questioning glance, he replied: "That's all right, I wanted it for a souvenir." The dress was a costly one, and that dance was its first appearance, yet the girl was expected not only to overlook the destruction of the gown, but to consider such social blundering as subtle flattery.

Etiquette has made one decree to protect a woman's gown, and yet though the most crudely trained man knows it, he is ceaselessly careless about it; namely, that the woman follows the man going up stairs, and precedes him going down stairs, but like Mrs. Malaprop, it is usually a case of "you precede me, and I'll go before."

Nor is the man the only sinner in manifestations of carelessness; note the slight item of the bonbons chosen and provided at various social affairs. Fashion has long ago exiled the peppermint, yet it appears, and haunts us after. The caramel, however, is the banality which the worldly-wise and wary avoid. At a luncheon where caramels were passed, the entire assembly of women were silenced at once, through the impossibility of conversing properly and disposing of the woeful item of fare.

"Do you know," said one prominent woman to another, "I never could endure Mrs. Blank, and I'll tell you just why. When I met her, we were at a tea, and as the friend who introduced us drew one to her to present, Mrs. Blank deliberately picked up a caramel, and put it into her mouth. Everyone knows the result—and she saw me coming."

Needless to add, the young man was absent from other social functions which required an invitation. Had he been versed in the social code, he would have known that in any instance at a private ball it is quite good form for the woman to take a man out in the cotillion, without their having been former acquaintances; the inference, of course, is that being friends of the one hostess they are of the same social status; but it is not the man's privilege to carry the acquaintance beyond that dance.

The social lie has not been a social success, less because it is a petty thing, than because it proves too often the Biblical prophecy: "Be sure your sin will find you out." Many people know the story of the clever woman who, receiving from the servant the statement: "Madame says to say she is not at home," answered, "Please tell her I said I did not call."

Another instance not less mortifying was in that of a girl who said to a young man whose name she had forgotten. "Do you mind spelling your name for me? You know it is so difficult to pronounce." "Why, certainly," he answered affably, "Just S-m-i-t-h."

"I wanted to come and call yesterday, my dear, but I was too rushed," gushed the visitor.

"Yes," hurriedly added her little son, in a high treble voice, "and today she's got on her new dress, and she couldn't come in the old one, because you are such a snob, you know."

The lie has had to find its way out of society, for it was a useless and silly thing. The directness of the good business man or woman has taken its place.

Another hopeful step has been taken toward simplicity, in that the dining table is no longer the display counter for the family silver, odd pieces of glass, or such articles as may be handsome but are utterly, miserably useless. Guests at the dinner of the present fashion may take time to pay comfortable attention to the conversation, and are not forced to spend half their moments in carefully considering just what to do with the parade of knives, forks, spoons, and so forth, confronting them.

Inattention, however, is not hereby recommended, for that makes the opportunity for the evil genius who seems ready to destroy the social aspirant.

Inattention on the part of a bridesmaid wrought a sensation at an international marriage, which took place in New York in the last few years. When the moment arrived for her to take the bride's bouquet, the bridesmaid's gaze was wandering over the church; for a moment the bridal couple waited, then taking the bride's bouquet from her hand, the groom, with accurate aim, flung it straight at the inattentive bridesmaid.

This breach of good breeding is fortunately unparalleled in the records of foreign bridegrooms of the aristocracy; in fact, the balance has sometimes weighed the other way, for a bride of one or two seasons past, on leaving the carriage, asked her distinguished husband to help her with her train, and he promptly responded that that was the footman's place. And so it was, but there are moments when formality might be waived.

But, oh, that it should be so frequently waived in the matter of invitations, both in giving and accepting them. How is it that there is no open rebellion against the unutterable mortification, and profundity of embarrassment, into which a guest may be plunged by having no indication given with the invitation as to when the hour of departure arrives.

It may be noted that the woman who understands the etiquette of carfare is an oasis in the social desert. Few make the mistake of a man and woman who were of a social status which defined their position as at least "knowing better than they did." This man on entering a car with a lady said nervously, and perhaps absentmindedly: "Don't you pay the car fare, I will." And she said, in relating the incident: "I was so crom I just insisted."

A suggestion to the car companies which at least would receive the approval of the conductor would be to placard each car with: "The rule of etiquette infallibly decrees that of two women it is the married woman who pays the car fare. If neither is married the elder one of any two." This rule bears a straining in that the wealthier of two women usually pays. Herein the rule of kindness sways.

Representative Switzer, of Ohio, probably is the only man in Congress who can go back just one generation in his family and touch the eighteenth century. Switzer's father, who was 66 years of age when the present Congressman came along, was born in 1791.

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

Prof. Reinhard F. Wetsel of the College of the City of New York, who has discovered the weight of the earth to be 7,000,000,000,000 tons, has a wonderfully delicate instrument by which he now hopes to weigh the sun, the moon and the planets.

Prof. Ira Remsen, who, upon the resignation of the late Dr. Daniel C. Gilman, eleven years ago, succeeded him as president of the Johns Hopkins University, has sent his resignation to the board of trustees. Dr. Remsen's resignation was inspired by a longing to return to his more congenial research work, and he will retain his position as the B. N. Baker professor of chemistry at the university.

Miss Ada Comstock, who was last week elected dean of Smith College, is said to be the first woman to be dean of the faculty of that college.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, professor of homiletics at the Rochester Theological Seminary, has been selected as the new pastor of the Fifth-avenue Baptist Church, New York, known as John D. Rockefeller's church, to succeed Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked. He is a forcible speaker, young and ambitious, and among his friends it is understood that he is willing to accept the pastorate.

Prof. F. E. Nipher is engaged in an experimental study of the explosive property imparted to matter by suddenly draining from it the negative electric fluid.

Herman Frasch, inventor of a process for mining sulphur by melting it underground with steam and then pumping it to the surface, was recently presented with a medal for his achievement by the Society of Chemical Industry. This invention is said to have worked a revolution in the American sulphur market.

Solon Stylian John Vlasto, publisher of the Atlantis, a daily Greek newspaper, in New York, has just received papers from Constantinople, under royal seal, appointing him to the ecclesiastical office of archon (meaning prince) exarch general of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Rev. W. H. Detwiler of the United Evangelical Church, Mt. Holly Springs, Pa., has been appointed by the Lord Haven conference to the church at Marysville, Perry county, where forty-nine years ago he became a minister. Rev. Detwiler's ambition is to finish his fiftieth year of service at Marysville.

Samuel F. Emerson of Skowhegan, Me., has a hunter's horn said to be more than 200 years old. Mr. Emerson has had it for more than fifty years. He found it in Virginia in 1861, when on the battlefield. He was marching along with his regiment when he caught his foot, and pulled the horn out of the ground by the string to which it was attached. Inscribed on the butt are the words "Hunter's Horn."

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

INTERMEDIATE schools have been established in Oakland, closely following the lines for that work laid down in this city and in Berkeley, according to a "statement" received by the superintendent's office.

Vacation Schools.

Assistant Superintendent Bettinger's pithy, characterization of vacation schools is:

"It is vacation and it is school. We are giving the children vacation in school as well as school in vacation."

The course, in other words, appeals to all children — gardening, cookery, sewing, millinery, shop work, dramatics, story-telling, folk dancing and playground activities, no dry-as-dust grammar and rule of three.

Gardening will be given at Macy, Castelar, Seventh, Twentieth and Twenty-fourth-street schools, under Mrs. Larkey.

One school will be used for fifth and sixth-grade coaching work. This class will probably be held at the Grand-avenue school.

Some of the best teachers in the city are applying for the work, and splendid instruction will be given. Many hundred children are already applying for entrance.

Berendo-Street School.

The outdoor "auditorium" at the Berendo-street school Friday accommodated the whole school on the occasion of a talk by Miss Florence Longley, on "European Traffic." Miss Longley took the children on an imaginary trip to and through Europe, describing the various modes of locomotion employed, from the luxurious steamship to the humble donkey of Italy, describing cars, buses, ferry-boats and automobiles as they are used abroad.

After the address the Boys' Glee Club sang "Aloha," and afterward, in recognition of the Titanic tragedy, the whole school sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," many with tears.

Open-Air Study Rooms.

Open-air schools have made much progress during the past year. According to written reports from the various schools, filed in the superintendent's office, about half the schools of the city have been doing some work, if only calisthenics, out of doors, and the reports as to the effects are in all cases most favorable. Some principals favor alternate indoor and outdoor work, with short periods of each, while others believe the children should be out of doors all the time. The school gardening, of course, gives large opportunity for open-air work, and the children take to it with a zest. Where there are no facilities for outdoor work, as where the school grounds are too small, or there is no shade or provision for seating the pupils, the principals are voicing the desire for such opportunity.

From West Vernon-avenue school, where an open-air room has been running the entire year, Miss Bont, the principal, reports that only twice have the children been brought inside—once for cold weather, and once on account of hot weather. She reports the following marked results: "Better attendance, better spirit, better department, more and better work in a given time, absence of nervous tension, no catarrhal colds, to which several of the pupils used to be subject, and absence of coughing." The teacher of the room reports enthusiastically: "The experience has been most satisfactory, and both children and teacher have come to realize that we have truly lived as we were meant to live—out in the pure, fresh air."

A result which the principals of these schools incidentally report is a greater sympathy and interest among the children with animals and birds. The outdoor study naturally leads afield, too, and many are the nature-study trips taken as a result of this work.

From Fifty-second-street school the principal, Mr. White, reports: "We find the pupils in our open-air school free from colds, and in general good health. Their attendance is good. . . . The wainscotting should be higher, to protect limbs of pupils. We think that all sides should be open from the ceiling down about three feet."

Arthur Brown, principal of McKinley-avenue school, reports "considerable use of three balconies," and that "we have found the outdoor study very helpful to the pupils."

Miss Mary Biffer, principal of Staunton-avenue school, says: "We have taken a few of our slowest ones from the first grade, and have given them much outdoor work, and find their progress has exceeded that of pupils who have had more indoor work."

From Miss Mary Henderson, principal of Amelia-street school, comes the following testimony:

"We had one room we called our open-air room. In it, the entire year, we had but little fire, and windows were always wide open. Children sitting near windows wore wraps, sometimes. At first the children complained of being cold; later they liked it very much, and when they went to another room, fairly well ventilated in the usual way, they complained that they 'could not smell,' viz., could not breathe, in that room. We felt they did much better work in the open-air room."

James H. Hutt, Hostetter-street school, states: "There is abundance of shade under our large trees and plenty of green grass on which the pupils delight to sit. The number that can be successfully handled in a class in this way is smaller than in the school-room. However, the advancement of those who have the opportunity is very rapid."

Miss Mary McEachin says, regarding Rose Hill school: "The children consider it a treat to study out-of-doors, and we find them much more interested in their work, and more capable of doing it."

Mrs. Merrill, Marengo-Heights school says: "We have been using our roomy porches for overflow classes since the beginning of the year, and have found them a very great success. There is no drowsiness among children when working in the open air. They delight in picking up their chairs and getting outside."

One gathers from the reports that rooms which can be thrown wide open or closed entirely are the ideal sort of room for this climate.

Vernon-Avenue School.

Miss Sophie Davies, a young and popular teacher, will leave next week for an extended trip through Europe. She will remain in Wales, where she has relatives, for a year. A luncheon was given at the school by Miss Davies's fellow-teachers, on Friday, and she was presented with a silk umbrella, as a token of the affection in which she is held by pupils and teachers.

Time-to-Time Club.

A meeting of the "Time-to-Time Club," which is the feminine for Schoolmasters Club of Southern California, will hold its next annual meeting at Mt. Washington Hotel, Saturday, April 27, when a tea will be given all members. Delegates from Redlands, Pomona, Orange, Long Beach, Santa Monica and Pasadena will be present. Miss Pryne, the hostess of the afternoon, and Miss Meredith will entertain the members, recounting a recent trip around the world, and Miss Ross will give the valuable educational data which she collected in a recent visit to eastern schools.

Avenue 62 School and Social Center.

Owing to the co-operation of the school board, Social Center Hall now musters 500 comfortable seats. The next meeting, Saturday, April 27, will be under the direction of the travel section. Music will also form an interesting part of the programme. The following have been placed upon the Reception Committee for the occasion: Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Witherspoon, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wheat, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. William Rice and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newman.

—On the evening of May 1 a May cantata will be given by about sixty boys and girls under the direction of Mrs. Mary A. Wheeler, for the benefit of the Arroyoside Carnegie library site. An admission fee of 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults will be charged. The affair promises to be a tremendous rally for this splendid enterprise, which is so nearly accomplished.

For yet another reason May 1 will be a red-letter day at Avenue 62, as there is to be one of those delightful luncheons which are fast becoming a habit. This time the school gardens will supply the bulk of the good things to eat.

Open-air classes under the score of beautiful pepper trees on the grounds are becoming a common occurrence these sunny days. Consequently "Jack and Jill" begin to feel that teachers are "gettin' mighty like other folks."

Agricultural High School.

A course in farm machinery, from plows and harrows to engines and motors, is the rather tremendous addition to the Agricultural High School course for next year. Theer have been many demands for this course, growing naturally out of the present work. The course includes everything, from how to use to how to design and make them, with study of the most up-to-date models.

To farm carpentry will be added cement work, the building of aqueducts, etc., and study of drainage.

Next year a change in the length of periods will be made, making all agricultural laboratory periods a half day. This includes farm mechanics. For instance, a student will have horticulture for three days a week until noon, and dairying two days a week until noon, or vice versa, thus making him better able to concentrate on minute study.

Mr. Hall's class in agronomy is preparing to plant twenty or thirty varieties of beans and corn, with the end in view of finding the varieties best adapted to local conditions, testing out new varieties and getting the students acquainted with them and their habits of growth.

John M. Foley, the poet, read some of his charming verse before the students at assembly on Monday and the genial poet was received with acclaim and his work applauded to the echo.

Manual Arts High School.

The joint debate of Friday between San Diego and Manual Arts High School proved an interesting event. The subject discussed was, "Resolved that the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States should be repealed." The affirmative was upheld at San Diego by Verta Morrison and Philip Davenport, Manual Arts attacking through Theresa Goss and Earl Johnson. In the North Agusta Bergard and Berson Smith of San Diego opposed the proposition, Sewell Thompson and Buron Fitts defending. Miss Mary E. Rice chaperoned the party that went to hear the contest in the South. Manual Arts sadly relates that San Diego beat in both debates.

A sympathetic address was given last week to the girls at their assembly by Mrs. Nanno Wood. The attitude of a girl toward her life environment, the home, girl and boy friends, acquaintances and the public, and the conduct of the girl in public and home life were discussed before an attentive audience.

A party of the students visited the Sperry flour mills on Friday. Miss Mae McKinley, head of the domestic arts department, took a group of her students. All who went were delighted and interested in the process of flour-making.

A new electric radial power hammer is being installed in the blacksmith shop. It is a $700 machine, the first ever placed in a High School. It strikes from a half inch to a yard with a controlled force from a half pound to seventy-five pounds a blow, in any direction, down, sideways or upward. The first installment of the stoves being made for the Board of Education was successfully cast this week, to the huge satisfaction of the boys engaged.

On May 3 the girls' advanced gymnasium class will give a party in the gymnasium. Forty senior students compose this organization, only girls capable of doing advanced work being admitted to the class.

The esthetic dancing class is working on new classic dances. It may be noted in connection with this department that Mrs. Morgan will again take part as a member of the faculty of the summer session of the University at Berkeley.

The Polytechnic Girls' Gymnasium Club has invited the esthetic dancing class to a demonstration of their work at their auditorium on riday of this week.

Los Angeles High School.

State Superintendent of Schools Hyatt visited the school Thursday and Friday. He was especially interested in the La Brea fossils.

The girls' gymnasium classes in folk dances, in charge of Miss Rogers and Miss McGuire, will entertain the girls of the school some time next week. Dancing in native costume will feature the entertainment. The following dances are among those to be given: Russian, Cossack and Comarinskaia, German Rheinlander, Swedish Oxdaus, Irish Lilt, Scottish Highland Schottische. In addition, there will be the hornpipe and minuet.

A visiting day for mothers will be held on the afternoon of May 3. After addresses of welcome in the assembly by Principal Housh, Mrs. Dorsey, vice-principal, and Dr. Lillian Ray of the faculty, adjournment will be taken to the lunch-house, where tea will be served. A general inspection of the various departments of the school will also be made by the visitors.

The classes in botany in charge of Miss Palmer and Miss Foshay explored the Eagle Rock foothill country Friday afternoon, making a careful inspection and list of the wild flowers of that region. Specimens were also brought back for laboratory study.

Charles Rogers, an old L.A.H.S. boy, has just been elected captain of the University of California tennis team. V. Sheldon, who graduated from the school last year, was one of the players largely responsible for winning the intercollegiate tennis championship for Stanford this year.

The school will probably send a relay team to the annual prep school track meet held under the auspices of the University of California.

The classes in dramatics will hold a Shakespearean carnival, April 26, in celebration of the author's birthday anniversary. Each of the four sections is to present a sketch from one of the poet's plays. These will be followed by a presentation of the "Merchant of Venice."

The entertainment will be held in the assembly hall both afternoon and evening.

The proceeds will be used as part of a fund to purchase a Shakespearean wardrobe. The first gown to be bought will be seen in the play of the 26th. It was formerly worn by Mme. Modjeska. The other gowns to be purchased were made by Modjeska's costumer.

Polytechnic High School.

High school operas have always the advantage of a charming freshness in the appearance of the chorus girls and their costumes, beside a keen interest on the part of the audience in each and every member of the whole cast. But the "Royal Peddler," sung Thursday and Friday evenings by the glee clubs of Polytechnic, in the auditorium of that school, did not need to depend on adventitious aids for its success. Youthful beauty and personal interest were not by any means lacking, but they were supplementary to really exquisite music and good acting. The principal roles were so well sung that the audience could hardly get enough of the melody, and the prince and princess, Norman McPhail and Faith Guy, were recalled time after time. Their acting, while perhaps a bit too restrained for realism, was dignified and pleasing. Burnell Tunison made a dominating figure as King I-am-it, and furnished the humor of the piece. His singing was good, as was also that of Sarah Crosby, the court chaperone. Katharine Sanborn, as the princess's friend, tripped daintily through the play. Leland Rebber, Don Cameron and Tracy Cheatham, as gentlemen of the court, added humor, melody and movement. A jolly quartette of musical dancers was composed of Hope Nash, Alice Goldsmith, Dick Morgan and Don Cameron. Their specialty entitled, "Flutter Little Bird," made a decided hit. Likewise, the up-to-date interpolation of the Florodora Sextette was greatly enjoyed.

No little credit is due the Polytechnic Orchestra, under Mrs. Parsons's leadership, for the almost faultless support it gave throughout. The scenery of the first act was designed by Dick Morgan, a post-graduate student; and the artistic green and white programmes were decorated by Bayard Taylor, a Poly senior, and printed by the Messrs. Wood, the "Twin Printers," recent graduates of Poly. Miss Lucile Dickson and Miss Sallie Mason of the music faculty managed the stage business with excellent effect.

Prof. Rockwell D. Hunt of U.S.C. addressed the students of economics and sociology Monday on "The Age of New Social Conscience." Dr. Hurt defined the social sciences, outlined the development of social conscience and the relation of the individual to society, and emphasized the need of study of these sciences, in order to aid in solving the great complex social problems of today.

This excellent lecture was the first of a series which has been arranged for the benefit of the students. The next will be given next week, on Tuesday, when Superintendent Francis will be the speaker.

Miss K. Courtenay Johnston of the English faculty, was called to Virginia on business this week. Miss Ethelyn Edwards, formerly of the Pennsylvania Normal, has taken her place for the rest of the term.

The Girls' Gym Club and the senior girls' dancing class furnished entertainment at a girls' aud call Friday The programme was opened by a "Bumble Bee Polka," given by Alice Rogers, Olive Yoder, Nina Williams and Rena Swinnerton. The white-clad girls in the graceful dance formed a lovely picture indeed, and delighted the audience. Another feature was a solo dance by Edith Silkworth, which was heartily applauded. Other folk dances by the senior girls and the Gym Club followed, and showed how much has been accomplished in dancing at Polytechnic. Miss Odman, instructor in gymnasium and dancing, prefaced the programme with a few remarks explaining the fold dances and emphasizing the fact that cultivation of grace should be a part of every girl's training Hollywood High.

Hollywood has again had a successful folk dances and emphasizing the fact in the championship debate. South Pasadena has the next highest per cent., and the two schools will debate the question, "Resolved that land should have the burden of taxation in California." Gertrude Young and Walter Corey will represent Hollywood on the affirmative side of the question. The debate is set for May 21.

A class for special oratorical work has been organized in Hollywood High, under the direction of the English department, and at the Monday assembly three members of the class spoke before the student body. The subject of the talk was John Burroughs, the different speakers touching on phases of his life and work. The speakers were John Lawton, Genevra Ryerson and Victoria Avakian.

A tennis tournament has been in progress for two or three weeks, and interest has run high, because of the large number of entries. The tournament closed with Sanford Kellogg as champion of the school. He, with Arthur Alder, went to Nordhoff to represent Hollywood in the annual tournament held by the Thatcher school.

Forefathers' Day was observed Friday by a special programme in assembly, and by the singing of patriotic songs by the school. Marie Young gave a very interesting resume of the events leading up to the War of Independence, and Stella Messenger read in a pleasing and acceptable way "The Ride of Paul Revere."

My Springtime Garden.

I know what it's like in the springtime
In Paris, along by the Seine,
And I've spent long days in the sunlight
In the gardens of lovely Touraine.
I've dreamed, oh such dreams, in the perfume
Where blue vies with blue to enchant.
And I've gathered the golden mimosa
In the land where eyes look aslant.
But the garden that grows all that's dearest
Is a garden that lies near at hand.
There I watch for the birth of each blossom,
As I watch them in no other land.
I wait for the glow of a jonquil,
Whose color reflects in the sun,
The joy of the blossoms awaiting,
In the garden that springtime begun.
I know where the flowers grow sweetest,
All purple and yellow and green;
Where butterflies sip from the iris
Their measure of perfume unseen.
I've wandered in gardens a-plenty
Eastward and back to th West.
And the garden that grows 'neath my window
Is the garden that pleases me best.
—[Kate Meldram Buss in Boston Transcript.

Rev. J. H. Wicksteed, vicar of Bexley, Kent, Eng., has presented to the Wesleyan Methodists of Gravesend and Dartford circuit a tree from the vicarage garden, a sapling of the old oak under whose branches John and Charles Wesley, with George Whitfield, often met in friendly conference. It is believed that Charles Wesley composed some of the hymns under its shadows.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Answer: The tightest cough can be loosened in one hour by using the following: Get from your druggist a 2½ oz. package of essence mentho-laxene and make according to directions on bottle. This will break up any cold and loosen the tightest cough and soon cure by its laxative tonic action.

"Henry" writes: "If you can prescribe anything that will cure my stomach trouble and constipation, please do so. My breath is bad and I am irritable and cannot sleep."

Answer: You can be very easily cured of your troubles by taking tablets triopepsine. This is the most scientific and satisfactory treatment for the stomach and if taken according to directions you will soon be able to eat a hearty meal and not have any distress afterwards. Your constipation will be cured and your whole system will be put in a fine condition.

"John" says: "What can I do to gain an appetite? I do not eat and am getting thin and weak. Please advise a remedy."

Answer: The best tonic that I know of is made by mixing 5 ozs. of syrup of hypophosphites comp. and 1 oz. tincture cardomene comp. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful before each meal. You will soon gain flesh and your appetite will return.

"A. L. T." writes: "I am constantly embarrassed by my excessive weight. I have tried exercise and diet but they do not help. If you know of some harmless and effective medicine please publish."

Answer: To reduce your weight get 5 ozs. of aromatic elixir and 1 oz. of glycol arbolene. Get these two ingredients separately to avoid any substitution. Mix and take a teaspoonful for three days after each meal, then take two teaspoonfuls. This is a perfectly harmless and sure remedy for obesity. Many women have written that they reduced their weight a pound a day after the first week.

"Geraldine" writes: "I am troubled a great deal with headaches, dizzy spells, dark spots before my eyes, twinges of rheumatism. Can I be helped at all?"

Answer: You can not only be "helped" but you can be "cured" of all the troubles you mention. You need three-grain sulphur tablets (not sulphur.) which are packed in sealed tubes and contain full directions for use. They are made of sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines. If these are taken regularly they purify the blood, stimulate the liver and bowels into healthy action and will gradually effect a cure.

"Mother"—Bedwetting in children is usually a disease which can be cured by the use of the following: Tincture cubebs 1 dram; tincture rhus aromatic, 2 drams; comp. fluid balmwort 1 oz. Mix and give the child 10 to 15 drops in water one hour before each meal

Eloise writes: "I have tried all sorts of tooth pastes and powders but cannot find one to cleanse and whiten the teeth and preserve the gums. Please give a harmless formula."

Answer: Most ready prepared tooth powders contain a strong flavoring which is harmful. You can make three-fourths of a pound, equal to two or three dollars worth, for less than one dollar. Buy separately 5 ozs. precipitated chalk, 1 oz. powdered soap; 2 ozs. powdered sugar and 2 ozs. antiseptic viiane powder. Mix altogether thoroughly and use twice daily. This prevents decay and purifies the mouth.

"Maud" writes: "Can anything be done for an itching scalp. My scalp is also covered with dandruff and I am in great distress."

Answer. You can very easily be cured of an itching scalp, also dandruff if you will get a 4 oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and use according to the directions given on the jar. Two or three applications have been known to cure. Try it fairly and you will advocate its use to your friends.

"Ellen K." writes: "I am not fleshy enough. I should weigh 20 pounds more. I am ashamed of my thinness and wish to become plump and attractive. Can you help me?"

Answer: Yes, I can help you "Ellen K." and many others in the same plight. A thorough course of treatment with three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will gradually give you more red and white blood corpuscles adding to your weight, health and color, giving you pink cheeks, red lips and sparkling eyes. These tablets are packed in sealed cartons with directions. Do not expect results too quickly. It takes time to change the cells and tissues of the body, but you can depend on gaining weight if you are persistent.

"D. E. F." writes: "If you know of anything that I could take to cure my rheumatism, please tell me as I suffer all the time. Am getting worse all the time."

Answer: Take the following and you will soon be cured of your rheumatism. This is the best remedy that I have ever known for this trouble. Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, ½ oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs. Mix by shaking well and take one teaspoonful at meal times and again at bed time.

"Electrics" will give good service in all kinds of weather when equipped with WOMEN'S WORK. WOMEN'S CLUBS.

THE women of today smile rather pityingly over the old-fashioned church bazaar and supper when the faithful few expended $5 worth of time and material to secure $10 worth of cash—to say nothing of the strength, energy and "feelings" that were thrown in. But are our wise and society women of the present day any wiser? Are not many of the elaborate dramatic and costume "benefits" which are daily resorted to secure dollars for this or that worthy cause a tremendous waste of time, force and nerves? The item of expense entailed in preparing an entertainment participated in by from fifty to 200 people; the time spent in drilling amateurs to execute professional stunts; the nervous strain of trying to give each individual performer a "star" part; the wearing and exasperating labor of securing "publicity" and selling tickets—does it pay?

Woman's City Club.

Dr. James A. B. Scherer of Throop will address the Woman's City Club at its noonday luncheon on Monday, the topic being "Efficiency."

Browning Centenary.

The Browning study classes, under the guidance of Miss Helen Brooks, formerly teacher of English and literature at Mills College, will unite on Saturday, May 4, in an afternoon session in honor of the poet's hundredth birthday anniversary. They will have a reading of "In a Balcony," by Miss Caroline Abrams, followed by a social hour. The classes of Miss Brooks this month studying "Paracelsus," considering it from the artistic, scientific and historical standpoints.

Good Work.

The northwest section of the city has two active women's organizations, both of which are principally devoted to social service work. The Park Civic League is working particularly along civic lines, while the Temescans Club, which also meets in the Park Clubhouse, is doing social settlement and social center work largely through its president, Mrs. J. E. Coleman. Aside from the regular club work, or rather as a part of it, a large amount of benevolent work is accomplished. Money and clothing are distributed; assistance is rendered in sickness, death and distress; a large number of crippled and afflicted children are looked after and given needed attention. Many deserving families have been given necessary care and homes and others helped secured to put them on their feet. Much work is done in connection with Miss Best and the visiting doctors of the Echo Park district.

At the regular meeting of Rosecrans Club on Wednesday members met in Rush and All Club were received in a body, that organization having formed with the Rosecrans Club. Mrs. Mary Kenney gave an entertaining talk, illustrated by a map, showing our harbor and the proposed improvements to be made there. The club accepted an invitation to decorate the chariot of the Queen for the May Day parade, one of the playgrounds to be the new Hazard recreation park. The next meeting will be next Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Brat, No. 3856 Woodlawn avenue. This will be a card party.

College Woman's Club.

The annual meeting and election of the College Woman's Club will occur Tuesday at the home of Miss Louise Lee, South Pasadena. The Nominating Committee has named as officers for the coming year, Mrs. S. E. Kiser, president; Miss Mary Bingham, vice-president; Mrs. Burt Olin, corresponding secretary; Miss Ethel Dickey, recording secretary; Miss Ruth T. Updyke, treasurer; Mrs. Edwin Hill, the retiring president, to sit upon the executive board as honorary members. After the election the dramatic section, of which Mrs. Burnett is chairman, will present a little Japanese play, "The Mikado of Yeddo," under the direction of Miss Maud Howell. Refreshments will be served and members are privileged to bring guests.

School Women's Club.

The "From Time to Time" Club, an association of women teachers of the public schools of Southern California, which has hitherto made its regular meetings social in character, has recently decided to adopt literary work as well as a play, point of view. Committees have been appointed to outline various phases of work which the club proposes to take up. Miss Susan Dorsey, vice-principal of Los Angeles High School, is chairman of the directors and as a member of the council of education will keep the organization in close touch with what is being considered by the latter Board. At the recent meeting of the council in this city Miss Howe, of the northern district of School Women, brought the greetings of this body to the newly formed From Time to Time Club. The board of directors of the club, which now numbers more than 100 members, includes Mrs. Dorsey, Miss Whitman, president; Miss Una Hivner, secretary; Miss Estelle Leach, treasurer, and Miss Barbara Harwood of Los Angeles Normal.

An Palomo Entertainment.

Under the auspices of the ladies' auxiliary of the G.C.P.A., Lou Wescott will give his illustrated lecture "Our American Desert Travelers." He will be assisted by his trained dog and by his stereopticon in showing the perils that the traveler who ventures upon the Colorado and Mojave deserts must encounter. The proceeds of this lecture, which is to be given at the Woman's club on Saturday evening, April 27, are to be used in placing signs along the way to the water holes in the desert. Mr. Beck has devoted much time and service to this cause and has stated that every sign so placed is the means of saving a human life. The public is urged to encourage this interesting lecture and help in the needed work along.

Women's Club, Hollywood.

Lectures from American humorists will be given at the Woman's Club of Hollywood every Wednesday afternoon, and the following were allowed to guess as humorists chosen were Frank Stockton, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Bret Harris, Myra Kelley, James Riley and Dooley. Those who guessed were Mrs. H. G. Theodosia Macomber, Mrs. R. O'Brien, Mrs. L. G. Somers, Mrs. W. Harper, Mrs. Abbie D. K. Patterson and Miss Higgins.

Next Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock the second of the series of luncheons which are in honor of the A. L. Leonard of the directors and are designed by the president, Mrs. Calvin Smith, to promote sociability. The luncheon will be followed by a lecture upon "Conservation of the Forests," by Mrs. Foster Elliot, with slides furnished by the United States Forest Service. This civics programme should fill the hall with the newly enfranchised eager to learn about another department within the scope of their new dignity, but, lest it should not, the president emphasized the "moving-picture" feature of the programme, which she announced as especially fine.

Dramatic Section, Ebell Club.

John Galsworthy's new and much-discussed play, entitled "The Pigeon," will be the topic for class discussion at the meeting of the dramatic department of the Ebell Club on next Thursday morning at 10 a.m.

Copies of the play are available, and it is desired that many will read it before the meeting takes place. Mrs. Maynard, who has been absent for some weeks, has returned, and will speak at the opening of the meeting on Granville Barker's play, "The Madras House."

Ruskin Art Club.

Mrs. I. L. Hubbard presided at the Wednesday session of the Ruskin Art Club. The lesson treated of the revolution of Belgian painting in 1850. Mrs. W. H. Housh spoke of Charles de Groux, who haunted hospitals and slums, choosing for his subjects the sick, forlorn and famished portion of humanity. Mrs. Housh spoke also of Henri de Braekeleer, who has been called the Peter de Hough of Belgium. Mrs. H. T. Fennel gave an account of the life and work of Constantin M. Meunier, who labored among the peasantry in order to portray them faithfully, and who in later life became a noted sculptor. The work of Charles Verlat, whose heath pictures are noted for their glow, was discussed by Mrs. J. A. Reckard, who spoke also of Alfred Stevens, the famous colorist and marine painter. Miss Belle Smith spoke of the animal painters, Verboeckhoben and Her Verwee, and others. Mrs. E. S. Hodgin gave by special request a review of the latest novel by Maarten Maartens, entitled the "Price of Lys Doris."

An interesting programme has been arranged for the meeting on April 24, when the election of officers will be held. This is also the date of the monthly luncheon, at which Mrs. Elizabeth Brown Miller will be guest of honor. Mrs. Miller will present to the club Maeterlinck's drama, "The Bluebird."

ACTIVE WOMEN

Mrs. A. M. Lewis of Fort Worth, Tex., 16 years old and thrice married and divorced, has now intrusted her happiness to a fourth husband, whose name is Glass.

Mrs. Jane Dowie, widow of the late John Alexander Dowie, first apostle of Zion, is attempting a reconstruction of the Zionist movement in Chicago. She says she is divinely inspired to carry out the work her husband began.

Miss Alberta Read, of the Agricultural Department, has invented a new system of testing tea, which is destined to make foreign adulterators look sharp to avoid trouble. Her plan has been adopted by the United States government.

Mrs. McKee, daughter of President Harrison, has been elected an honorary member of the alumni association of the second oldest woman's college in this country. This college was founded at Oxford, O., in 1830, and Mrs. McKee's grandfather, Dr. J. W. Scott, was its first president.

Dr. Ruth Hume, the missionary supported by the Wellesley students at Ahmednagar, India, has returned to this country for a year's vacation. Dr. Hume was graduated at Wellesley in the class of 1897, after which she studied in Philadelphia and then took a medical course in the New England Hospital for Women.

Dr. Helen Stoecker is the founder of the Union for Motherhood Protection, the one women's organization in Germany which is said to have the Kaiser's hearty approval. At the Dresden Hygiene Exposition of 1911, Dr. Stoecker organized a special exhibit of the union and later brought about the first international congress for the Protection of Mothers.

Miss Margaret E. Knight of Boston has eighty-seven patents to her credit. At the age of only 12 years she perfected an improvement on the shuttle of weaving looms in the cotton mills of Manchester, N. H. Her latest invention is a sleeve valve motor which is looked upon to bring her more money than any other contrivance she has placed on the market.

Music.

GREATEST OF THE CARMENS.

CALVE TO SING HERE DURING COMING WEEK.

Signor Gasparri, Her Husband, Is Said to Be a Lyric Tenor of Much Promise and Ability—Programme Will Include "Carmen" Scenes in Full Costume.

That the name of Emma Calve is still an exceedingly valuable one is attested by the many patrons of music who throng the box office windows at the Auditorium to secure seats for the coming appearance of the diva on next Tuesday evening and at the Saturday matinee. The Calve concerts possess a certain artistic value which cannot be secured in any other way; it is part concert, part operatic performance, and part popular concert, running the gamut of the Calve successes of the last few years.

The concerts given in San Francisco during the past week are counted impressive. The critics and other hearers give evidence that Mme. Calve is still in possession of a large degree of her remarkable artistry; her voice is full, sonorous and warm. She still thrills her listeners with the power of unconquerable personality, and the phrasing of important musical passages is said to be as delightful as ever.

Sig. Gasparri is a lyric tenor with dramatic leanings; the accompanist, Brahm Van den Bergh, is considered an exceptionally talented pianist, and a soloist of high merit. All the gems of the two operas are sung and the complete story of Bizet's romantic work and Mascagni's dramatic composition are told. Both operas are given with complete costume and scenic effects and all that is lacking is the orchestra and chorus. Calve's performance of "Carmen" is unique in that it has never been approached on the operatic stage, and she has become indelibly associated with the lovely cigarette girl of Bizet's masterpiece. The Calve concerts will practically close the season of visiting artists. The programme: Tuesday night, piano solo, paraphrase on "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn-Liszt,) Brahm Van den Bergh; arioso from the opera "I Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo,) Signor Gasparri; stances from the opera "Sapho" (Gounod,) Mme. Calve; piano solos (a) Berceuse (Chopin,) (b) Der Fledermaus (Strauss-Schutt,) Brahm Van den Bergh; selections from the opera "Carmen" (Bizet,) sung and acted by Mme. Calve and Sig. Gasparri in costume with scenery, etc. Carmen, Mme. Calve; Don Jose, Sig. Gasparri.

Saturday afternoon: Piano solo "Prelude" (Rachmaninoff,) romanze from first act and romanze from third act "La Tosca" (Puccini,) Sig. Gasparri; air "La Mysoli" from "The Pearl of Brasil" by David; "Serenade," (Gounod.) Mme. Calve; piano solo, "Etude" (Moszkowski,) Brahm Van den Bergh; selections from "Cavalleria Rusticanna" (P. Mascagni,) with scenery, costumes etc. Santuzza, Mme. Calve; Tiruddo, Sig. Gasparri.

British Museum Great Catalogue.

[London Outlook:] A most valuable service to readers has been performed by Dr. G. K. Fortescue, the keeper of the printed book department at the British Museum. This consists in the preparation of a subject-index, which has now reached five volumes, contains nearly 3000 entries, and covers all the modern books received at the museum from 1880 to 1910. The general catalogue of the museum, begun by Panizzi in 1837, is by far the largest of the kind in the world, and occupies 393 volumes. It is, however, purely a catalogue of authors, and therefore of small use to those who require a book on a particular subject, but do not know the names of the authors who have written on that subject.

Youth and Charm.

Youth was a goddess in the ancient days,
Worshipped and loved as never since; the Greek
Adoring lissom form and beauty sleek,
Ever on youth poured out pathetic praise,
Lamenting even in immortal phrase
Brief life and briefer beauty, nor would seek Beyond the rounded limb and glowing cheek
The loveliness of mind and soul, that stays—

The loveliness that ripens with long years;
Bright eyes less bright become; the form, less lithe,
Yet battles braved and errors paid with tears,
And griefs that chasten forward hearts and blithe,
Shall clothe the soul with gracious charm and power;
More precious than fair Youth's delightful dower.

—[William Addison Houghton, in Boston Transcript.

OVER THE SEA.

Sir Bertrand Dawson, physician to King George, who is visiting the hospitals of the United States, refuses to be interviewed. "We physicians in England," he said, "are very much more strict about that sort of thing than the American. In fact, we never do it in our country. We consider American physicians commit a grave breach of ethics in being too talkative in the newspapers."

Sir Alfred East, the well-known English landscape painter, and a member of the Royal Academy, has arrived in this country to officiate as a juror in the annual art exhibition of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh. Sir Alfred has visited the United States several times to act in an official capacity for the Carnegie Institute.

Juan Melia, editor of the Spanish Socialist magazine, Vida Socialista, has been condemned to pay a fine of $400 and to serve eight years in prison for publishing a cartoon which represented King Alfonso as an extremely thin huntsman with excessively thin legs.

A great many people are surprised to hear that Sir Frederick Treves has resigned all official positions on the British Medical Army Board. He says that he does not want to stand in the way of others who want to get on. This is the course he pursued when he retired from active practice when he was at the height of his fame. He is only 59, but most people think that he is tired of his hard life and wants to rest and take things quietly.

Lady Ashburton, the former New York beauty, caused 5000 moles to be trapped on her English estate and their skins made into coats and muffs for her three American sisters. The coats contain 800 skins each and the muffs each between eighty and ninety skins.

Sir William Maxwell Aitken, one of the new members of the House of Commons, though many times a millionaire, began life selling life insurance. The son of a Canadian Presbyterian minister, he was without means, and in college wrote insurance whenever and wherever he could to help pay his way.

KING OF LIFE READERS

I was born with a strange and remarkable power—power not meant to gratify the idle curious, but to direct, advise and help men and women who are in trouble and suspense concerning the every day affairs of life.

$5.00 LIFE READING $1.00 (Reduced fee for this week only.)

I give just as careful and complete a revelation of your business, love and domestic affairs for $1.00 as I do for my regular fee of $3 and $5. I am taking the reduced fee plan to introduce myself and my work more extensively to the people of this city, where I have established my permanent home.

MY WORK SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

While I have the indorsements of hundreds of the most noted men and women of America, I deem them of little value, since I stand alone upon the merits of my work. Any person who can believe their own eyes and ears cannot help but know that I am a man of high ability and indisputable power excelled by no man on earth in this line.

MASTER OF STRANGE POWERS

There are strange and mighty forces which men and women can use to better their conditions. These forces are called personal magnetism, mental telepathy, semi-hypnotic suggestion, etc. All this I teach to any one who wishes to use it for a legitimate and honorable purpose.

WHAT I DO FOR $1.00

I tell what condition your business is in and how to promote it. I tell you of any move, journey, position or change of any kind which may be before you and how to act to obtain the best results. I tell you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to shun. In short, I tell you everything you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word.

I guarantee to develop mediumship to its fullest degree in those who have any latent power whatever. If I do not succeed as above stated, I ask no fee for my work and time whatsoever.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

K. B.: Regardless of your age, I would not recommend the use of face powder. It clogs the skin's pores and in time will make your complexion rough and anything but handsome. The best kind of a beautifier is made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This will whiten and refine your skin. It takes away that oily, shiny look better than powder and does not show or rub off so easily. This lotion will clear your complexion and give to it a wholesome, charming tone, also affording the skin splendid protection from chapping in the wind.

Mrs. F. B.: To have a head of perfect hair you must keep your scalp absolutely clean and free from dandruff. If you will shampoo twice a month with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing thoroughly with clear water, you will find your hair will always be fluffy, bright and clean. This shampoo is so far superior to others that the best class of hairdressers use it almost exclusively. It makes the hair dry quickly without any signs of streaking, brittleness or other bad effects which are caused by using soap. There is nothing like it for removing dandruff, cleansing the hair and giving to it that much-desired fluffiness and brilliance.

C. P.: Your pimples, sallowness and hollow cheeks are due to a run-down condition of the body. The only way to remove these ills is to clear your blood of its impurities. Dissolve one ounce kardene and ½ cupful sugar in ½ pint alcohol, then add hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. This is a splendid system tonic and will soon restore the look of perfect health to your face, fill out your cheeks and give you the energy and ambition which only a healthy person has. It is a wonderful blood-purifier, energizer and liver regulator.

M. D.: You can make your hair grow in thick and abundant by rubbing into the scalp twice a week the following tonic: Mix together ½ pint alcohol, 1 ounce quinsoin and ½ pint cold water. This will show better results in a short time than all the "hair-growers" on the market put together. Oils and vaseline really do very little good, but this tonic will be a most pleasant surprise to you in its beneficial results. It removes dandruff, stops scalp-irritation and checks falling hair almost instantly.

Miss G. G.: You will find nothing as good to strengthen your weak eyes, clear them of redness and make them brilliant and beautiful as this simple eye tonic: Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of water and put a few drops in each eye twice a day. Many very successful oculists recommend this fine tonic owing to its great merit. There is nothing better for treating granulated lids and it acts very quickly.

Mrs. E.: It is a very simple matter to remove every trace of hair from your chin. Make a paste with a little powdered delatone and water, then spread on hairy surface and in two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs will have vanished. This is a painless and certain way in which to banish hairy growths.

Juanita: The cost of fat-reduction need not be high. If you will buy 4 ounces of parnotis and dissolve it in 1½ pints hot water, you have the best and safest fat-remedy known. Take a tablespoonful before meals and your excess fat will soon be gone. No dieting or violent exercises are necessary and your skin will remain smooth and unwrinkled. Parnotis is absolutely harmless and has worked wonders where other remedies failed.

A. L. M.: I do not like to recommend any of the prepared cold creams, as most of them are too greasy and are likely to cause hair to grow on your skin. Try this: Stir 1 ounce almocoin and 2 teaspoonful glycerine in ½ pint cold water. This will make an excellent cream that will cleanse your skin and keep it smooth, velvety and free from chapping. It will keep your complexion radiant, perfectly clear and free from blackheads and wrinkles.

MADAME CHRISTIAN HAUGE.

Widow of the First Minister from Norway After the Separation from Sweden Has Become a Permanent Resident of Washington.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Ten years ago the splendid boulevard which stretches from Massachusetts avenue after it passes Twentieth street was a meadow where calm-eyed bovines stood knee deep in grass and roamed at ease down to the edge of the ravine which marks off the pretentious Tiber Creek of the old days, now Rock Creek and the confines of the National Park. At present, on each side of the avenue after it curves about the statute of Gen. Philip Sheridan are white marble homes which more closely suggest the splendid architecture of Paris on the boulevards, which extend in points from the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile than anything the American capital can show. Leaving the wide circle on a sunny day, one can walk first on excellent white flag paving and then on macadamized roads far into the country and see the potential greatness of the capital in this particular section. The ground lies high and rises pleasantly as the journey leads to the west until at length a broad sweep of the river is presented and the red gabled roofs of adjacent country mansions make a feature of the landscape. Five years ago when the Minister from Norway, then recently married to Mrs. Frederick Joy of Louisville, the widow of a noted capitalist of that city, selected this spot, it seemed hopelessly removed from the social life of the city and entirely suggestive of honeymoon isolation. Now, Mme. Hauge's beautiful home is but one of many, close to neighbors on each side, while the street stretches in paved and level perfections not only before her door, but many blocks beyond.

Mme. Hauge's recent decision to complete the mansion is the source of deep satisfaction to many friends in Washington. M. Hauge came to the Capitol in the early part of 1906, and his marriage to the handsome young widow occurred a few months later. He was considered a brilliant and entirely successful diplomatist and he took up the affairs of his country in an important and critical juncture. His marriage to an American and one who was so socially accomplished was a significant factor in his success, as it has been in the case of many foreigners serving in Washington. After several years of perfect happiness and with a future unclouded for either, M. Hauge was killed while indulging in the national pastime of skiing not far from Christiania. His death was a profound shock to the entire official world at Washington, and especially to his colleagues in the corps. The splendid home had just been started. For years, the said associations attached to the work of continuing plans made with her husband, deterred Mme. Hauge from resuming operations and even from coming to Washington at all. Last summer, however, she resolved to complete her home and reside in Washington at least part of the year, and this autumn she took possession of as fine and artistic a home as the national capital possesses.

"I have found all the peace and comfort which the completion of my home suggested," said Mme. Hauge. "Washington offers so many avenues of interest and it is pleasant to greet my old friends and to enjoy their visits, to entertain them and to be entertained. But I am but a bird of passage, and so many things call me to other places, and I have not been in Washington as frequently as I wished. I hope to spend more time here in the spring and next season. I did not reside for long in Norway, in fact, made only fleeting visits there, but I have deep admiration for that country, for its high national ideals, its superb natural scenery and for the home loving and gracious qualities to its people. It had been my intention to remain there for some time, and to get a thorough knowledge of things which I knew only from books or from the accounts received from those who had accurate information. I delight in traveling and have spent much time in this way. Traveling in our own country affords great pleasure and unfolds many subjects for reflection which we would not realize in any other way. Still it is wise to realize all we owe the old world in the artistic way and in the matter of culture."

Evidences of Mme. Hauge's love of foreign travel are to be seen on every side in her fine home. She possesses a love of flowers which amounts almost to a passion. There are flowers on every table, in every nook and corner, growing in quaint vases and receptacles which suggest Greece and the Orient. The home is particularly dear to her, since every detail had personal supervision and was the result of long days pouring over architect's plans and studying domestic architecture with the zeal of one who is seeking a diploma. That this home is a work of love is evident from the finely wrought iron doorway to the last splendid flight of stairs which leads to the private apartments. The ground floor is after the European fashion, a complete home were the remaining stories cut off. There are wide, airy waiting rooms filled with palms and just now with tulips and hyacinths, even though the mistress is spending the month with relatives in Louisville. Mme. Hauge's fad is to have flowers in her home always, whether she is there to enjoy them or not. It is part of her creed and of her idea of furnishing. There is a dainty little music-room off the two waiting rooms, from thence an automatic elevator takes the visitor to the salons above. But it is a joy to make the journey up the broad stairway, where fine bronze and statuary delight the eye, and where tall crystal vases on tables and window seats filled with roses, nod a pleasant welcome.

The library is a wonderful room and seems part of an old-world palace or the study of some learned sage who had been gathering his treasures for decades back. The walls are sage green brocade, soft as down to the touch, and the wood work is old English oak taken from a famous monastic school of Surrey and translated here at enormous expense. There is an oil painting of a sweet-faced boy, manly looking and gazing straight at the visitor with the same frank glance which characterizes Madam Hauge. This is her only child, the son of her first husband, Frederick Joy, who died shortly after the tragic fate of M. Hauge. There are flowers always before this picture but there is nothing sad in the environment. Everything suggests the hope which sustains the Christian in a better world beyond this. The book shelves are deep set in the brocaded walls and are filled with the careful selections of the cultured purchaser.

There are several salons, all furnished in the florid style of the Louis XIV period. In the main salon all gold and rose colors are two fine mural paintings of flowers, blush roses with tender foliage set in the wall itself, a style of decoration which recalls the dainty palace of Frederick the Great at Sans Souci, but which is rarely ever seen in this part of the world. The dining-room is considered by critics as the finest private apartment in this city and it is matter of special pride and satisfaction to Madam Hauge. Like all southerners, the banquet hall is the radiating point of the home and it is associated with a view to large feasts. It is forty feet square and in a softened tint of brown and green, recalling the depths of forests in the first dawn of spring.

"My pictures," said Madam Hauge, "mean so much to me and all have been chosen after careful pondering over their fitness for the particular spot for which I intended them. I delight in paintings of Greece and I have gotten the best specimens on the market and have spent days in curio shops and at studios collecting them. The favor of the Grecian sky and the old classic places make a special appeal, while flowers are always displayed in the landscapes. The springs and lakes and mountain peaks to which cling all the old memories of heroic days are good companions at meals and they invariably awaken pleasant thoughts in my guests." Here, as in the old library, old English oak forms the main part of the furnishings, but there are odd pieces of ancient walnut and screens and gems of bric-a-brac which suggest a desire to create an atmosphere of absolute comfort and tranquility. Tall vases hold Sleander trees and they seem to melt naturally into the Greek landscapes while long boxes of ferns beneath four painted streams and fountains create an indescribably charming effect. Nearly all the furnishings are historic, the magnificent cabinets have come from the old French chateaux demolished during the reign of terror and there are rugs and velvet carpets, which have borne the royal tread and where lovely queens of the Bourbon era held court. All the pictures are the works of recognized masters and Madam Hauge can feel gratified at realizing her ambition to make a home, entirely comfortable and appealing to domestic ease, instead of a museum, which so many Washington houses which possess artistic treasure, suggest.

Coming of a family which takes a high sense of responsibility in the accumulation of wealth, it is natural to find that Madam Hauge is of broad gauge and filled with the spirit of philanthropy. Her father, James Todd of Louisville, founded a well-equipped hall at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of that city and it bears his name. Her mother, a native of Tennessee, Miss McGavack, the sister of Mrs. Dickinson, mother of the former Secretary of War, Jacob McGavack Dickinson, was noted for her gentle deeds and for her readiness to respond to the call of suffering humanity. Madam Hauge's name is on the board of many charities in Washington and she responds generously to special cases of philanthropy. She keeps up much of the charitable work with which her family has been associated in Louisville and many of her sojourns in her old home are in their interests.

Madam Hauge has dispensed a quiet, unobtrusive hospitality in her new home this winter and these have been principally confined to her immediate circle of friends and relatives. She will enter more largely into social life this spring and the coming autumn. Fond of music, of an intellectual turn and with deep perception in matters political, her home will be less a fashionable rendezvous than a center for the thoughtful, the philanthropic and the public-spirited.

Madam Hauge is on the sunny side of life and not yet entering on the term which most women dread, middle life. She has all the grace, poise and vivacity of the Kentuckian, which foreign travel and broad ideals lend to the well-born southerner. She is always well gowned, but never conspicuously so, and though she possesses some wonderful jewels and marvelous furs, she rarely wears them. Her decision to make Washington her home resulted from her deep judgment of its growing importance as a winter resort as well as from the joy of association with old and well-tried friends. The national capital has in the past year trebled its number of winter residents, and there are now in the course of erection more than twenty fine mansions which are to be the homes of people of achievement, who are now resting from their labors. In this respect, Washington can now measure to the standards set by London, Paris and Vienna. Fewer Americans are seeking homes in the old world and instead are putting down deep roots in their magnificent Capitol City.

Ex-Senator Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia, who is here with Mrs. Scott en route to Russia, has astonished Berliners by his Democratic ways. The clerk at the Hotel Aldon has not recovered from the shock caused by Mr. Scott slapping him on the back and saying: "Any mail, colonel?"

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Dr. Charles M. Greene, of Boston, in a lecture on The Hygiene of Women said that "women talk far too much. They would be better looking if they listened more. They are nervous because they do so much talking. The energy they use up in talking should be used for other purposes."

Henry L. Jost, who began life as a waif in the old Five Points Mission, has just been elected Mayor of Kansas City. He is one of the many foundlings of New York for whom homes have been found by the Children's Aid Society and who have subsequently made good.

Sir William Van Horne, of Montreal, widely known as a collector and a railroad official, has purchased two valuable portraits by Franz Hals, the Dutch painter, which were only recently discovered.

Maj. B. Frank Cheatham, who has been in charge of the building construction division of the quartermaster general's office, has been ordered to take station at Honolulu to superintend erection of the new buildings at Schofield barracks. He will sail from San Francisco on May 5. It is expected that the work will be finished by June 1, 1913.

Charles J. Mulligan to whom the State of Illinois has just made the award for the erection of the monument in memory to Ninian Edwards, first territorial Governor of Illinois, is a well-known Chicago sculptor. He was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1867, but came to this country when quite young, studying under Lorado Taft, the Chicago master. The monument will be erected at Edwardsville.

John F. Stevens is going to Spain with a project for building railroads throughout that country. The Spanish system is inadequate and badly managed. What the American capitalists behind Mr. Stevens particularly want is to open up the mineral resources of that country.

Ex-Senator W. A. Peffer, of Kansas, 80 years old, one of whose legs was 80 years old, one of whose legs was amputated recently has resumed work on his autobiography. He expects to finish the book in two months, having gathered all his speeches and writings on the railroads, tariff and the money question, and the speeches of others on the Farmers' Alliance and the Populist movements.

Charcoal Burners of England.

[London Chronicle:] If there is a coal strike we shall have to get other eiding, said a northerner yesterday. But what is elding? It is simply fuel —wood, peat, coal or all three. The word comes, like so many northern terms, from the Scandinavian — elde means fire. It is used, however, only in connection with the "mending" of a fire, for at the "making" process the same ingredients are called kindling. The charcoal burner may still be found, and that within thirty miles of London. This writer knows a charcoal burner who has carried on his ancient trade for forty years in Surrey and Sussex. You come suddenly upon the piled dome of fine earth on heath or in woodland, and near it is his neatly-constructed hut of withies, furs and boughs. There is a rough corner seat in front of it. There he lives during the whole period of the coaling. He is an adept at making a sharp hatchet or bill hook, a quisitive person, too, as I found on inquiring which might result in a shower of flame and the destruction of a particular lot of wood. The man is his own master; he has a home in the woods and he makes a decent living.

BYRON T. STANLEY fully appreciates that in this day of sensational advertisements there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypocrital tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore he says to you—come to him this very day and let him give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. He will tell you the bad as well as the good; keeping nothing hidden from you. He will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, he will read your life like an open book.
Before you go into anything of importance or undertake anything serious—in business or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of psychics.
ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.
DON'T FORGET
The name STANLEY, a double guarantee. See the real life reader who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish confidential. Out-of-town patrons served only weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think.
Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. Don't overlook using Nature's impressions of conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of sadness.
Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders, and that many of its best citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic, Mr. Stanley has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.
Finding many deserving people who were not able to pay a large fee he has decided for a short time to place his readings within the reach of all at live and let-live prices. So if you wish to take advantage of this offer, call at once.
If you contemplate consulting a psychic several things should be taken into consideration—ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services. Truth.
BEWARE of pretenders and partially-developed mediums. They copy his advertisements and in many smaller cities use his name. Please remember BYRON L. STANLEY can be seen only at his Los Angeles office.
To whom it may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychism. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his advices.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.
231½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 26 YEARS.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all the affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage, financial affairs, talents, environments, about children, relatives, when and where to travel, what to seek or to avoid, when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods, coming—giving dates of these events for the future.
PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Holzer, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, Ethel Barrymore, etc.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK with his trained judgment is one to be classed with that of other readers. Therefore do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.
DR. J. A. LARSEN writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life; I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."
FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your marvelous words were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."
MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friends, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."
The interpretation of a Horoscope is a fine art; the percentage of "GENUINE" astrologers is exceedingly small. To know a little of astrology out of books, and to be a skillfully trained, EXPERIENCED ASTROLOGER, are two entirely different things. Therefore, in this work, it depends largely WHO it is that reads you as to the RESULTS obtained.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and handwriting has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Personal attention. Strict privacy. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that 20 and many years of experience can produce. Therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Daily and evening; Sunday, 10 to 2.
STUDIO PARLORS, 235½ S. SPRING ST.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 222 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE OR HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE KEENEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Motorcycles.

GOOD BYE BICYCLE.
LET A 4-H. P. TWIN MOTORCYCLE DO THE WORK.
GET OUR BIG SPECIAL OFFER THIS WEEK.
The fact that 45 per cent. of all Thor motorcycles sold are being used for every-day service, proves positively their supremacy as the most reliable motorcycle you can buy.
The great demand for a better-than-the-ordinary motorcycle to be used for daily, hard service, in the hands of R.F.D. carriers, inspectors, collectors, salesmen, buyers, delivery-men and all other professions necessitating the covering of a great deal of ground at a low cost, made it necessary for the Thor factory to design this model as one being best adapted for these purposes.
That the 4 H. P. model has made good, we have but to point to the fact that it has won every important endurance contest ever held.
Every business man should have a THOR Motorcycle, as it is the cheapest, most convenient and economical investment that he can make. It is ready at a moment's notice—rain or shine—to make quick deliveries to any part of the city.
With a tandem attachment an extra person can be carried for long trips, which makes it ideal evenings or Sundays, when cars are a pleasure bound. Owing to the practicability of Thor Motorcycles they are classed as a business necessity.
THE MOTORCYCLE SUPREME.
4 H. P.—THOR WHITE FLYER—4 H. P.
Call and see the motorcycle that has created a sensation in Los Angeles.
We are receiving orders daily for future delivery. Be wise and order now.
Some of the features are: Two oiling systems; 28-inch tires—every tire guaranteed; ignition with the new "No-Jar" footpost; new and original spring fork; wide mud guards; double jet carburetor; Bosch magneto; Thor transmission—a combination of gears and chain—will outwear and outpull any other type, and in addition is guaranteed for 50,000 miles.
Thor free engine clutch runs in oil, and enables the rider to start on the steepest hill, no fiber or asbestos lining to burn up and cause additional expense.
The THOR is the ideal motorcycle for business or pleasure.
We stand ready and willing to demonstrate the THOR SUPREME. Let us show you.

GEN. OROZCO SENDS FAMILY TO EL PASO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ (Mex.) April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It became known here tonight that Gen. Pascual Orozco, leader of the insurrecto forces in the northern part of the republic, has sent his family across the Rio Grande River and his wife and daughters are now living in El Paso under an assumed name. Gen. Orozco deposited $500,000 in American banks in El Paso and this fact and the secret movement of his family into United States territory, is taken to mean that Orozco expects intervention by the United States and is "getting out from under."

United States secret service operatives here and at other points along the border are aware of Orozco's bank deposits in El Paso and the whereabouts of the rebel leader's family as Federal Judge Burns, who last week at El Paso sentenced four men, convicted of violation of the neutrality laws. Secret service men are keeping watch on the Orozcos.

Just where and how Orozco has accumulate $500,000 is a mystery to Americans here, but the Mexicans are apparently no so much mystified. They point out that small banks in the northern States have had their money "confiscated" by the insurrecto forces and these say Orozco has been unable to spend any of this money for arms or other war material.

Orozco got $50,000 from Madero for his part in the revolt that overthrew the Diaz government. Orozco says Madero promised him $100,000 if Madero was successful.

HUGE FORTUNE FOR VINCENT.

YOUNG ASTOR NOW BECOMES HEAD OF THE HOUSE.

His Stepmother Waives All Claim to the Estate by Virtue of an Ante-Nuptial Contract Entered Into With the Father Before Second Marriage.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vincent Astor has become the head of his house, the possessor of one of the greatest fortunes in America and inheritor of the tradition that he must become so, in fact, as well as in name.

No Astor has ever succeeded to the headship so young as this boy, who will not be 21 until November 15, next. His father was 28 before he succeeded, and his grandfather was 60. His great-grandfather, John Jacob III, was 53, and his father, William Backhouse, I, was 56. Seven years ago an expert appraisal valued the estate that has once more changed hands at $100,000,000. Today it is worth at least $125,000,000.

For the moment, at least, Vincent Astor is sole heir to this wealth. His stepmother, by the workings of another family tradition, waived her claim to it by accepting a marriage portion. Until the present expectations of society have been justified, or proved false, Vincent Astor will remain sole heir, as he must, in any event, remain principal heir, by the workings of a third family tradition that the fortune must not be endangered in its bulk.

Vincent Astor was christened William Vincent. He was born in the old homestead at Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street, five months before his grandfather died and his father became head of the house. He was so frail a baby that only unremitting care kept him alive. He lived the loneliest of boyhoods because of this, and when other children romped in the open air, he sat over a toy piano in the nursery to which no playmates ever came. Servants saved him every exertion. Nurses were always with him and physicians awaited calls to him that had precedence over all others.

When Vincent Astor was 12, Dr. William T. Bull saved him from death by appendicitis. In less than a year he was saved from death by another surgical operation, this time by a growth in the throat following an attack of the mumps. He was taken every year to St. Moritz or the Riviera because of bronchial troubles, and his education was by a tutor who lived with him in a houes taken for his exclusive use at Tuxedo.

Seven years of this unceasing attention brought Vincent Astor to a degree of health it was thought he would never attain. Newport was astonished to see him come there five years ago and take an active part in the sports of the summer colony. He drove his own car, and drove it with daring skill, although he was 16.

Vincent Astor went to Eton, but soon returned—to be followed by strange tales of the amusement of the English public school at his manner of living.

St. Georges at Newport, gave the rest of the training he needed for admission to Harvard, where he began a three-years' course last September.

WOULD CONTROL LINERS.

Senate Adopts Resolution Recommending International Treaties Governing Ocean Traffic.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The United States Senate adopted today the amended maritime resolutions looking to a more complete international regulation of ocean traffic. The resolution advises the President that the Senate would favor treaties with the great maritime powers to govern the courses, speed, life-saving apparatus, wireless and other equipment of ocean liners.

Following is the text of the resolution as agreed to by the committee:

"That the President of the United States be and is hereby advised that the Senate would favor treaties with England, France, Germany and other maritime governments to regulate the course and speed of all vessels engaged in carrying passengers at sea; to determine the number of lifeboats, rafts, searchlights and wireless apparatus to be carried by such vessels and to assure the use of such other equipment as shall be adequate to secure the safety of such vessels, passengers and crews."

The general opinion was that while a great deal could be done by the adoption of effective laws, much more could be gained by international agreement. There was no division on the vote.

Legislation requiring wireless apparatus on ocean steamers to be constantly manned by operators will be included in the programme of Representative Alexander of Missouri, chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine.

The committee is now having translated the Norwegian steamship laws, which have been recommended as presenting the highest standard of safety regulations and requirements.

LA FRANCE SAILS.

Proud Ship of the French Line Departs On Maiden Trip Over the Southerly Course.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAVRE (Franec) April 20.—The France, the new 27,000-ton French liner, sailed from Havre at 1 o'clock this afternoon on her maiden voyage to New York.

THE SOUTHERN COURSE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, April 20.—Robert Bacon, who recently resigned as United States Ambassador to France, and Mrs. Bacon, departed from Paris to Havre, where they embarked on board the new French liner France.

The official French delegation to the Champlain Festivities departed at the same time and will sail with Mr. and Mrs. Bacon.

J. Dal Piaz, the general manager of the French line, who also is a passenger on the France, said orders had been given to take the extreme Southern course.

FRENCH RECAPTURE FEZ.

PARIS, April 20.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Fez, the capital of Morocco, which has practically fallen into the hands of the rioters and mutinous Moors, has been recaptured by the French troops numbering 2000 stationed there, after a desparate battle, in which a large number were killed and wounded. According to a wireless dispatch received from Fez in the foreign office this morning order has been re-established.

UNIVERSAL SORROW FOR MAJ. BUTT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Capt. McCoy of the general staff of the army, today received a telegram from Col. Roosevelt as follows:

"Am deeply shocked and grieved about poor Archie Butt. If there is any news about him pray let me know."

Capt. McCoy was a military aide to the former President.

The general staff published today some parts of the military record of Maj. Butt. The official record, dry and brief, discloses the remarkable versatility and ability of the young officer. Here are some of the points.

A military student in the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; an author of novels, magazine articles and abstract army problems; a quartermaster who earned the highest commendations from William H. Taft, who as Governor of the Philippines, commended him for appointment in the regular army; and exceptionally tactful and diplomatic aide-de-camp and generally efficient officer, according to the testimony of Theodore Roosevelt; a commendable and loyal worker in the Philippines, according to Lieut.-Gen. Bates and one of the best volunteer captains and quartermasters ever seen, according to Maj. Gen. Arthur McArthur.

The White House made public several telegrams from various parts of the country relating to the tragic death of Maj. Butt. One came from Governor Spry, of Utah, which said:

"The people of this State are shocked and horrified at this terrible calamity. To you personally permit me to express my deep sorrow in the loss of your close personal friend, Maj. Butt."

W. C. Markham, of Baldwin, Kan., wired that the church where Maj. Butt attended services with the President last September holds memorial services Sunday.

George Hogs, of the Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky., sent this inquiry: "Must I put a wreath on Archie's picture? I reared the boy."

CALIFORNIA MILITIA IS BEING RECRUITED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) April 20.—Gen. Forbes has issued orders to the National Guard company officers throughout the State to recruit the companies up to seventy men, nine more than required by the United States War Department regulations.

Asked if these orders have anything to do with the rumors of intervention by the United States in Mexico and the probability of the Guard being called out, Gen. Forbes insisted that they had no significance whatever in that connection.

HALL CAINE PAYS TRIBUTE.

Writes Ppem on Titanic Tragedy to Be Sung at Memorial Service to Hymn Tune.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch. Hall Caine has written the following poem, entitled "The Titanic," which will be sung to the tune of "O, God, Our Help in Ages Past," at a great memorial service in the City Temple, tomorrow night:

THE TITANIC.

Lord of the everlasting hills,
God of the boundless sea,
Help us through all the shocks of fate
To keep our faith in Thee.

When nature's unrelenting arm
Sweeps us like withes away,
Maker of man, be Thou our strength
And our eternal stay.

When blind, insensate, heartless force
Puts out our passing breath,
Make us to see Thy guiding light
In darkness and in death.

Beneath the roll of soundless waves
Our best and bravest lie,
Give us to feel their spirits live
Immortal in the sky.

We are Thy children frail and small
Formed of the lowly sod;
Comfort our bruised and bleeding souls,
Father and Lord and God.

Impressions Delivery Men Get.

[New York Sun:] "It's lucky the tenants don't see some of the comments jotted down by delivery men beside their dumbwaiter bell in the basement," said the superintendent of an apartment-house. "While it's against the rules to scribble on the whitewashed walls, still some of these penciled notes are so good that I let them stay. For instance, opposite the dumbwaiter bell connecting with an apartment occupied by a very deaf woman, who's alone most of the day, someone has printed in big capitals, 'Deaf as a post. Give message to hallboy.' This has saved a lot of trouble, so I've left it there. Another, where the tenant's name is almost unpronounceable, has beside it the name divided into syllables, with an immense accent showing on which syllable it belongs. That struck me as a good idea and I left it stand, too. 'Ring loud enough to drown the piano!' is the advice printed beside the bell of an apartment occupied by a music teacher, which struck me as good enough to keep there for the general good of the various delivery people."

Flood Ravages in Arkansas.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) April 16.—Hundreds of square miles of fertile lands were flooded yesterday by two breaks in Mississippi and Arkansas River levees, and the waters are still rushing over the lowlands of Louisiana and Arkansas. Millions of acres will be flooded, but in many places the territory affected consists of swampy stretches.

The breaks were at Panther Forest, Ark., and near Roosevelt, La. It is estimated by government experts that it will take ten days for the waters to run their course over the lowlands and again join the Mississippi main stream at the intersection of the Red River.

The Mississippi River levee at Panther Forest, nineteen miles below Greenville, on the Arkansas side, gave away and the water is now on its way over 300 square miles of farming land and several prosperous towns toward the Tensas and Ouachita rivers. Sixty townships in the East Ashley, Drew and Desha counties, in Arkansas, and West Carroll Parish, La., will be inundated. Lake Providence, with a population of 1,500, is the most important town in the water's path. At Modoc, Ark., 12 miles southeast of Lake Providence, 1000 refugees, took off crowds from the islands in the flooded district and found home and store of J. J. Teller, at Lucca, Ark., were isolated on a high levee.

AUTO RACE TODAY.

Two Hundred Mile Automobile Contest At Fresno May Break Records

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRESNO, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Records will probably be smashed Sunday during the Republican's automobile road race of two hundred miles. The graders finished their work this morning and the course is as smooth as glass. The route takes in six miles on the famous Kearney-avenue drive and six miles on White's bridge road. Two more miles are made in completing the loop, the course being fourteen and one-tenth miles in length.

The try-outs took place today, and many of the cars completed the course in less than sixteen minutes. In many places on the straight road seventy miles per hour was registered.

No restrictions have been placed on the cars and the dealers will be permitted to "tune up" the engines to make the best speed possible. The entire course will be guarded by companies C and K of the State militia.

There are five classes of races. The first is a free-for-all. The winner of this race will be given a silver trophy.

In the other four classes the cars will run in their respective divisions. The cars will leave at intervals of one minute.

Following are the entries and the order in which they will leave the tape::

Flanders, driver, J. F. Gurley; Overland, Tom McKelvey; Buick Red Bird, Alex Robb; Warren, G. Braval; E. M. F., A. R. Myers; Reo, Earl Jackson; Buick White Streak, D. Suiprizio; Elmore, Bruce Arent; Winton, E. H. Waterman.

BOND INVESTMENTS.
THERE MUST BE LEGITIMATE VALUES BACK OF ALL BOND ISSUES.
Most BOND investors lose sight of the fact that the best paying BONDS in the market are those issued by the big mining corporations. These are based on values real as any FIRST MORTGAGE REALTY BOND, and if you will examine the BOND MARKET you will see all of the MINING BONDS quoted away above par. Often stock in the corporation is given as BONUS with the first BOND ISSUES, and the stock eventually becomes more valuable than the original bond, BEFORE THE BONDS ARE RETIRED.
We have such a BOND ISSUE to offer, one that is ABSOLUTELY SAFE and SURE.
COME AND INVESTIGATE, or write for full particulars.

OIL COMPANY INTEREST AT GREAT BARGAIN. Company controlling over 200 acres proven oil land, next to producing property. Owns two complete drilling rigs—one now on ground. Already has operating fund sufficient to complete two wells. Company capitalized less than $100,000. Such conditions mean success to the oil business. Substantial interest can be purchased at low rate, which will make large profit. $900 to $1600 required. Address 328 LAUGHLIN BLDG.

A Good Thing.

SIMPLIFYING LEGAL PRACTICE.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE TAKES FIRST STEP.

While Protecting the Defendant, Proposes to Cut Out Some of the Methods Lawyers Use for Prolonging Court Procedure—The English Model Is Used.

[New York Evening Post:] The cause of reform of legal procedure has taken a long step forward in the passage by the New Jersey Legislature of bills proposed by the committee of the New Jersey State Bar Association upon improvement in the administration of justice. This committee, headed by Charles H. Hartshorne of Jersey City, included among its members Justices Swayze and Bergen of the Supreme Court, Vice Chancellors Howell and Walker (the present Chancellor,) former Gov. Fort, former Justices Van Syckel and Collins, Senator Silzer and other men of eminence in the profession.

The most striking single feature of the principal bill is its reduction of the procedure provisions of thirty-two sections, leaving to the courts to regulate the details of practice by rules susceptible of amendment from time to time, as experience prompts. In these respects the bill is frankly modeled on the English and Connecticut practice acts. A provisional set of rules, eighty-one in number, and of forms of pleading and other judicial documents, thirty-seven in number, accompany the bill.

When the sections of the bill and rules are examined seriatim, it is found that they are aptly designed to do away with a multitude of technicalities which, in the past, have led to delays and expense in litigation. Thus, careful provision is made for joining at any stage of a case every one who has an interest in the controversy on either side, and preventing a suitor from being denied complete relief because he has omitted some one necessary to the determination.

There is no restriction upon the right of counter-claim or set-off based upon its being of the same class as the cause of action set forth in the complaint. Not only may sham defenses be stricken out, but terms may be imposed upon allowing defenses to stand which appear to be probably sham or frivolous.

Any party may call upon any other party to admit any fact necessary to his case, under penalty, if he refuses the admission, of having to pay the expense of proving the fact. This provision properly administered, and a companion provision for settling all preliminaries and practice motions before a commissioner, should be enormous time and money savers.

If a party does not demand a jury trial promptly after the issue is joined, he is deemed to have waived it. This follows the present English practice which has worked most satisfactorily. Of course, it presupposes a large measure of confidence in judges, who are thus made the triers of facts, as well as of the law. On the subject of appeals it is expressly provided that "no judgment shall be reversed, or new trial granted, on the ground of misdirection, or the improper admission or exclusion of evidence, or for error as to matter of pleading or procedure, unless, after examination of the whole case, it shall appear that the error injuriously affected the substantial rights of a party."

The bill, and especially the rules and forms accompanying it, will well repay the most serious examination by any one who is interested in the problems of law reform. It is significant that it comes out of a State which two years ago ranked as the most conservative of all her sisterhood.

WAR NARROWLY AVERTED.

England and Germany Came Very Near a Clash Last Month, But the Kaiser's Moderation Prevailed.

[Washington Star's Berlin Letter:] From all accounts there came very near being a war with England in the last month. The question of a declaration of war turned out to postpone the Emperor's departure for Corfu and was the cause of a crisis which resulted in the resignation of Herr Wermuth, Secretary of State for finance. There were many hurried consultations between the Emperor and his chief advisers. Those urging war argued at the moment that England was impotent because of the coal strike; that this was the opportunity of ages for wresting the supremacy of the seas from Britannia.

The war party was headed by Admiral Tirpitz, Secretary of State for the navy, and with him in the militant group were Gen. von Harringen, chief of the general staff; Gen. von Moltke, son of the great von Moltke, whose deliberate plans conquered France forty years ago and most of leading commanders of the army and navy. All were clamoring for war immediately. On the side of peace were ranged Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, Foreign Secretary Kinderlen-Wachter and the banking and business elements in the government.

The Kaiser, assailed with equal ardor by both sides, was torn by conflicting doubts. He listened to both and admitted that the arguments of both seemed indisputable. For several days peace hung in the balance. Of course, such vital secrets cannot be kept. Something of it leaked out and reached the ears of the British government. The cold response from London was the announcement that King George, because of the coal strike, could not pay his projected visit to the Emperor in Berlin, a politeness in return for those extended to the King at his coronation.

This information was conveyed to Berlin in very curt terms, in language far from that employed usually in diplomacy. It revealed to Germany that England was forwarned of Germany's militant purpose, and, consequently, forearmed, coal strike or no coal strike.

It was then that the Emperor decided for peace and sailed for the peaceful summer residence.

Theanger of the German war party is intense. With unprecedented recklessness the leading members of the war party are abusing the Emperor almost publicly. They are denouncing him as "a weak ruler who gets cold feet at every critical moment," and as "an effeminate degenerate," which is the height or depth of their abuse. In a word, the members of the war party, infuriated by the failure of their designs, have become iconoclasts and are trying to smash the Emperor idol.

POLITICAL TIPS.

That Theodore Roosevelt bolted Blaine for President in 1884 is the declaration of ex-Gov. Ferguson of Oklahoma, who says:

"Ex-President Roosevelt is making a grave mistake when he advises his audiences that they do not have to abide by the result of the primaries. He has made that statement several times recently.

"Roosevelt is not always a good Republican. He was in the convention that nominated Blaine in 1884, and then bolted the convention and supported Grover Cleveland. This is a fact not generally remembered.

"Mr. Roosevelt should be more guarded in his statements. If he is nominated every Republican will be expected to support him, and should do so. If Mr. Taft is nominated every Republican should support him."

The distribution of cigars or purchase of drinks for voters by a candidate for office is a violation of the Corrupt Practices act of Ohio, according to a ruling by Atty.-Gen. Hogan.

"The giving of a cigar to a voter would constitute the giving of something of value, and is expressly forbidden by the terms of the Kimball act. If one cigar were given, two might be given, yea, a whole box might be given.

"It is urged, however, that persons who had been in the habit of treating their friends should not be prevented from doing so when a candidate. It is not the purpose of the act that a man must change his personal habits. He should, however, distinguish between electioneering and the purchasing of drinks for friends."

Gov. Chase S. Osborn of Michigan has found it necessary to deny that he has Vice-Presidential aspirations on the ticket with Roosevelt. At the same time he cleared himself from all further political aspirations. In a letter addressed "To the People of Michigan," he says:

"I will not be a candidate this year for Governor. It seems necessary for me to make this statement at this time. I do not desire office. I have at no time thought of going, or have I spoken voluntarily to anybody of going as a delegate to the Republican National Convention.

"I have at no time thought of being a candidate for the Vice Presidency. In other words, I am in exactly the same frame of mind that I was on December 6, 1910, when I announced I would not be a candidate for a second term."

At Hartford, Ct., a unique issue is presented in the campaign now in progress for election of city officers. While the platforms of the opposing forces are silent in reference to the real issue, the candidates have been selected with a view single to their attitude on the union and open shop. Every labor union in the city is exercising diligence and enthusiasm in the advocacy of the candidates who openly declare themselves in favor of the union shop.

The political enemies of former Speaker Cannon cannot get much satisfaction out of the fact that in the recent election in his district he carried every county by a larger plurality than two years ago. His total plurality was 8000 and he carried Vermillion county by 2500, where Roosevelt got 2000.

Gov. Foss's Presidential aspirations get a hot shot from the Memphis Commercial Appeal, which says "he never had any chance of success, scarcely any right to run; for he is only a three-year-old Democrat, and the high places should go to men who have been saturated in the party doctrines longer than that. Three years are hardly long enough to scourge him of Republican proclivities, even if he renounced the flesh and the devil of the great principles at the time of his conversion." He lived so long as a Republican that he would have to be made over entirely for his Democracy to be of the simon-pure variety. He is still what might be called a limited protectionist, but thinks the rates should be lower than the Republicans demand, but not so low as the Democrats advocate.

"This attitude alone would have made it impossible for the country to take his candidacy seriously. Each party wants a leader of its own definite stripe, not a middleman, as it were."

Therefore, according to the Commercial Appeal, pure Democracy does not believe in anything less than absolute free trade.

The re-entry into the United States Senate of a Republican Senator from Tennessee is a striking political incident, since no member of that party has represented Tennessee in the upper branch of Congress since William G. Bronlow's term expired in 1875, says the New York Tribune. Nearly every other southern State has had a Republican Senator or Senators in service since that date. Ever since reconstruction days Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Missouri have elected Republicans, so that Tennessee has been unique among the States of the upper South in keeping its representation in the Senate unbrokenly Democratic for nearly thirty-seven years, doing so in spite of the fact that it has never legally disfranchised the negro and has always had within its borders a large and active body of white Republicans.

Gov. Wilson is under fire by the Democrats of New Jersey regarding his failure to reappoint Dr. O. C. Bogardus to the State Board of Assessors. Dr. Bogardus was the original Wilson man in Monmouth county and stood by the Governor when nearly all the leading Democrats of the county opposed him. The Governor is suspected of having been influenced by the railroads in the matter, and in a letter addressed to him by the Raritan Independent Democratic Club, with a membership of more than 700, this intimation is made. One of the questions asked the Governor is as to why he appointed in Dr. Bogardus's place "one of whose public career you had no knowledge to succeed one through whose efforts the railroads' assessments during the last four years have been increased $115,000,000?"

"Was the change in the personnel of the Board of Assessors made at the request of some corporation whose assessment had been increased because of his connection with the board? If not, at whose request was the change made, and why?" is another question put up to the Governor.

Henry Kane, a blind man, is one of the leading candidates for Mayor of New Richmond, Wis. He has been clerk of the school board for several years.

Lafayette Young, owner of the Des Moines Capitol, has announced his candidacy to succeed Senator W. S. Kenyon. Col. Young succeeded Senator J. P. Dolliver by appointment of Gov. Carroll and served in the Senate until Senator Kenyon was elected by the Legislature in February of last year. Having had a taste of Senatorial life he now wants a full meal.

MR. TAFT--RENOMINATE HIM

BY PHILIP A. STANTON, former Speaker of the California Assembly.

TO REPUDIATE President Taft at the ensuing primaries would be an abject confession that the Republican party, during the present administration had failed to keep faith with the public, had not lived up to the platform of 1908, and was unworthy of the further confidence of the American people.

I challenge anyone to show that such is the case. Per contra, I hold that President Taft has kept each and every promise, and pledge, made to the American people, that he has taken the platform of his party most seriously, and insisted upon the strict performance of each and every plank contained therein. So serious, indeed, has been his attitude in this as to arouse the antagonism within his party, and it is this antagonism, fostered and nurtured by interests to which he will not submit, together with a plan carefully played to capitalize political and guard personal popularity of his distinguished predecessor that has created the slightest doubt as to the possibility of renominating him.

We who believe in him have studied him and his career, and challenge either of his distinguished opponents to show where in a single instance he has failed to keep faith with his party, and with the nation.

The office of President of the United States is to the American mind the greatest in the world, and the American people have a right to expect the occupant of this distinguished office to so deport himself both publicly and privately with the decorum which commands respect in every American heart. It is true that the President springs from the people, and is of the people, and the people will brook no act that would bring the high office into disrespect, or lower the high dignity which should surround it. It is with a full sense of these conditions that the President has maintained the serene and commanding dignity in the political crisis which confronts him. His attitude has been such as to bring no criticism from friend or foe. President Taft is a complete antithesis to his predecessor. He is not nearly so good a politician, and as a self-advertiser, he is absolutely without merit. The President seems to have the old-fashioned idea that public office is a public trust, and, singular to say, has comported himself with this idea since his incumbency of the Presidency. He has brought down upon his head the wrath of politicians for insisting in making appointments for efficiency, and not political pull. He has had the old-fashioned idea that laws were made to be enforced, and if they were to be merely ornamental should be removed from the statute books. He has therefore enforced the law, and with his calm judicial mind has seen in this enforcement only the offenders of the law, he has not taken into consideration the position occupied by them in society. In this he has been absolutely impartial. It might not have been policy, but it is justice. Again the President believed that government consisted principally of business, and that the rules governing the success of business in private life, should be adopted as nearly as possible by the public service. With this view in mind, he appointed a commission to investigate the different departments of the government, and recommend such charges as would result in greater efficiency and greater economy. This commission has since reported recommending changes that will result in a saving to the government of approximately $100,000,000 per year. Again, the President believes that when a good public servant was secured he should remain in the public service as long as he was deemed efficient, and not be turned out with the incoming of every new occupant of the Presidential office and with this end in view, he has recommended the extension of the civil service list to the heads of different departments, such as first-class postmasters, collectors of customs and internal revenue collectors. Again this is bad politics, for it would deprive the President of the use of the much talked about Federal Patronage Club, but the public service would be improved and benefited.

The financial problem is not the issue in this campaign. The tariff is. For years past it has been argued that the tariff was a business proposition, and, as Gen. Hancock aptly said, was a local issue. The protective system more than any other one cause is responsible for the great growth and development of American industries, and that the protective system will always prevail as long as this country remains a republic goes without saying. It is that many abuses have grown up and should be abated. There is no questtion but that the plank in the last national platform declaring that the true line of protection should be the difference of cost in production at home and abroad is correct. But how to ascertain this and go about it has been the debatable question. President Taft has solved it. He has created a non-partisan tariff board, whose duties are to ascertain the difference in this cost between the production at home and abroad, and, once having ascertained it, to make such recommendations as regards duties as they might deem equitable. In conformity with this plan this board has been at work for many months, and has already reported to the President their findings on many different schedules, and the report of this board, together with the favorable recommendations of the President, has been submitted to Congress, and there is every reason to believe that should President Taft be permitted to continue in office he will settle the tariff proposition on a safe and sane American basis. But the President stands as a bulwark between those radicals who would, regardless of reason, instantly place upon the free list many American products, which would simply result in the destruction of these various industries. California has a particular interest in this subject, for the reason that no other State in the Union has such a number and such a variety of its products upon the protective list. Here in Southern California we are intensely interested in this subject for the reason that without the beneficent effects of the protective tariff our entire citrus industry, our walnut groves, our olive orchards and our sugar industry are hopelessly ruined. The President, however, has stated to us as he has stated to every other section of the United States that he will not permit drastic action. Aud thus those of us who are interested in these various industries are bending every effort to see that William Howard Taft remains in the White House.

Among the notable achievements of his administration are the following:

Arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, aiming at the abolition of war, have been inaugurated, and are now pending before the Senate of the United States. The ratification of these would prevent the possibility of war between the United States and these nations. Incidentally I might remark that these treaties are receiving the open hostility and opposition of the President's predecessor. Similar treaties are being inaugurated with other powers. Until such a time as those pending with Great Britain and France are ratified it would be impossible to proceed further with other nations.

All trusts have been made to feel that they cannot violate the law and escape prosecution. The law has been enforced, the sugar corporation was convicted and proceedings brought against the steel, coal, whisky and beef corporations. Over forty prosecutions are now pending. The Standard Oil and tobacco cases have been finished and the Sherman Law finally interpreted by the highest court in the land.

Abrogation of our treaty with Russia is under way and will be finally completed within the next few months.

The Panama Canal is approaching completion by reason of the systematic work inaugurated by the President, when Secretary of War.

The Postoffice Department has been placed upon a self-sustaining basis.

The delicate situation in Mexico is being handled with that tact and diplomacy, yet firmness, which has made the President famous throughout the world.

The customshouses have been reorganized and placed upon a sound business basis.

A new treaty with Japan has been inaugurated upon a basis equally satisfactory to both of the high contracting parties and with respect to each.

Postal savings banks, a theory of the past fifty years, have become actualities.

Judicial appointments have been taken out of politics and merit alone has been the determining factor in all of these appointments. A corporation tax law has been passed yielding over $30,000,000 annual income together with the supervision of all corporate affairs.

The much-mooted question of the income tax amendment to the Constitution of the United States has been submitted to the various States in the Union for their ratification or rejection.

Steps have been taken to provide for the financing of all the government irrigation projects.

These are but a few of the more important achievements of the Taft administration. I could continue almost indefinitely in an article of this nature showing the new policies inaugurated and the many projects accomplished by our wise and able President.

In presenting another argument why California above all States in the Union should stand for Mr. Taft: His action in taking a definite stand in favor of San Francisco as the site of the Panama-Pacific Exposition as against New Orleans, stands out most prominently. If there is anything in the words friendship or gratitude, California now has the opportunity to show it.

I am pleased to assure The Times and its thousands of readers that the Taft campaign in Southern California is in a healthy condition and growing more so hourly. The people of this section, although slow to realize at times what is best for themselves, once aroused, never hesitate to do their full duty in an emergency, as witness the last municipal campaign when Republicans, Democrats, and men of nearly all shades of political opinions, stand-patters and progressives, rallied to the support of law and order and redeemed the city's fair fame in a crucial time.

I am convinced that in the coming State-wide Presidential primary, May 14, the men as well as the women of Southern California and of the whole State for that matter, realizing that the success of William Howard Taft means protection for our industries, as well as a reverence for the Constitution made by the fathers, for liberty under the law, will by a large majority emphasize their faith in the patient, strong, courageous, personality, who has been at the helm of national affairs during the past three and one-half years.

Attention of the mysteriously talked of to be centered at present upon the subject of Mr. Clay Burton Vance, who, although he lays claim to no special gift of supernatural powers, attempts to reveal the lives of people through the slender clue of handwriting. The undeniable accuracy of his deductions has led one to surmise that heretofore pretended astrologers and seers of these days have failed to apply the true principles of the science of divination.

It is not to be denied that astrology has excited the interest of enlightened people of all ages, but there have been many advanced thinkers reluctant to accept the theories of the ancient Chaldean seers. One can only judge the potency of the science of astrology by a personal application of its principles. We have all the cardinal events of our lives spread out before you; to read on paper a description of your true character, your inclinations, is proof positive that the mysterious power that shaped the universe and set the hands on the dial of Time is not indifferent to the destiny of man, has not left us without some means through which we may fashion the course of life. Asked to explain the method by which he gives his delineations, Mr. Vance replied: "I have simply resurrected an ancient science and moulded it into a key to unlock the future."

The following letters are a few of the many received by Mr. Vance's secretary. Mr. [illegible] Redditt writes: "My reading received [illegible] the greatest compliments. I read so much [illegible] step you outlined my life story through [illegible] have been somewhat interested [illegible] lines for years, but had no idea that [illegible] priceless advice could be given. I [illegible] that you are indeed a true [illegible] and am glad you has your great gift to help your clients."

s This Man Gifted With Strange Power?

Prominent People Say He Reads Their Lives as an Open Book.

Do You Want to Know About Your Business, Marriage, Changes, Occupation, Friends, Enemies or What to Do to Achieve Success?

TEST READINGS FREE TO ALL LOS ANGELES TIMES READERS WHO WRITE AT ONCE.

Attention of the mystically inclined must be centered at present upon the work of Dr. Clay Burton Vance, who, although lays claim to no special gift of supernatural power, attempts to reveal the lives of persons through the slender clue of birth-date. The undeniable accuracy of his delineations has led to surmise that heretofore painstaking students, astrologers and seers of divers kinds have failed to apply the true principles of the science of divination.

It is not to be denied that astrologers have excited the interest of enlightened people of all ages, but there have been many students reluctant to accept the theories of the ancient Chaldean science. No one can gainsay the potency of the science of Astrology as a personal application of its principles. Even in the cardinal events of your life as they stand out before you; to read an understanding description of your true character, habits and inclinations, is proof positive that the whole universe and all of time is made to revolve about that shaped the universe and set the pace for the ideal of Time to mark the destiny of man, has not left us without the means through which we may fathom the mysteries through which we may fathom the mysteries of life. Asked to explain the method by which he gives his delineations, Mr. Vance replied: "I have simply resurrected an ancient science and moulded it into a key to human nature. The following letters are but a few of the many testimonials of Mr. Vance's ability; Mr. LaMarr writes: 'My Reading received is one of the greatest amazement I read, as one by one you outlined my life since infancy. It has been somewhat interesting along that line for years, but had no idea that such a science could be given. I must admit I am indeed a very remarkable man, and am glad you use your great gift to benefit our clients.'

Mr. Fred Walton writes: "I did not expect such a splendid outline of my life. The scientific value of your Readings cannot be fully appreciated until one has had time for reading. To consult you means success and happiness."

Arrangements have been made to give free Readings to all readers of this paper. Readings Times, but it is especially requested that those who wish to avail themselves of this generous offer make application at once. If you wish a delineation of your own character, talents and opportunities, send your full name, the date, place and hour of your birth, and also your letter to Mr., Mrs., or Miss. Dr. Clay Burton Vance, suite 5441, No. 3 Rue de Richelieu, Paris, France. If you wish you may inclose 10 cents (stamps of your own country) to pay postage, clerical work, etc. Please note that 5 cents postage is required on letters posted to France. FALLS OFF THE ROOF.

Painter Perhaps Fatally Injured. Receiving Hospital Busy Attending To Many Hurts.

B. B. Robertson, 23 years old, employee of the Union Square Paint and Decorating Company, No. 1118 West Twenty-fourth street, who lives near the intersection of Wall and Fifth streets, was perhaps fatally injured yesterday when he fell from the roof of a house he was painting at No. 1446 Carroll avenue. He fell about 14 feet striking on his left side on a railing near the ground. He sustained a fractured skull, several broken ribs and painful internal injuries.

Among the other Receiving Hospital patients of the day was E. C. Dee, No. 321 West Sixty-second street, who was bitten on the arm by a man at No. 446 South Main street. Dee was assisting in the arrest of a man who had been brandishing a revolver. The injury was not serious.

A plate from a press mashed the little finger of R. W. Wilde, No. 3810 McKinley street.

W. P. Smith walked into the hospital with both hands blistered. He endeavored to start a gasoline engine. He was removed to his home, No. 4451 East First street.

Mrs. D. T. McElroy, who is living at the Hotel Brownstone, was knocked down by a car at Fifth and San Pedro streets. As the car swung around the corner the rear step struck her. The woman was not seriously injured.

Mrs. Laura Padilla, No. 153 Bloom street, sustained a few facial and body bruises when an auto driven by J. W. Squires of Orange Grove knocked her down at Sixth and Hill streets. She walked in the way of the auto.

Arthur McGinnis, No. 212 North Grand avenue rode his wheel into W. T. Hook's automobile at Seventh and Olive street. It is said McGinnis, who is a special letter delivery boy, was looking in one direction and riding in another. He sustained a slight concussion of the brain and several facial lacerations.

PREPARATIONS FOR TAG DAY.

Boosting Parties Will Visit the Schools Tomorrow to Stir the Students to Greater Interest.

The prizes offered by a philanthropic gentleman to create rivalry among the pupils of the schools for the sale of the greatest number of tags on the approaching "Tag Day" of the Associated Charities, is causing widespread interest among the boys and girls. Tomorrow a number of boosting parties will visit the schools to further inspire activity and organization for pushing the sales on May 4. Twenty sorority girls have volunteered their services and will sell tags from an automobile, preceded by a band. The day will give everybody a chance to help at least by a trifle in caring for the poor of the city, and the opportunity should be gladly seized.

Teaching Children Patriotism.

[Baltimore American:] "The teaching of patriotism does not stop with singing the national hymn and saluting the flag in the schools of Argentine," says Dr. Elsinas. "In addition the youngsters in the schools go through a catechism that they repeat until it is indelibly stamped on their memories. The questions and answers are about like this:

"'How do you regard your relations to your compatriots?'

"'I consider myself bound to them by a feeling that unites us all.'

"'What is that?'

"'The feeling that the Argentine Republic is the best country on earth.'

"'What are the duties of a good citizen?'

"'First to love his country.'

"'More than his parents?'

"'More than anybody.'

"After that the pupil is taught a regular eulogy of his race and native land, and in conclusion the whole school rises, gives the military salute and exclaims in unison: 'Long live Argentina.'

"It is pretty hard to keep up any diverse nationalistic sentiment in a country like this, and the truth is nobody has any desire to do so. Argentina is worth all the praise the children are taught to heap upon it, and the day is coming when it will rank with the great nations of the earth."

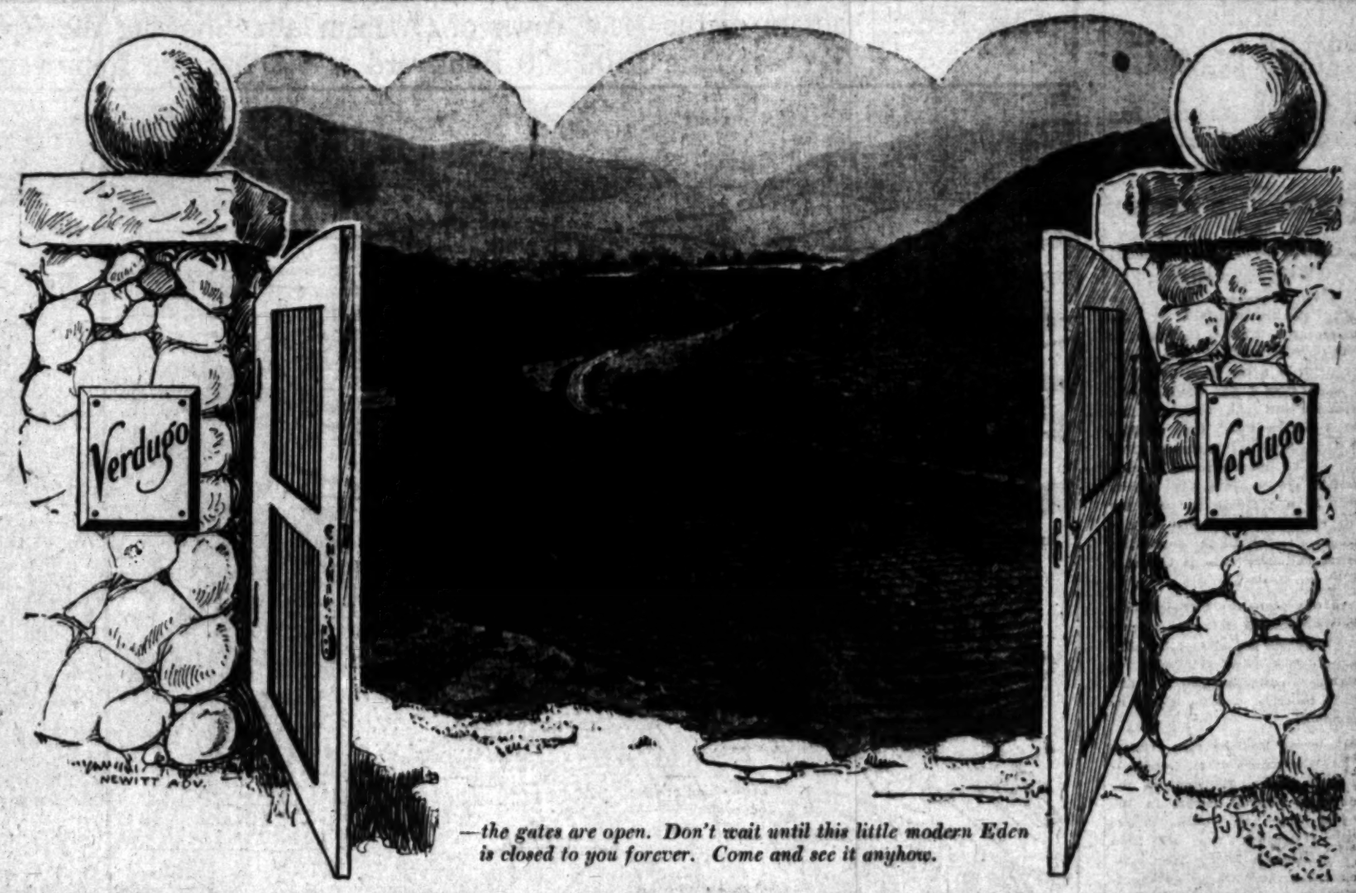
Skin Peeling Nature's Aid to New Complexion

(From Woman's Tribune.)

Mercolized wax is a natural beautifier. By flaking off the devitalized surface skin, it merely hastens Nature's work. The second skin layer, brought gradually to view, exhibits the healthy youthful color produced by capillary circulation. This because the capillaries are thus brought nearer the surface; also because the new skin is unsoiled by dust and dirt. This wax, to be had at any drug store (an ounce will do) is put on nightly like cold cream, washed off mornings with warm water. Its work usually is completed in from seven to ten days, long enough not to show too marked results from day to day, or cause pain or detention indoors.

A face bath to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, is another natural beautifier, since its astringent and tonic effects smooth out the wrinkles in accordance with Nature's own process.



—the gates are open. Don't wait until this little modern Eden is closed to you forever. Come and see it anyhow.

HUNDREDS ARE JOINING THE VERDUGO HOME BUYERS' CLUB

Opportunity to Buy in the Exclusive Foothill Sections at Two-Thirds Less Than Present Prices Will Never Be Extended to You Again

The call to the public to buy the second allotment in the Verdugo Home Buyers' Club has met with a heavy response. And no wonder. Where else can you secure beautiful, high mountain and foothill environed homesites, with the finest type of improvements, good car service, mountain water, freedom from fog, noise, dust, smoke, frost and all other undesirable conditions (peculiar to the lowlands) AT TWO-THIRDS LESS than regular retail prices? Where else can you buy and participate in profits equal to those made by the large land-buying syndicates? Where else can you get the amount of your entire investment returned, plus 6 per cent. either in land at the low wholesale membership prices, or in cash—and then still own a large bonus stock interest in the entire project? Is it any wonder that shrewd, discriminating home buyers and investors are passing up the hundreds of high-priced propositions now being advertised so extensively, and are uniting with the Verdugo Home Buyers' Club?

Our club is not an experiment. This is our tenth successful project in California. The property chosen by the club, which will be called "Verdugo Heights," includes an ideal piece of acreage on that beautiful mesa between Glendale and La Crescenta. It is a central spot of four hundred acres, to which the adjoining three valleys are tributary. It is destined to be the very center of activities in this newly-opened picturesque region. Its strategic position will appeal to you at once. The elevation is 1250 feet above sea level, level throughout and with just the right slope for drainage and view. Scores of land experts have pronounced it to be the most desirable elevation from a climatic, scenic and residential standpoint suburban to Los Angeles.

Remember that a membership entitles you to a homesite and stock participation in the profits of the entire project. Remember that an organized united movement of investors and home-makers of this type produces double the ordinary increase in value. Call for our booklet and learn the inside financial laws of land profits. It is free.

Only half of the improved lots will be allotted to members individually. The remaining half will be held and owned jointly by the club as a whole, to await further increase in value. You can make the profits of this land syndicate earn an acre, a half acre or a 60-foot residence site for you.

Get and price property in Hollywood, Altadena or Highland Park. Then go out and see what you will get in a more beautiful location—Verdugo Heights—that will stand you as little as $220 for a 60-foot lot.

This will be your last opportunity to participate in the profits and home-buying features of a public syndicate in this particular type of land. There is no more of it to be secured, except at prices prohibitive to the man of moderate means. Enroll with us now, before it is too late. The first allotment was oversubscribed, and the second bids fair to be also.

Special auto trips are made to the property twice daily (except Sunday) for the benefit of prospective members. No free rides—auto fare 50 cents round trip. Western Empire Verdugo Association, 100 Chamber of Commerce Building, Ground Floor, Los Angeles, Cal.

TIPS FOR JOB SEEKERS.

The Personal Appearance of an Applicant Is a Turning Point With Many an Employer.

[Chicago Tribune:] The manager of one of Chicago's greatest business houses, who has the faculty of epigrammatic expression, said the other day regarding his experience with employees:

"Clothes may not make the man—but they help much.

"A clothes brush, a pressing iron, and a little gasoline now and then applied to a $25 'hand me down,' will prove superior in effect to a $50 tailor-made carelessly kept and slovenly worn.

"I never hired a man if he came for a job without a shine.

"Only geniuses and millionares can afford to wear sloppy clothes.

"Before you look for a job, step in at a barber shop."

These were some of his maxims. Then he got interested in the subject and proceeded to elucidate.

"It is not the cost of your clothes," he said, "but the care you give them and to your general appearance that will make you either a neat or an untidy man. A good appearance not only adds to your self-respect but makes a decidedly favorable impression.

"This town is necessarily smoky and dirty and if a man wants to be neat he has to look out for the spots. Brush your suit, overcoat and hat every day. Every man should have two business suits and keep one going while the other is being cleaned, aired, and pressed. It is no hardship to own two suits. If you have only one deny yourself some of the things you can get along without for a short time. It will pay.

"Every young man may not be able to afford to change his shirt every day, but it is impossible to wear cuffs and collars down town more than one day without their becoming soiled. In buying shirts it is well to have detachable collars and cuffs. A soiled collar is probably the worst sartorial eyesore there is.

"Jewelry—outside of a stickpin, studs, cuff links and a watch—is decidedly out of place in business. You can improve your appearance by wearing a tie that is becoming and selected with care, and which harmonizes with your clothes.

Predicts Great Growth for New City

San Francisco Merchant Sees Quick Development of Owensmouth.

INVESTORS FLOCK TO TOWN

All Classes Will Reap Benefit From Prosperity.

John Bruener, president of the John Bruener Furniture Company, of San Francisco, declared to a newspaper reporter a few days ago: "A year from now I am coming back to Owensmouth and compare the property values with the original price list. Five and ten years from now it will be amazing to see to what magnitude Owensmouth has grown. It will be a pleasure to walk the streets of the thriving city at that future time and recall the days when the first buildings were just under way."

Even one year—the first—will develop Owensmouth into one of the most prosperous suburbs of Los Angeles. It is starting with such remarkable potentialities that it is difficult to conceive of what it will be years hence.

Experienced business men realize this and the names of many prominent persons are disclosed on the list of the original buyers in the lands of the new town. Three wealthy easterners, one an Iowa banker, another a Middle West lumberman, and the third an oil operator of Ohio, have bought business and residence property in Owensmouth and will come here to live at once.

Electric street car service, Southern Pacific trains and good roads give Owensmouth absolute proximity to the city of Los Angeles. The town is surrounded by vast rich fields. Fruit produce, eggs and dairy products from these ranches will pour into Owensmouth for shipment. Hundreds of men working these small tracts will spend their money with the town merchants, and the business man, as well as the investor, will reap the benefit of this general prosperity.

Owensmouth Is New Town of Necessity

Tremendous Industry Demanded Founding of Valley City

BIG OPPORTUNITIES HERE

Stores, Banks, Offices and Homes Now Being Erected

The opening of the new town of Owensmouth was the result of a necessity. The tremendous growth in shipping from the upper end of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands; the establishment of scores of small sugar beet, bean and fruit ranches; the development of the poultry business and the abundant prosperity that attends the development of the entire valley, made it imperative that a town be established to supply the ranchers and residents with commercial facilities, with stores and shops, banks and restaurants, newspapers to chronicle the daily happenings, telephone exchanges, hotels, postoffice and schools for the children—all of the conveniences and comforts of a rich and growing community.

Owensmouth became, from the moment of its inception, the town where there is "something doing every minute." With the sale of the first lots on the business thoroughfare, ground was broken for the first stores, for the bank, for other buildings. A lumber yard was opened and the framework of the first residence structures was soon under way.

Business men, homeseekers, investors, merchants, have crowded one another in buying choice corner business lots are sold for $500 and $600. Residence property brings $100 per lot, upward. Even rare acreage is included within the limits of the new town.

The magnificent $500,000 boulevard is practically completed through the town. Improvements of a high-class character are under way. Values are increasing rapidly, and the "town that was needed" will have a truly phenomenal size at the first anniversary of its opening. No better opportunity for money-making is offered anywhere in the southland at this time.

RAILROADING BALLOTS.

One Hundred Special Clerks Addressing Letters To The Many Voters of the County.

One hundred special clerks in the registration bureau began the task of addressing and mailing about 550,000 sample ballots to the voters of Los Angeles county, yesterday. The work is being done under contract to be paid for by the Supervisors as County Clerk Lelandy's appropriation was exhausted long before the registration itself was completed. The envelopes must be sent out before May 9.

Besides the sample ballots for the Democratic and Republican Presidential primary candidates, there are also the sample ballots for the freeholders' election which is to take place on May 14, the same day as the Presidential primary. But there will be a separate set of election officers and separate ballots.

The sample ballots for Presidential preference have the names of candidates and twenty-six delegates. The Republican ballot is twenty by twenty-four inches and the Democratic eighteen by twenty inches. The difference is owing to the fact that there are three Republican Presidential candidates and only two Democratic. In addition to each ballot there is a short biography of each Presidential candidate.

MOBILE LAW SUPREME.

Fraternal Brotherhood Dues Increased To Meet Requirement of the Statutes.

After a stormy session, the special meeting of the Supreme Lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood, which has been in session six days, ended yesterday after the question of whether the assessments of the older members should be revised and raised had been thoroughly threshed out upon the floor of Alhambra Hall.

Many of the fifty-three delegates present came with instructions from their lodges to fight against any raise of assessments. However, these could not be carried out, it is said by Supreme President Foshay, because the law now in force in California and twelve other States provides that the rates shall be raised for fraternal organizations until they conform with the provisions of the "Mobile law," as the measure is known.

W. F. Barnard, an actuary of Syracuse, N. Y., was present at the meeting and quoted facts and figures in connection with the "Mobile Law." President Foshay says that many of the 32,000 members of the order, scattered through seventeen States, do not understand the provisions of the law and therefore believe that the rating of old members should not be increased.

The convention finally voted for the increased rating.

ALL RECORDS ECLIPSED.

More Permits Issued for Homes in April Than in Any Corresponding Period in City's History.

April construction activities to date have completely eclipsed those of the corresponding period of last year. Compared with 961 permits, representing a valuation of $1,868,500, issued between April 1 and April 19, inclusively, the figures for the first nineteen days of April, 1911, are 638 permits and $968,000 valuation.

Of the permits issued thus far, 443 have been taken out for new residences of different kinds and in all parts of the city. These homes will represent an outlay of $955,423 upon the part of the builders. All previous records of house-building activity for any single month are sure to be left far behind before May 1.

To date for the year 4435 permits have been issued by the building department, these calling for an outlay for construction work of $8,166,515. The figures for last year were 3272 permits and $6,205,027 valuation.

NEW HOTEL OPENED.

BUILDING THOROUGHLY MODERN

REDONDO BEACH, April 20.—The new St. Edgar Hotel which has been erected at the corner of Benita and Emerald streets by Dr. C. Edgar Smith of Los Angeles was completed this week and will be open for business May 1. The building, which is a two-story brick with a large roof garden, is the most up-to-date of its kind in the city. It cost about $20,000 and has thirty rooms, all of which have outside exposures. On the roof the proprietor has planned to erect about forty sleeping rooms with canvass tops. The house will be in charge of Mr. Smith and Mrs. L. F. Russell.

A building which is equally as important an improvement for the town was begun yesterday. This is the business building to be erected by P. C. Ridgely, the dry goods merchant on Pacific avenue. The structure will be a two-story brick with buff finish and will cost about $8000. The entire lower floor will be occupied by the Ridgely mercantile business while on the second floor there will be five office rooms and stock rooms. The building, which is being put up by George Reed, will be completed by July 1.

UNUSUAL ADULTERATION.

A New York Druggist Finds a Lizard in a Can of Balsam of Peru from San Salvador.

[New York Times:] A Sixth Avenue druggist had occasion to open a can of balsam of Peru several days ago and found imbedded under the cover a small lizard of varicolored hue, a beautiful blue predominating. Theorizing how the lizard came to be shipped in the balsam, the druggist said:

"The reptile must have been put in the can in the Republic of San Salvador. Balsam does not come from Peru, any more than German silver comes from Germany, or Alaska ice cream from Alaska. The only place in the world where the balsam is found is in a tract of country about 750 square miles in extent. It is obtained from a tree, one of the most beautiful of the tropical forests. The flower or blossom is so fragrant that it can be noticed at a distance of several hundred yards.

"The crop is gathered in the summer. The tree is bruised with a dull instrument and the sap or balsam is gathered, after the bark is removed, by means of absorbent cotton, which is then boiled in kettles of water. The cotton is put in a press to get all the balsam out of it. The water in the kettles is evaporated, leaving the crude product. After another straining the balsam is poured into tins and sealed for shipment.

"My theory about the lizard is that it got into the balsam and was so near the same color at the time that it was not noticed and was poured into the can. You can see that it is well preserved."

THE LARGEST SHIP.

So Long That a Man Standing in the Bow Cannot Recognize a Person at the Stern.

[Literary Digest:] "It would be an impossibility for a man at the bow of the Imperator to recognize with the naked eye another standing in the stern. If we think of the Imperator set upon end beside the Cathedral of Cologne, the heaven-reaching tower . . . would come only to the second funnel of the steamship. To get a still better idea of the size of the vessel, it may be compared with one of the largest warehouses in the world—the new store of Tietz on the Alexanderplatz in Berlin, which, although forty houses were demolished to make room for it, could be placed entirely inside the Imperator. The steamship, when complete and fully laden, will displace 50,000 tons. The following figures show how much larger she is than the vessels which once held the world's record for size. The Deutschland, once the largest ship of the Hamburg-American line, which at the time she was built, and for ten years after, was one of the wonders of the world, displaced 16,500 tons; the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria of the same line 24,600 tons, and the giant of English ocean liners, the Mauretania, 32,000. Each of the funnels of the Imperator will be so large that a steamer like those which ply on the river Spree could sail through it lengthwise.

"The term 'floating hotel,' often applied to such ships when it is desired to emphasize their bulk, can, however, in the case of the Imperator, give an impression far short of the truth. For where in all the world is the hotel that can boast such accommodations? None save of the largest ocean steamships, and even these only in a small degree.

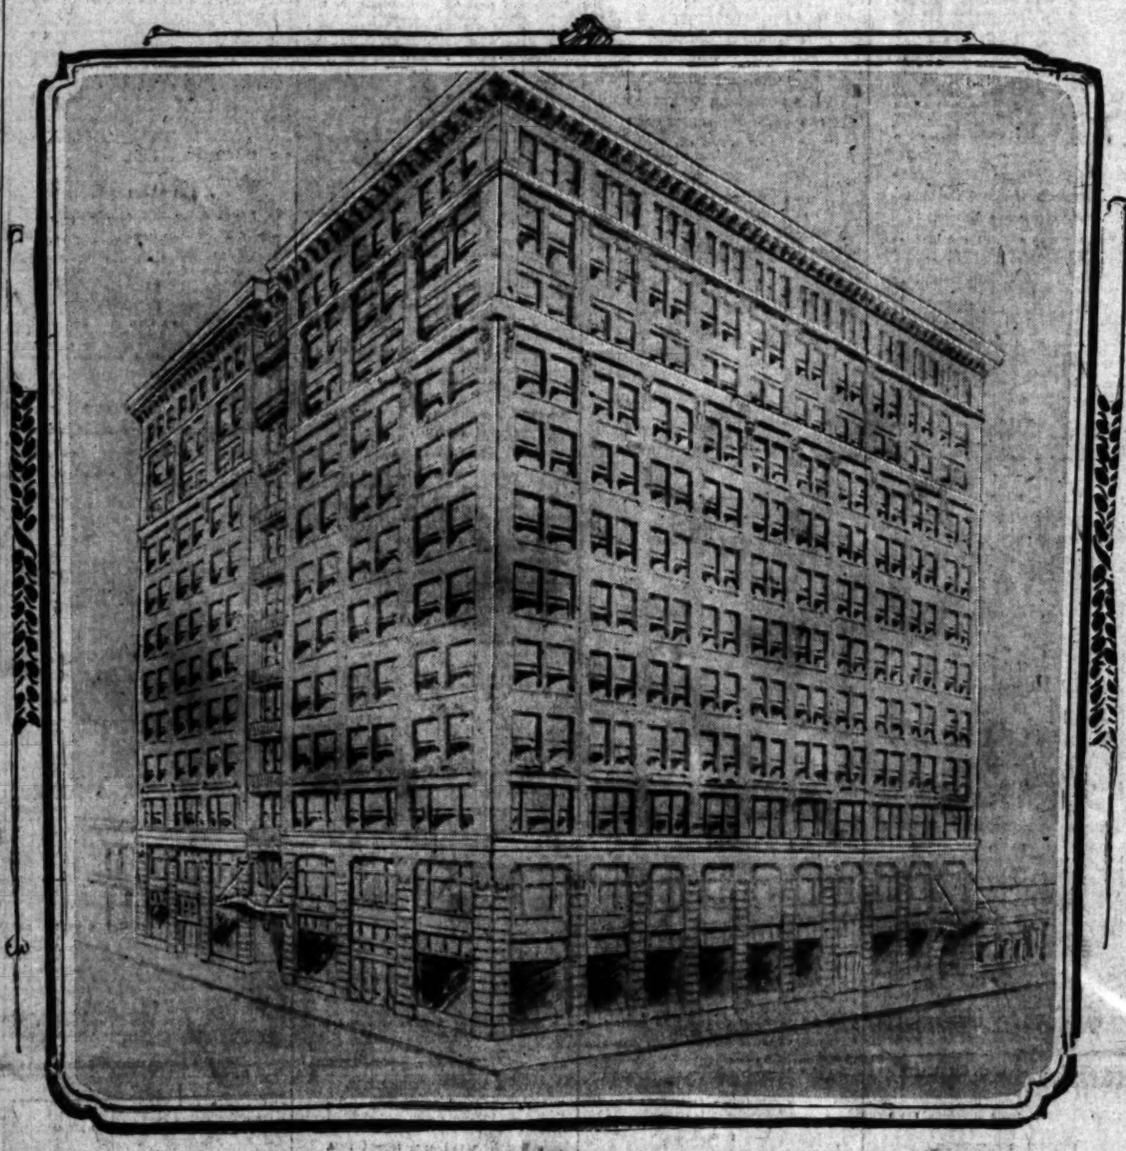
Twelve-story Office Block for Corner of Spring and Ninth.



Metropolitan structure planned by Architect Fred R. Dorn for Robert Marsh and Frank R. Strong.

GREAT BUILDING FOR WEST NINTH

Local Realty Men to Build at Corner of Spring.

Block Will Be Twelve Stories High and Fireproof.

Outlay, With Site, to Be Over One Million.

One of the most noteworthy of the large building enterprises of the downtown section is that represented in the plans of Robert Marsh and Frank R Strong for the great office block they propose erecting at the southwest corner of Ninth and Spring streets and facing the little open triangle formed at the intersection of Spring and Main. The project is to be rushed to completion from the day the building is started, which will not be later than June 1. The two-story frame house at present on the site is to be razed early in May.

The projected skyscraper, plans for which are now nearing completion in the offices of Architect Fred R. Dorn, will be twelve stories in height and of reinforced concrete construction. The builders state that already many inquiries have been made for rental space. The first published account of the project appeared exclusively in The Times about a month ago.

The site of the proposed building has a frontage of 117 feet on Spring street and of 149 feet on Ninth. Only the north half of the lot will be improved at this time, the plan being to add a structure of equal size and height in a year from now. The portion of the building to be erected now will cost about $225,000. The total investment will eventually be considerably in excess of $1,000,000, the owners holding their site at a valuation of $500,000.

The structure will be handsomely faced with white glazed terra cotta and will have for an ornamental feature a row of columns two stories in height and extending around the exterior of the tenth and eleventh stories. The main entrance, on Ninth street, will be protected by an iron and bronze marquise of handsome design. The lobby will be in marble throughout and the wainscoting of all the corridors will be of the same material. The floors will be of tile and the woodwork of birch.

The building will be equipped with four passenger elevators and one freight elevator. The appointments will be of the most up-to-date type and on a par with those of any other office building on the Coast. In the portion of the building to be erected at this time 198 offices will be provided for on the eleven upper floors. The first story will in all probability be occupied by a local bank, it is stated by the builders. The basement will be of full height and will be given over to cafe uses.

The site was purchased by Marsh and Strong six years ago from Chas. McFarland and at a consideration of $260,000.

TO LAY OUT FINE TRACT.

Forty Acres to Be Subdivided as Highly Restricted Residence Property.

A large deal of great significance and marking the trend of improvement and extension of the highly-restricted residence district of the city, has just been completed by the California Real Estate and Building Company, formerly known as the Lawrence B. Burck Company, and the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company. The transaction involves the purchase by the firms named and associates of forty acres, having a long frontage on the south side of Wilshire boulevard, just south of and adjoining Windsor Square and just east of and adjoining Fremont place. The price per acre is given at $6000, approximating $250,000 as the total purchase price.

This was the last piece of open or unimproved acreage on Wilshire boulevard and completes the filling up of a section comprising some 400 acres, all of which will be highly restricted. The sellers of the property were Lester Patterson and Andrew McNally, who had owned it approximately ten years.

The purchasers will immediately improve the property with the highest grade of street and municipal improvements and all lots will be restricted in such a manner as to make it one of the show places of Los Angeles. The tract will be known as "Wilshire Square," and will be handled by the owners.

ADD TO QUARTERS.

Los Angeles Investment Company Forced to Increase Office Space on South Hill Street.

The Los Angeles Investment company yesterday increased its Hill street frontage by the leasing of space to the north of its offices, taking in rooms recently vacated by another firm. The additional space gives the investment company more than 150 feet of frontage and makes its general offices inclusive of numbers 329 to 337 South Hill street with the exception of one small piece.

Despite the fact that the new thirteen-story building of the company at Eighth and Broadway will be ready for occupancy within a brief time, the increase in business made necessary the additional room. Yesterday, as soon as the lease was negotiated, the company's architectural department and the estimating, building and draughting departments were moved into the new quarters. The new room accommodates five desks besides the general working space. At the rear will be built an extension enlarging the present quarters somewhat.

ART AND COMMENT.

The address of welcome before the architectural convention last week by John W. Mitchell of the Municipal Art Commission aptly expressed the true status of things in this city as regards the development of public ideals and ambitions in such a sensible and so helpful manner in the remarks that they really deserved better publicity than that accorded them in the convention meetings.

Mr. Mitchell, in opening, referred to the problem of structural development as the "noble guild of architects," and expressed the hope that the members of the Coast's leading architects, in convention in the city, would agree to foster and encourage the artistic development of Los Angeles. "It is no spirit of boasting," said, "that I remind you that in the last two decades Los Angeles has grown from a Mexican settlement to a metropolis, and that this growth has not been in measured keeping with that of other populous cities, all rules have been cast aside. Nearly five hundred miles of streets have had to be constructed in these years to meet the demands of business and residential districts.

"Many buildings constructed a few years ago, supposedly for the future, are long since hopelessly inadequate, and new and better buildings are imperative. The question of sanitation carefully provided for generations, yet unborn, has had to be abandoned, enlarged and multiplied in less than one decade.

"The water supply that seemed ample to meet all growth long ago has become inadequate. By a plan, startling in its boldness, we are bringing a splendid supply of pure water 240 miles from the snow line of Mt. Whitney, through mountain ranges and fertile valleys and over desert wastes to irrigate our orchards and gardens, generate power and supply our needs.

"We have also provided an ample water supply, engineers are working on the details and the plans for a great railroad to reach it. And architects are working on plans for streets and utilities we are ready and for most of them the money is ready."

Duties of Architects.

Then Mr. Mitchell continued, "For nearly twenty years has been an active force and engineers in this city so far as our public work is concerned, and now we hope, with this great gathering here, will become one of the architects. For we are now inaugurating plans for the future; the location and design of a civic center and of an educational or artistic center, comprehensive municipal governmental buildings for the one and a museum of fine arts building and auditorium for the other.

"We have not provided the funds for these, but the city is rich enough to carry both to a successful issue. These great buildings should be built for the centuries and should be the noblest order of architecture. They should be in every sense worthy of the city. And if the members of your great profession are sought and engaged to prepare them, and to see them honorably executed, it would be better not to attempt these great things at all, but that we wait and wait, and then wait, until architecture as is needed, called for, is the rule and not the exception."

Out-of-Town Appraisal.

Recently the editor of one of the leading trade journals in this section published a book entitled "California Book for Travellers and Settlers," which appeared in 1873 and which was written by Charles Nordhoff, a correspondent for the New York Herald. Nordhoff was one of the friendliest of all the early writers on California and apparently had a better conception of the possibilities of the Golden State than any of his contemporaries. He was especially friendly to Southern California and defended the Southland warmly against the adverse criticisms of the San Franciscans of the day. Listen to his comments on the land values prevailing fully forty years ago.

"The price of land," he says, "at first strikes the stranger as high. Near Los Angeles they ask from $30 to $100 per acre for unimproved farming land. I thought they were already discounting the railroad which is coming to them, and which will no doubt cause this part of the country to increase rapidly in population and wealth. Everybody was 'talking railroad.' A corps of engineers of the Southern Pacific Company was near the town completing surveys for the road; and as I have seen in the East the rise in prices following the mere announcement of a new railroad, it was natural for me to think that prices here had been affected by the same cause. But I am satisfied that they are, on the whole, not too high."

In this explanatory observation Nordhoff reveals himself as a prophet of considerable pretensions. He wasn't any too sure of himself as it was, but his conclusions, half apologetic though they were, were recorded in cold type and hence must stand. The railroad did come and it has since transpired that the values of 1873 were not a whit too high. In fact some of the thirty-dollar-an-acre land spoken of by Mr. Nordhoff is today commanding around $8000 a front foot as city business property.

Some Good Advice.

Some of Nordhoff's advice to prospective settlers from the East was most excellent even from present day standards. Witness the following quotation in a advocacy of intensive cultivation, written in a day when lands were being practically given away and before the "back to the land movement" had ever been discussed.

"I advise farmers from the East to be content with small farms of from eighty to at most two hundred acres. The rage for large possessions has been a curse to the farmers of this State. I have seen a wheat field of forty thousand acres in the San Joaquin Valley; fields of wheat of from 1000 to 5000 acres are not uncommon; nor is it rare for their owners to be ruined by losing a crop. I am certain that an industrious farmer who cultivates 160 acres in the San Joaquin Valley, who plants oranges and almonds and olive orchards on twenty acres, who soils his stock, who keeps a good vegetable garden for his family, and attends to his crops with care and thoroughness, will be worth more money at the end of ten years, and have a more valuable place besides, than his neighbor who has tan times as much land and has raised wheat only. The small farmer will require less capital, he will run fewer risks of loss, his income will be greater on the average, his living will be more comfortable and, in the end, his small farm will be worth more money than his neighbor's exhausted and carelessly kept large farm."

PICO AND MAIN SOLD.

Southwest Corner Changes Hands at Large Consideration — Syndicate Buys Site at Main and Fifteenth.

C. W. Houston & Co. and W. I. Brent have sold for E. A. Montgomery, to a local syndicate, the southwest corner of Pico and Main streets, the reportad consideration being approximately $160,000. This property is 105 feet on Main street by 140 feet on Pico.

C. W. Houston & Co. and the Erkenbrecher Syndicate have sold to a local syndicate, the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Main streets, for the estate of Matilda Erkenbrecher. The consideration is given at $62,500. This property is 60x125 feet in size. It is understood that both of the above properties will be improved in the near future with substantial buildings.

WILL PLANT TO LEMONS.

The firm of Bradley & Eels of Pomona report the sale of 160 acres of citrus land three miles northeast of Uplands for I. W. Heilman of San Francisco to George N. Hamilton of Claremont, the consideration being $44,000. Hamilton contemplates planting the entire tract to lemons.

FINE WELL DEVELOPED.

Water Sufficient to Irrigate Section Reported to Have Been Struck by Borers at Richgrove.

The Ensign-Francis Company, general agents for the Richgrove and Terra Bella land companies, report that a flow of water sufficient, if air compressors were used, to irrigate a section of land has been struck in a well just completed on a tract owned by Mrs. Marco H. Hellman, Mrs. L. M. Cole and Mrs. S. Aronson. Irving H. Hellman and associates, who recently purchased 200 acres one-half mile east of Richgrove, are now grading the land and planting orange trees on their holdings. They intend to build a fine bungalow on the property and otherwise beautify the place.

The Richgrove Land Company is having another irrigating well drilled in Colony Tract No. 4, and will sell the land adjoining with water and a cement underground irrigating system. The following is a list of those who are planting orange groves this season: Reid Land and Development Company, 200 acres; Richgrove Land Company, thirty-five acres; Edward Johnson, twenty acres, Clifford Lightbody, ten acres; Eliza V. Russell, ten acres; Carl Russell, ten acres; Jessie H. Redding, ten acres; S. R. Shoup, thirty acres; B. J. Platt, twenty acres; Emma J. Hadley, ten acres; J. M. Hadley, ten acres; A. B. Ritchey, ten acres; A. S. Turner, ten acres; F. H. Dice, fifty acres, and George H. Barnes, twenty acres. The Richgrove Land Company is planning extensive improvements in the townsite in the way of cement walks, curbs, oiled streets and a complete water system.

Chaille, ten acres, $1000; Mrs. Elizabeth Harvey and Mabel Harvey Moore, ten acres, $1000; George Norwood, ten acres, $1000; J. W. Nixon, twenty acres, $2000; A. W. Metz, ten acres, $1000; F. W. SNAP OF THE SEASON.

INCOME $200 MONTHLY. PRICE $10,000.

WILL PAY FOR ITSELF IN FIVE YEARS.

$6000 bank mortgage shows bank appraisal of $15,000, and can remain. Balance of $4000 cash. Store and apartment building in a location with a great future, 20 minutes from downtown.

Serious illness of owner compels this great sacrifice. Four 4-room apartments, two 3-room apartments, and three stores will bring income of over $200 per month, which income would pay the entire purchase price in less than 5 years. The owner's illness and consequent neglect of the premises accounts for several vacancies, but $120 per month is now coming in. The apartments are very well constructed, modern in every way, having cement floored bathrooms with shower bath, two disappearing beds in each apartment, built-in writing desks, sideboards, bookcases, full length mirrors, laundry trays, etc. First-class new furniture, rugs, etc., go with the property. Corner lot 50x130 being the only unrestricted property for several blocks. New building.

An absolute bargain. No trades considered. Perfect title. Don't telephone—call in person. Quick action required.

Between Grand ave. and Figueroa sts., near 21st st. Grand ave and Figueroa sts. are the two great future business thoroughfares. The lot alone is easily worth $100 a foot. The 6-room bungalow is very substantially built, is in perfect condition, and only 5 years old. It rents for $27 per month. The opportunity of this hour is in joining the public syndicate of home-makers and investors who are securing a 320-acre foothill suburban townsite. Every member of the Western Empire's Verdugo Home-Buyers Club participates enormously in the land profits of the project. It provides the safest security for investors because it insures immediate population and the values of land are in the people not in the land itself. It provides the opportunity to secure that foothill home of an acre, a half acre or a 50-foot lot merely from the profits of the land syndicate which you join.

It is only eleven miles from Broadway.

It is a center townsite spot with a future greater than Pasadena had.

Our booklet is different from any real estate literature you ever read and tells about this land our nine successful projects on this plan which have made from 200 to 300 per cent. to members. Call for it.

Investigate now—this coming week.

The booklet is free—but the auto trip costs you $2.50 round trip and you are under no obligations.

MAKING.
Investors and home-makers, participate in the subdivision profits of the Verdugo Home Buyers' Club. Investment is secured by first mortgage bonds at low valuations, which bonds are convertible for lots or acreage at low membership prices. Investment where you make two profits from the single investment. There is plenty of money in subdividing and improving raw acres, when it is more profit if the right location is secured. The right locations are scarce. Call and read booklet at once and take auto trip of two hours; and learn something that you have been looking for. No free rides—fare 50c round trip and worth double. Fruit of Promise.

RICH TRACT TO BE SUBDIVIDED.

FERTILE VALLEY LANDS WILL BE MARKETED.

Holdings Comprise Sixteen Thousand Acres in San Fernando Valley, Near Site of Ancient Mission. Widely Famous for Output of Fine Fruits.

Over 14,000 acres of fertile lands that have been kept off the market by a syndicate for several years is now, for the first time, opened to the public. This is the property of the San Fernando Mission Land Company, lying near the San Fernando Mission in the most favored section of the valley. These lands will be put on the market in tracts or five, ten and fifteen acres, a large portion of them being especially adapted to the growing of citrus fruits. The value of this property as citrus ground has been proven by years past, as the citrus fruits from this locality bring the highest market prices, lemons from these lands selling as high as $7 a box this last season.

Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, has purchased a twenty-acre orange grove from the company. Stoddard Dayton, vice-president of the First National Bank, has bought a forty-acre lemon grove. Althouse Bros., have twenty-five acres set out in lemons, and the California Vegetable Union of California Fruit Growers' Association have also invested in the district. Among others owning property in the tract are A. B. Wollaber, W. J. Hole, the San Fernando Nursery Company, A. J. Wilson of the Foothill Orchard Company and Charles E. Shattuck.

The Pacific Electric Company, which bought out the Los Angeles and San Fernando Electric Railway Company, will have electric cars running to the town of San Fernando within ninety days. The San Fernando county highway boulevard, a part of the good roads system, runs directly to San Fernando. In addition, a fine boulevard through Cahuenga Pass to the property will soon be completed by the company.

A $75,000 hotel is to be started immediately by the company, and a water system is now being installed. The town of San Fernando has two grammar schools, a large High School and other advantages. Electricity can be had on all the lands and within a year natural gas will be piped there from the Midway oil fields.

Besides citrus growing around the acreage comprises fine alfalfa and general farming lands. Winter tomatoes and other vegetables are grown in the area for the Los Angeles market.

Among the stockholders in the San Fernando Mission Land Company are H. E. Huntington, E. T. Earl, J. F. Sartori, M. S. Hellman, the A. Hammond Company of San Francisco, W. F. Jewett, W. G. Kerckhoff, the George T. Cope estate, L. C. Brand, Marion Otis Chandler, Mabie Otis Booth, the Times-Mirror Company, the Southern Pacific Company, R. S. Lovett, H. G. Otis, M. H. Sherman, Harry Chandler and J. A. Graves.

PRETTY HOMES PLANNED.

Ethelwyn Manor Tract, Near Santa Monica Palisades, Scene of Promising and Growing Building Activities.

With the completion of the first two substantial bungalows, work has been outlined for a score of other pretty homes for Ethelwyn Manor, the subdivision projected by Robert Marsh & Co., near the Palisades of Santa Monica and in the center of the fast developing seaward tracts south from Santa Monica canyon.

The last sales recorded at Ethelwyn Manor total $42,800, the purchasers of lots following: M. A. Richardson, Mrs. M. E. Adams, Dora M. Moolier, E. Stearns, E. A. Girvin, Jr., A. M. TO BUILD NEAR FATHER.

Son of Owner of Brentwood Park Show Place to Erect Beautiful House in Same Tract.

Murray H. Paulin has purchased a choice lot in Brentwood Park from the Braly-Janss Investment Company and will at once build a $10,000 home in that residence suburb. The architectural drawings, now being prepared, provide for a handsome country place and the site of the lot is one that gives unusual opportunity for artistic landscaping. The home of Mr. Paulin will be located only a little more than one block from the magnificent $75,000 residence of his father, F. C. Paulin, of the Imperial Land Company, which is one of the most beautiful estates on the city's outskirts. Fronting Grand boulevard, the largest of the Brentwood drives, and just off of San Vicente boulevard, it attracts hundreds of visitors who take this auto highway to the palisades.

Another purchase at Brentwood during the week was that of L. P. Munson who bought three large lots, on one of which he will erect a costly home, two others to be used for elaborate gardens. Four expensive houses are now under way at Brentwood, besides a number of pretty chalets.

PLANS MATURING.

Plans are maturing by the Western Building and Investment Company, for which Strong & Dickinson are selling agents for the development of a subdivision at Figueroa street and Vermont avenue, into one of the model sections of Los Angeles. The company will convert the tract into a home section in order to keep pace with the demand for bungalows and small houses. Playgrounds, small parks and every public utility feasible to such a community will be provided for. The company reports the following sales of houses and lots: N. G. Stringham, $2300; P. H. Penniless - Aged; Starvation Faces Man 90 Years Old

This Startling Story—Printed in the Buffalo News, March 24, 1912, Is As Pitiful An Example of Helpless Old Age As Has Perhaps Ever Been Published

Too old to work, too strong to die, too proud to accept charity and too poor to live longer without it, is the pathetic dilemma of an old friend of Councilman Charles L. Willert.

The old man, hale for his 90 years, is wondering how he and his wife are going to keep alive much longer on the small sum remaining from the savings of a life-time.

Being certain 11 years ago that he had not much longer to live he sold his property, which brought him $2400, rented a small room, dined frugally and settled down to pass the few remaining years of his life with such comfort as his limited means would allow.

But he failed to reckon with the increasing cost of food and the steadily advancing rentals, and above all, he failed to take into account his own strength. Today, with his fund nearly exhausted, he feels almost as brisk as he did 11 years ago and believes with dismal certainty that he will live to be well over 90.

Old Man's Fears

"Ich denke es langt nicht," sighed the old man as he came into Mr. Willert's store on Broadway. "I don't think it will reach."

"I have known him for years," said Mr. Willert. "He was a blacksmith in his day and a good one. No man could shoe a horse or round a bolt better than he.

"But when he grew to be 78 years of age he found it hard to swing the sledge. Thinking that he had but a few years to live he sold his house and put the $2400 it brought him into the savings bank. He estimated that by living modestly in small quarters and eating sparingly he and his wife would be able to keep off the wolf till the end of the journey.

"But 11 years have gone by and he is still hale and hearty. He and his wife have been living on an average of less than $175 a year for 11 years, but with little left and the prospect of several years of life before him, he doesn't see how he will work it.

Will Not Take Alms

"If he were the sort of a person who would accept help the solution would be easy, but he is of that independent old German stock which considers it little short of a disgrace not to be able to support one's self to the end of one's day. I am sure it would break his heart if he had to enter some home or accept charity. He would starve or freeze rather than be dependent upon others."

There is a lesson—a big one—in the story of this penniless old man. His $2400 placed in the Los Angeles Investment Company, when he sold his home, would be worth with dividends reinvested, over $24,000. His income would be over $1750 a year and he would be growing richer by increase in value, almost $2500 a year.

Contentment instead of fear—plenty instead of poverty—happiness instead of misery—would be his lot.

In the quiet of your home—this Sunday—think this over.

Getting Important.

PARCELS POST LIVE PROBLEM.

Congress Is Busy Wrestling With the Question.

Country Merchants and Express Companies Oppose It.

Farmers Are Heartily in Favor of New Law.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Congress is now squarely face to face with the question of adopting a parcels post law, a proposition that has been agitating the country for years, which both parties have declared for in former platforms, and on which it must be confessed some public men have felt obliged to do some artful dodging.

Throughout the country advocates and opponents respectively have made a bitter fight, and those whose duty it is to decide and vote for or against it are between the devil of the express company and the country merchants on the one hand and the deep sea of the retail department store and the farmer on the other—and as one member has expressed it, "We have both the devil and the deep sea as constituents."

Affecting, as it does, the cost of transportation, experts interested in it state that it is directly related to the high cost of living, and perhaps belongs to the same family.

On the point of how transportation increases the prices of our products, the Department of Agriculture has furnished figures showing that approximately $12,000,000,000 were paid by the consumer for what sold at the farm for $6,000,000,000. More specifically, they have alleged that certain quantities of apples, eggs, butter, ham, sausage and a chicken sold by a farmer at $2.85 within twenty miles of Washington, finally cost the consumer $5.55, whereas a direct from-farm-to-kitchen transportation would have profited both producer and consumer with far less ultimate expense. The principle herein involved has led to the agitation for cheaper rates for the transportation of small packages by means of the establishment of a parcels post system.

PLAN FAVORABLY REPORTED.

A modified form of parcels post has been reported favorably by the Committee on Postoffices of the House, and it is now before that body for action. It is admittedly experimental and is to be effective for but two years. The present law fixing rates on parcels going by mail requires the payment of 1 cent an ounce with a limit of four pounds for fourth-class matter or merchandise. The provision proposed by the House Postoffice Committee provides for the same rate as that which exists between the United States and foreign countries, namely, 12 cents a pound with a limit of eleven pounds. This is not an ounce but a pound rate, so that anything over one pound and up to two pounds will cost an additional 12 cents. Since the old law is not repealed, anyone sending a package of less than one pound may do so at the old rate of 1 cent an ounce.

There is an advantage in the increase of the limit from four to eleven pounds. On the other hand, the cost of transportation in certain cases is increased, as, for example, whereas under the existing law the rate for a package of seventeen ounces is 17 cents, under the proposed law it becomes 24 cents.

RURAL PARCELS POST.

In addition to this general parcels post provision, the bill also provides experimentally a limited rural parcels post with rates at 5 cents a pound for the first pound and 2 cents a pound or fraction thereof for each additional pound, with a limit of eleven pounds. It is proposed to try this out for two years on all the rural routes of this country. Like the first provision, it applies only to fourth-class matter.

One of the most difficult questions connected with proposed postal progress, it is stated in the committee report on this bill, arises with the suggestion to create a general unlimited parcels post for the transportation of merchandise at a flat rate of 8 cents a pound or less, with a limit of eleven pounds or a greater number of pounds.

The advocates of this proposition insist that the rate on fourth-class matter (merchandise) was at one time 8 cents a pound with no loss of revenue, but an increase of revenue; that the zone system of transportation charges used by the express companies is unnecessary and cumbersome; that express companies pay wheelage to railroad companies and divide profits and still make annually colossal profits at the expense of the people; that it is the right of the people to use the mails for their own benefit and that the right of the consumer to buy wherever he can secure the best bargain, whether it be at home or in another State or city, and that the complaint of this view is from selfish sources; that a largely-increased revenue will come to the government from the system and advantages and blessings to the whole people in its operation.

The opponents of a general unlimited parcels post insist, according to the chairman of the House Committee on Postoffices, Representative Mann of Tennessee, that it will tend to concentrate business in the large cities and be injurious to rural communities and small towns and cities, that it is a step in the wrong direction—paternalistic and dangerous in its tendencies; that it would create an enormous deficit in the Postoffice Department; that it would revolutionize the commercial system in the United States; that it would seriously delay the delivery of legitimate mail; that it would deplete or destroy the prosperity of innumerable country towns and villages, and therefore must be regarded as a menace to the welfare of all the people; that it is class legislation in that it discriminates against the country merchants and favors the great retail mail-order houses; that it is in effect a subsidy to the retail mail-order houses—wrong in principle and unfair in practice; and they further insist that a rural parcels post would be an entering wedge for a general parcels post.

OPPOSED BY MERCHANTS.

In short, declares Mr. Moon, most people in the country are engaged in agriculture and other pursuits, so far as information can be gathered, and the larger mercantile establishments in the great cities favor an unlimited parcels post law. The country merchant and nearly all merchants of the smaller cities and towns oppose the law.

A second bill is also before the House at this time which embodies a modified form of parcels post. It was reported by the interstate commerce committee in connection with a bill regulating the charges for the transportation of parcels by express companies. It provides in the first place for maximum rates for small packages lower than those now in effect, and the weight of such parcels is limited to eleven pounds and $50 in value to conform to postal regulations. The so-called "zone system is used; that is, within certain distances the rates shall be the same—two cents a pound for any two points not more than two hundred and fifty miles apart, four cents for any two points not more than six hundred miles apart, and so on. The measure further provides that there shall be co-operation between the express companies and the rural routes, so that a mailable package given to the express company can be delivered by the rural carriers and vice versa, both the express and postal charge, which are easily ascertained, to be paid in advance. It should be noted, however, that as in the postal bill mailable packages are limited to fourth-class matter.

The adoption of this plan is urged by the Interstate Commerce Committee because it is claimed that it relieves the situation without waiting for any department of the government to assume powers which would not be necessary "if those charged with the responsibility of transportation had done their duty."

A third and more radical plan for dealing with the same situation as the parcels post, but a substitute for it in theory, is embodied in a measure offered by Representative Goeke of Ohio in the House and Senator Gardner of Maine in the Senate, under which the express companies would be taken over by the government and extended to rural districts by means of the rural routes. By eliminating the express company as a competitive factor and using elastic rates varying with the distance instead of the law-made flat rate of the postal service, it is claimed that transportation could be made much cheaper than by the parcels post scheme.

PRESS COMMENT.

Mr. Roosevelt's Blacklist.

[Washington Star:] Mr. Roosevelt in his campaign has entered the stage of calling names. Mr. Cannon, Mr. McKinley, Mr. Penrose, Mr. Gallinger and former Senator Aldrich are on his list of undesirable statesmen undeserving of consultation by a President calling himself progressive. And Mr. Taft, as Mr. Roosevelt points out, has offended. Therefore Mr. Taft should give place to a man who would not err in that way.

Mr. Taft is guilty. There is no doubt about it. The men named have been to the White House, not once but often, and discussed legislation with the President.

Maybe the change has been in Mr. Roosevelt. When he needed assistance he drew upon these men, and they honored his drafts, and that was all right. But when Mr. Taft drew upon them and they honored his drafts, that was all wrong. The Roosevelt reasoning just now on all points is cloudy and unconvincing.

A Business President.

[New York Times:] Mr. Taft, as the campaign for the Presidential nomination grows more heated, renews, with greater earnestness, his urgent plea to Congress to reduce patronage, save money, and increase efficiency. It is a plan that will not appeal to the spoils politicians, but it will have weight with sober men who like to see public business, like private, managed honestly and well.

The message the President has just sent to Congress is very simple and practical, and its recommendations are far reaching. He would banish nearly all that remains of spoils from the two great patronage departments of the Postoffice and the Treasury, and the important though not quite so "fat" Department of the Interior. He urges that all the local offices in these departments be placed in the classified service—that is to say that they be filled by impartial competition, with no reference to politics. In the salaries of postmasters and assistant postmasters alone he estimates that the saving would be $4,500,000 on the present expenditure of nearly $9,000,000. With one postmaster at a salary twenty per cent. higher than the assistants now receive, all the work could be done that is now done, and done a great deal better. The increased efficiency would be an added gain. In the three departments the saving in salaries would be, in round numbers, $10,000,000; the value of increased efficiency is not readily measured in figures, but it would be great.

There is another gain, and a solid one, on which the President does not dwell. It lies in getting rid of the demoralization caused by political appointments. The mischief done by these in the service is great, and that done in the community is still greater, especially in the matter of local appointments. It is through these that the party organization is in a great part controled. It is a notable sign, and a good one, that the candidatae for the Presidential nomination who is most denounced by the "Progressives" should take the lead in a practical reform of this sort.

Col. Roosevelt.

[Washington Star:] Col. Roosevelt during his administration as President was strangly blind to the faults of character he now discovers in Mr. Taft.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] "Mr. Roosevelt today is neither a Republican nor a Democrat nor a Progressive," says the Springfield Republican. "He is simply a state of mind," and it must be an unpleasant state of mind, too.

[Seattle Post-Intelligencer:] The Colonel's recent vagaries have made him a subject of interesting study to cold-blooded scientists. One of this class, Dr. Morton Prince, of Tufts college, makes a psychological examination of the phenomenon and arrives at this conclusion: "He will go down to history as one of the most illustrious examples of the distortion of concious mental processes through the force of subconcious wishes." Few really thought it was as bad as that.

DRAWN FROM A PHOTOGRAPH

No Need for Clean-up Days at Athens-on-the-Hill

Mayor Alexander requested that a special day be set aside for Los Angeles to tidy up and put on her very best dress. We are heartily in accord with this laudable policy, and believe that our fair city should be made to look as spic and span and PRESENTABLE as possible.

But there is no necessity for anything of this kind out our way in the Southwest—NO NEED FOR "CLEAN UP" DAYS AT ATHENS-ON-THE-HILL. Every day is visitors' day with us. Each street and alley and lot is ready for your inspection at any time the fair light of day floods its broad, clean, healthy expanse.

We Want You to Come

You will be mighty welcome whether you buy or not. For we have prepared a real Show Place for Homes here, and we want you to SEE for yourself.

It cost us over $100,000 to make of Athens-on-the-Hill the beautiful tract that it is today. We first picked out this piece of ground because of its naturally beautiful contours and its high, healthy location, as well as its strategic position along the lines of greatest growth and surest, biggest increase in values.

Los Angeles is a wonderful city, and truly great things are accomplished here. Yet, probably in the whole history of the city, no offer quite as UNUSUAL as the one we are now making you has ever before appeared in the local public prints. Here is our proposition, fairly, frankly, honestly made:

Big 50x189-ft. Lots for $500

Think of it! No catch about this. No key lots. And, bear in mind, Athens-on-the-Hill is situated right on the celebrated Harbor Boulevard, Vermont avenue and exclusive Figueroa street. The big, luxurious cars of the Athens cut-off line of the Pacific Electric will take you there any day in exactly 20 minutes. This is desirable service in these times of rush and hurry. And should you decide to locate on this beautiful tract, the owners of Athens-on-the-Hill will be your neighbors. This is a DOUBLE insurance of high class environment and a perpetuation of all the UNUSUAL features that are making Athens-on-the-Hill famous as a Mecca for THE MAN WHO LOVES HIS HOME.

Come to our office today. Open Sunday, 9:30 to 1:30. Get details. Cars leave every little while. You will enjoy the trip.

PARIS, April 8.—M. Claude Casimir-Perier, son of the former President of France and husband of Mme. Simone, the actress, who has just returned from an official mission to Los Angeles and other American cities, has a great deal to say regarding the Panama Canal and American ports in general apart from the report which he has sent to the French government.

He strongly criticises the opinion expressed by the American commission sent to Europe last year, to the effect that the United States had nothing to learn from Europeans on the subject of the construction and equipment of ports. This is not so much a declaration of superiority as an avowal of ignorance, he says, since every nation has something to learn from others.

He Urges France to Prepare for Panama Trade.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PARIS, April 8.—M. Claude Casimir-Perier, son of the former President of France and husband of Mme. Jeanne Granier, the actress, who has just returned from an official mission to Los Angeles and other American cities, has a great deal to say regarding the Panama Canal and American ports in general apart from the report which he has sent to the French government.

He strongly criticises the opinion expressed by the American commissioners sent to Europe last year, to the effect that the United States had nothing to learn from Europeans on the subject of the construction and equipment of ports. This is not so much a delusion of superiority as an error of ignorance, he says, since every nation has something to learn from others.

America, he adds, is now committing one of the worst mistakes in her industrial history by the way in which she now is scattering harbors indiscriminately up and down both coasts.

M. Casimir-Perier points out the huge amounts which New York, Boston, New Orleans, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Seattle and others are now expending for the outfitting of their harbors, docks and piers, and declares that for these ports to receive the tonnage for which they are now being fitted out, America would have to be as rich as Europe and Asia combined, and the canal would have to have a traffic for which the Straits of Gibraltar would be too narrow.

"Trouble is ahead for America," he says. Ignorance of the exact results of the opening of the canal, the rivalry of adjacent States, the mistaken competition between ports which in reality serve the same territory, and the feverish activity now being manifested everywhere must result, according to this critic, in a series of heavy financial crashes.

At the same time he admits that France especially, now that she is preparing her coasts for the canal trade, can receive many lessons from the United States. He regards the American system of open ports, which vessels can enter regardless of tides, and which are kept constantly dredged to a sufficient depth to admit the largest vessels, as much superior to the French system.

He especially praises American foresight in constructing ports to cope with a far larger traffic than that anticipated at the time, and says that Americans show the greatest wisdom in rejecting the European custom of building ports as solid as fortresses with stone quays, which are apparently destined to last forever, but which have to be continually rebuilt at huge expense to handle the increasing trade. France would do well, he says, to adopt the plan of using light structures, which can be modified without much trouble when necessary.

The present time, he believes, is a critical one for French trade in consequence of the vast economic changes which the canal will bring about, and he calls on his countrymen to study carefully the new conditions arising and concentrate their efforts on the reorganization and creation of centers of trade with the United States.

INDUSTRIAL ANARCHY.

Agitators of the I.W.W. Recruit Their Followers From the Inferior Laborers From Other Countries.

[New York Commercial:] Two movements to secure higher wages for labor are running counter to each other in this country. The trade unions simply ask for more pay, but do not seek to destroy existing social conditions, and most of those in their ranks speak English and are fairly intelligent. On the other hand, the Industrial Workers of the World who fomented the Lawrence strike and are now trying to stir up trouble in the New Jersey mills are chiefly people from Southern and Eastern Europe, few of whom speak English or have been long enough in this country to know its customs. They aim to abolish the wage system, and establish a sort of socialism which will take possession of all the machinery of production and thus give them all the profits. They strike, not for wages, but to make conditions unbearable for capital.

When such foreigners land in this country they seek work at once and sell their services at any price they can get. Most of them look for indoor employment and grown men ask for tasks usually performed by boys and take boys' wages for doing it. These men also do the lighter work in the clothing trades, hitherto monopolized by women, and then cut down the scale until it gets below the living wage in New York City and some mill towns.

Their employers must share some of the blame for these conditions, out they suffer in the end. This foreign labor feels that something is wrong, but does not grasp the fact that it has brought the trouble on its own head. Then comes the agitator who makes these people believe that they can take what they want if they stretch out their hands, and they are never to make peace till they get all they want. The Lawrence strike has proved this to be the fact. They seek to drag all the rest down to their own level.

This country is receiving a vast number of such people who are physically and mentally below the general standard. Few of them go on the land. They hive in cities and keep together, and out of touch with the life of the nation. They are not efficient and are not worth more than they are paid. They sell their labor for what seems riches to them at first when they compare their pay with what they could get in Europe. Then they get the taste for meat every day and find they cannot afford the American standard of living. They did not taste meat once a month in their native country.

It is a serious problem. This country is receiving a constant stream of inferior labor glad at first to take low wages, which learns to demand a higher standard of living than it can afford. Men capable of doing no more than a boy of 14, are economic misfits in this country, and become a positive danger to it when imbued with the spirit of anarchy as preached by the men who are at the head of the Industrial Workers of the World.

A FEW HARD FACTS.

San Francisco Loses Work for Seven Thousand Men Because of Eight Hours Labor Day.

[Pacific Coast Mechanic:] The editor of the Pacific Coast Mechanic, during a recent visit to San Francisco, was privileged to visit the Union Iron Works and in talking to the heads of departments was told the following interesting facts regarding the relative working hours in San Francisco and competing points.

Although offered a bonus of $50,000 over an eastern bid for the building of a ship the Union Iron Works was compelled to refuse it as they could not pay the scale for eight hours and compete with the nine hour scale of the East.

If the scale in San Francisco was eight and one-half hours the Union Iron Works could furnish employment to 7000 men.

The showing of all this is that the union labor leaders are by their arbitrary methods keeping men away from San Francisco and at the same time sending out circulars advising laborers to stay away from that city and in the same breath howling for a bread line for the unemployed, when by a little liberal treatment of the situation, the use of a little common-sense and fairness work might be had for thousands. One often wonders at the dense ignorance of these labor men—at their selfishness.

If the added half hour will make possible work for 7000 men, why not have the half hour? It needs no figures to show the value to the city and to the men who want work. Why do not the 7000 men assert themselves and claim the right to work eight and one-half hours? Why do not the employers stand up for their right to employ men for that time? If one of the leading mills starts that plan all the rest will follow suit we are sure. Why not try it?

News From the Great California Oil Fields.

Santa Maria.

OIL MEN WATCH JOHN BELL WELL

Favorable Showing Is Made in Unproved Ground.

Hole of Some Depth Passes Through Rich Sands.

Tests in Both Indicate Oil of Twenty Gravity.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA MARIA, April 18.—The Oil Fields Syndicate well, on the John Bell tract, two or three miles to the southeast of the famous Palmer gushers, is just now the cynosure of the eyes of not only oil men locally interested, but also of most of the big oil men of the State.

The improbability that the light oil zone of the Santa Maria field is confined to the comparatively small area known as the Old Field, has occasionally been pointed out. Many big wells have come in from time to time, in the district which extends from the Los Flores tract to the Hartnell ranch east and west, and from the Brookshire ranch to the Careaga tract, north and south. The longevity of some of these wells has been nothing short of marvelous. In fact every bit of evidence points to a vast deposit of petroleum. That this deposit cannot be confined to the limited area known as the proven district is shown by the old well of the Los Alamos Oil and Development Company, which is several miles to the southeast of the Western Union lease.

The well in question is now owned, and is soon to be operated again by the Esperanza Oil Company. A few years ago this well produced 800 barrels daily of thirty-eight gravity oil. When it had been pretty well established that Cat Canyon proper is not a light oil district, operators began to cast about for new territory to develop.

After numerous wildcatting expeditions the idea of oil territory extension, with regard to the light oil proposition of the local fields, has simmered down to the outcome of operations in the Tepusquet, the Tinaquaic, Fugler's Point, and the John Bell ranch. Up to the present time at none of these points has a well been carried to successful completion. Tepusquet is, as yet, an unknown quantity, while Tinaquaic has brought disappointing results. Near Fugler's Point, the Bradley Canyon Oil Company has scarcely begun, while the Summit well is as yet untested. On the John Bell ranch, the Oilfields Sndicate Company has already established itself by proving conclusively that oil exists in that district.

At present the Oilfields Sndicate well is 2700 feet deep and has passed through two strata of rich oil sand. In both cases there has been a good showing of oil, which has shown a test of 20 gravity. The latest sand is more than 100 feet thick and the well shows all the marks of being a winner. The operators have decided to go deeper in an effort to reach a third sand. The showing so far made points to the proving-up of a light oil territory extension.

If the final outcome of this well bears out present belief an extensive light oil territory will be opened up. The regularity of formation in this area shows a prospective new district of more than 100,000 acres in extent east and west. It is pretty well opined, locally, now that large corporations, representing millions of capital, have secured secret options on properties in the vicinity of the well mentioned. At any rate local people have tried, and have been unable to secure options, even at fabulous prices, on any part of the territory.

About two weeks ago W. W. Orcutt, the Union Oil Company's geologist, accompanied by Frank Hill, superintendent of all drilling operations of the Union, took a trip into the part of the field adjacent to the Oilfields Sndicate well. What the purpose of the trip entailed has not yet been ascertained. Mr. Orcutt has a good reputation as a geologist, while Mr. Hill is reputed to be an oil man of keen sagacity and wonderful powers of memory. Rumors of this trip are many and extremely speculative.

Midway in Fine Shape.

On the north side, in the Tepusquet, the Santa Maria Midway well is showing up in fine shape. The hole is down some 2200 feet and is in brown shale. The indications point to the striking of the pay-streak soon. Two strata of the sands have already been passed through, the latest showing lighter oil than that preceding. A third sand is expected within the next 100 feet. Just now the crew is taking things easy awaiting the arrival of new cable. The keenest of interest centers upon the movements at this well within the next month or two, as a vast area of new territory will be proven up upon the inception of a successful well.

A few miles to the southwest, and some six miles to the north of the famous Blockman ranch, is the Summit well. This is likewise a wildcat project. At the present time this well is 2680 feet deep and is in the oil sands which were encountered at 2500 feet. The well is soon to be cemented off with the six-inch string.

In Cat Canyon things are shaping up much better than for a period of six months past. It is being pretty generally proved that this district is underlain by a vast body of oil. The wells brought in are invariably harrassed by sand troubles, and just as invariably, if the wells are properly handled, big producers result. The operators are finding that four-inch tubing is about the proper size, as it allows the production of about five times as much oil as is possible through the three-inch. The difference in production is greatly out of proportion to the difference in diameter. As a further advantage it is said that the larger tubing keeps the sand from having an opportunity to clog the casing.

Brooks No. 2 is steadily improving. Under the operation of frequent swabbing it is now producing between 500 and 600 barrels daily. The oil is of about fourteen gravity. Undoubtedly this well will be one of the best in Cat Canyon and is showing all the marks of a prospective gusher.

Palmer Annex A-No. 1 is another well which shows gushing propensities. The four-inch tubing is being used and a production of 1000 barrels daily is being shown and this, too, regardless of the fact that sand troubles are still much in evidence. The oil yielded is of fourteen gravity and a stratum of 150 feet of oil sand is being drawn upon.

Puente Oil Company's
New method of delivering oil to its consumers.

The Last Word.

PUENTE OIL TRAIN BEING PROPELLED BY AUTO TRUCK

THE illustration shows the manner in which the Puente Oil Company, operating in the Fullerton field, delivers oil to its customers. This big automobile truck hauling a train of tank wagons is the very latest word in oil transportation. The Puente truck, with three tank wagons attached, is shown delivering distillate from the company's refinery to consumers.

This method of oil transportation has been found to be more direct and economical than railroad transportation, and for that reason is rapidly gaining in favor.

News Notes and Personals.

GAS PRESSURE IN DOMINION WELL.

COMPANY IN KINGS REACHES DEPTH WITHOUT OIL.

Commercial Petroleum Completes Rig and Is Ready to Spud In—Reported White Creek Has Showing of Nineteen Gravity Oil—New Map Is Made of District.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, April 19.—The Dominion Oil Company, on section 7, 23-17, in Kings county, is down 2590 feet in well No. 1, with six-inch casing. The gas is showing up very strong. The formation is a hard, rock-like sand, with little showing of oil.

Well No. 4 of the Turner Oil Company, on section 2, 20-15, was spudded in this week, with fifteen and one-half inch pipe. The derrick is being erected for well No. 5, and as soon as completed the well will spud in.

As soon as the rig for well No. 12 of the W. K. Oil Company is completed it will be rigged up and spudded in. The derrick has been completed.

The rig for well No. 4 of the Commercial Petroleum Company has been completed and is rigged up for spudding in, which will be done as soon as the boiler is connected. Since the discovery of the valuable paraffine oil below the first and second oil sands by the Standard Oil Company on section 28 and the showing made by the Crown Oil Company in the same sand on section 30, 19-15, considerable attention has been attracted in this section of the field. The Commercial Petroleum Company is located on section 31 of the same township. It expects to reach the paraffine sand.

It has been reported that the White Creek Oil Company has a small flowing production of 19 gravity oil from its well No. 1, on section 2, 21-14. Arrangements have been completed for a more thorough development of this property, and ten wells will be drilled. The rig for well No. 2 is now under way.

Well No. 1 of the Vancouver Coalinga Oil Company, on section 14, 20-15, is 4185 feet deep in six and one-fourth inch casing. There are 193 joints of twenty-eight-pound casing in the hole, weighing in all fifty-nine tons. This is one of the longest strings of six and one-fourth inch casing in this field.

C. C. van Vaikenburgh, the local surveyor and civil engineer, has just completed and is now busily engaged in distributing his new map of the Coalinga Oil fields.

The maps are well printed on blueprint paper and cloth, 26½x42 inches, and are well protected with a good quality of moulding. All of the townships in the field on which there has been any development is included in the map, and all drilling, water, abandoned and pumping wells are clearly marked as are also all reservoirs and shipping pipe lines. The location of the several bench marks showing the elevations in the field are also on the new map.

J. M. Baterman of the Arica Oil Company, accompanied by M. L. Soward, made a trip in the former's automobile to the Parkfield oil district yesterday, and report considerable activity at that place.

They went at the request of a number of local oil men, who have interests in that section and who are enthusiastic over the prospects for a good field there. The party found conditions a great deal better than they had expected.

They examined the anticline for a distance of five miles, and found oil seepages in several different places.

While in the vicinity they visited the Tri-County, Oak Shade, Patriquin and Thompson wells. At the latter place there was a small amount of oil already in the sump hole, though the well is only down about 250 feet.

The Tri-County is down about 2500 feet and the Oak Shade with good indications has reached the 200-foot mark, both wells being farther out on the formation.

OLD STANDBYS ARE DISCARDED

What Has Become of Favorite Mustache Cup?

Where Also Are the Whiteboned Table Knives?

Olden Household Necessities Never Seen Today.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BROOKLYN, April 12.—Well, what has become of the mustache cup, for instance? Those china affairs made especially so gentlemen would not spoil their lip adornments on the coffee. It seems only yesterday that Aunt Lizzie was sending them to all her best beaux for birthday presents. It was because I missed them the other day that I tried to find out how many other dear relics of the near past have disappeared.

What's become of the mud scrapers on the doorsteps and the mats with the large "Welcome" on them that used to greet us all wherever we opened the door? What's become of all the red and white barred stockings all the little girls used to wear? I can remember hundreds of little girls who used to run around with their legs looking like sticks of peppermint candy, but now I never see one. And the knitted mufflers around the necks? And oh, yes—what's become of the big mitts we used to wear with strings attached around our necks?

I recall now that I didn't see a linen duster last summer, and I didn't see one of those straw derby hats we used to wear. What's become of them? And where are the red-top boys' boots, the boots with the little brass protectors, the boys' shoes with the big horseshoe nail on the bottom of the heel?

What's become of the lady barbers? And what's become of all the colored barbers; the sealskin caps and the bluing balls mother used to use in washing?

What's become of the hand-painted mottoes; the what-nots that used to adorn the parlor furniture, the old plush piano stool with the fringe on it, and the iron animals in the front garden?

Then there are the plush picture frames, the worsted mats for the lamps made with a spool and four pins; strange glass canes that hung up in the parlor with colored water inside. What's become of them? What, too, of the big glass marbles with the little silver lamb inside that was the last word in knick-knacks in every well-conducted American home. Also, the stuffed doves under the round glass case that used to stand just at the side of the door, and the everlasting flowers. And what's become of the knitted wristlets you used to see along Broadway or any main street, and what's become of the old hand-knitted stockings for men, the sealskin collars that never had a lining—and, last, the case on the mantelpiece with the wax figures?

What has become of the Austin Sisters, the Human Flies, who used to walk on the ceiling?

What's become of Zip, the Mathematical Marvel; Jack O'Brien and his six-day lady bike riders; the pug dog, the author of "White Wings, They Never Grow Weary," the Seven Sutherland Sisters and the wooden ship in the bottle that no self-respecting bar could be without?

For that matter, what's become of the raw-egg eating champion, the pie-eating champion, the oyster-opening champion?

Mother's canned preserves with the red sealing wax on top—are there any more anywhere? The old wooden wardrobe in the bedroom, and the six-day go-as-you-please races; the white bone-handled table knives and home-made bread; the little candy shirts with mottoes and mushy sayings on them, and the sheaves of grass and colored pampas grass in the best room—where?

Don't you remember the butter dish in the shape of the hen sitting on ears and the milk pitcher built in the shape of a cow? You never see them now. And how about those elegant tidies the girls used to move around so they would always not be sick of our heads when we sat on the chairs and sofas?

Did you ever see the alligator cuspidor? It was a weird-looking apparatus, and maybe you're lucky to forget it. But they used to be almost everywhere that the gentle habit was practised. You reached out a leg and stepped on the 'gator custodian. Promptly it gaped cavernously. Then you expectorated. You missed your foot and the jaws closed. It was a truly wonderful thing. It raised that particular habit to the dignity of a ceremony, although many kept on preferring a knothole to the 'gator cuspidor.

Of course the storage battery did away with the pulldoor-bell knobs, and what made the horsehair ring, the horsehair chain, the cigar-store wooden Indian, the whale-boned corset and the mottoes of "God Bless Our Home" and with colored worsted through perforated cardboard disappear?

And what's become of the spring-heeled shoes for young ladies?

And the napkin rings?

Does anybody give a baby a silver cup with its initials cut in it nowadays? All my friends who have been having babies lately don't seem to have them—the cups, that is. What's become of son and heir's silver knife and fork with his name on them? Most of these about either.

Bustles, "spit curls," frizzes, can be counted for on the grounds of changing fashion, but what's become of the hair tongs, and what on earth has become of the natural hair? Where's the Bolivar sandwich, which was made of a piece of cocoanut candy between two brown cookies, with scalloped edges? And the lozenges with the printed jokes? Has anybody here seen Kelly?

Have you noticed that the little German band is almost what-has-been-of-it?

Look around. Do you miss something else? What is it? Where is it? Sung one Villon (Doff your caps) many years ago.

COLORS AFFECTED BY COLORS.

Python in New York Zoo Shows Emotions, According to Visitors' Dresses.

[New York Times:] It was Charlie Snyder, keeper of the Zoological Park pythons, who first discovered the peculiarities of the twenty-foot python in the reptile house, and further investigation by Curator C. Ditmars has brought to light facts about the big reptile which are responsive to moods of the python. Snyder discovered that the python could be appealed to by colors, and not only that it could perceive changes in color, but that its moods were influenced by them.

Mr. Ditmars explained that, contrary to general belief, snakes do not actually hear music, and have no sense of melody. They receive the sensation of the vibrations through the tip of the tongue, and, like wireless instruments, become "tuned up," and often swing their heads in sympathy, which leads to the supposition that they are beating time.

The big python is utterly unresponsive to music. It was this fact that first directed Snyder's attention to his charge. He accidentally discovered the strange effect of colors on the reptile. He was watching has charge one day lately when he noticed the snake swaying rhythmically and following with his head a woman who stood in front of the glass inclosure watching it. The woman wore a navy blue dress, and it was not until she was out of sight that the snake settled down to placid existence once more.

Snyder's curiosity was aroused, and he began to speculate upon the strange behavior of the python. His duties kept him pretty well occupied, and it was not until the next day that he saw a continuance of the performance. There was a crowd about the snake's house when he came in, and this time the snake was pressed close to the glass and manifested what Snyder said were snake signs of delight. His behavior changed as the crowd drifted past, and then Snyder came to the conclusion that colors were accountable for the python's conduct.

Mr. Ditmars was intensely interested by his report, and began to experiment. The python was taken from his home, and for some days Mr. Ditmars studied him. He made up a chart showing the effect of color on the big reptile. The emotions which certain colors inspire in the snake are not apparent to the usual visitor, but they are shown by the python, according to Mr. Ditmars, in this manner:

Red—Delight.
Baby blue—Pleasure.
Yellow—Contentment.
Navy blue—Ecstacy.
Brown—Irritation.
Green—Anger.
Black—Indifference.
Purple—Vanity.

Mr. Ditmars said he regarded the discovery as interesting, if not important, and he will probably pursue his research to find out whether any other snakes are susceptible to color.

"Color influences upon animals are not rare," he said. "You know it has become a saying that anything disagreeable to a person is what a red rag is to a bull. With the snake you will notice there is just the opposite effect, and it is red that gives delight, while green excites to anger."

LOCATION OF GARDEN OF EDEN.

PROF. ROGERS TELLS HOW IT WAS DISCOVERED.

Has Been Sought by the Greatest Scholars of the World, and Put in Many Different Sections of the Planet—Strange Theories Regarding Birthplace of Human Race.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] "For centuries scholars have been trying to discover the spot where the author of Genesis located the Garden of Eden," says Prof. Robert W. Rogers. "Most fascinating the problem as to where civilization took its rise, and from what locality went forth the various circles of emigration. All the students of languages have had their different theories, and each Max Muller or Whitney has used that theory to explain the languages, Semitic, Aryan and Chinese. Poets like Tennyson have represented their heroes and knights setting forth from this bright spot. Hans Andersen knew the difficulty of the question, and made one of his little princes ransack the greatest library in the world for information as to where the Garden of Eden was, and found not a word therein. There was a fine humor in all this, because the little prince would have been disturbed by the discovery that the Garden of Eden has been located almost everywhere on the planet. The great scholars, Kiel and Baron Bunsen, located it in Armenia, because they thought the unwonted sunshine made that spot the brightest in the world. Dillman and Schrader located it in Utopia, in the beautiful land of Nowhere. Haeckel and Gaspari placed Eden in Limuria, now submerged and a part of the Persian Gulf. The chief strength of their position is that nobody can deny it, even though there is no argument for it. Gerald Massey thought Paradise must be in equitorial Africa because there life swarmed, and was multitudinous and colossal—a world of wet and a heaven of heat. But unfortunately this argument would suggest that Eden was in New Jersey, at the height of the mosquito season, when the land swarms and seethes with multitudinous wings. David Livingstone searched for the source of the Nile in the belief that when found it would prove to be the long lost Garden. Columbus was sure that the earthly Paradise was in Venezuela, where Castro now explodes his bombs, while another authority has traced it to Ceylon, because the highest mountain there was called Adam's Peak. Bishop Warren of Boston University was sure that the location was at the North Pole, which at that time, he thinks, was warm. The North Pole being a geographical center from which all the meridian lines converge, and the meridian lines being like banisters in the hall of the house, good lines on which the boys of the family could slip down into the tropics, carrying their languages with them. Landon West discovered the serpent mound out in the Miami River, and immediately announced that the Garden of Eden was located in Adams county, Ohio.

"As a matter of fact, the only important question is, where did the author of Genesis, who was in Palestine when he wrote the account, locate his Garden of Eden? As his own fathers came from Chaldea, he naturally places his Eden in the East, that is the home land, and he locates it by virtue of four rivers. He mentions one river which is known to every person in the Far East—namely, the Euphrates. Now he also bounds his Garden of Eden by the Hiddekel, a Hebrew name. Now as soon as a man has mastered several languages, he knows exactly what the River Hiddekel is.

"Hebrew Hiddekel becomes in Assyrian Idiklat. "I" was often dropped in writing, leaving Diklat. The Assyrian Diklat becomes Deklat in Syriac. Deklat in the Talmud is spelt Digiath. The Arabic 'D' is changed to 'T' or Tigrath, in Persian. The Persian Tigrath becomes Tigris in Greek.

"Now the River Hiddekel, one of the rivers of the Garden of Eden, empties into the Euphrates, near its mouth. The other river is called Pison, and means an old river bed. Now strangely enough, our caravan, in crossing from Damascus through to Ninevah and Nippur, found that in the rainy season there was a second great river, representing the overflow of the Euphrates, branching off from the regular channel at the point where the River Tigris bends and all but touches the Euphrates. Now the writer says that this River Pison flows through the land where there is much fine gold, and there are the old gold mines, some of which are worked to this day. And he also says that it was the land of the shoham. No one knows what the shoham was, but I believe it means the pearl, as the mouth of that river and the river bed hold the greatest pearl fisheries in the world. The fourth river is the Gihon, which is translated in the Septuagint as the Nile, and borders the land of Kush. Now there are two lands named Kush, that have a Nile. The one is in Africa, and that misled David Livingstone—while today when the head of our own expedition came to the banks of this very river east of the Euphrates, reined up his horse, and asked the guide what was the name of the river upon which they were looking down, he made answer that it was the 'Niles.' A circle, therefore, for a hundred miles would include all four of these rivers, and it would include the oldest palace, the oldest library, the earliest canals, and the oldest inscriptions known to the human race."

The Clock is Striking OPPORTUNITY at City Heights San Diego-

Do you realize the momentous activities that are centering at San Diego now?—a jump in population of 17,000 in 1900, to over 50,000 today—increase in building permits from $150,000 in 1900 to $5,700,000 in 1911—the great 1915 Exposition that will awaken the world to San Diego's opportunities—the building of the San Diego and Arizona Railway, which will afford the shortest and easiest grade route for transcontinental traffic from the East—the expenditure of $1,000,000 for preliminary harbor work to prepare for the great ocean commerce which will follow the opening of the Panama Canal.

Never was there a time in the history of any city when the opportunity was so ripe for conservative investment. The certainty of the opportunity in "City Heights" is emphasized by the fact that San Diego, because of its peculiar geographical situation, can virtually expand but in one direction—and right across the path of this direction is "City Heights."

It is a very significant fact that in almost every case where we have taken buyers from Los Angeles to City Heights, they have bought two or three times as many lots as they intended before they saw the property.

Beautiful Lots $150

Other Good Lots at $100, $75, & Some for Less. Very Choice Locations at $200, $250, $300 & $325

Terms As Low As $10 Down, $5 a Month. No Interest—No Taxes

City Heights already has a population of over 2000, and is growing now at the rate of 50 per cent. a year. It is only 25 minutes from the heart of the city—by double track through electric car line, five-cent fare. It has electric lights, gas, water, telephone, protective building restrictions, graded streets, and much of it sidewalks and curbs.

City Heights will stand the closest and most scrutinous investigation. It is an unquestionable money-maker to the man who invests at today's prices. All titles certified to by Union Title and Trust Co., San Diego, and by the Title Insurance and Trust Company, Los Angeles.
Booklet and complete information at our Los Angeles office, 5th Floor, Security Building.

SLANG IS OVERDONE.

Is Good to Pin a Thought Fast to the Memory, but There Is Often Too Much of It.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Slang has its uses, notwithstanding the severe denunciation of it by the professor of English in a college in a neighboring State. It has also its abuse, which consists entirely in its being overdone. All slang is used too much. As a condiment to more stable and established forms, it seasons them when aptly applied. Slang pins a thought fast to memory which might otherwise quickly fade. It makes it vivid, but it ought to be new. Old slang hath lost its savor. It is as painful to hear as a hat five years behind the times is to look at.

The weakness of slang in the mouths of youth lies in their too often using nothing else in connection with it. The impression is that they know nothing else.

"My attitude against slang," says the professor, "is a hostile one. It may sound smart to call an ice-cream parlor a 'joint' and your girl a 'queen,' but George Ade did a great harm to the English language by writing 'take your queen to an ice-cream joint.'"

Perhaps the professor regards this particular instance too seriously. No objection ought to arise to any young man calling his beloved, his "queen." The use of "joint" in this connection is not so defensible. Taking it by and large, we should say the most important thing is to see that the young woman gets the ice cream, regardless of the manner in which it is expressed.

Some Room Left for Settlers.

[Cassur's Magazine:] The older countries of Europe are seeking opportunities for expansion to find the means for meeting the pressure of growing population and developing industries, while, at the same time, they are dependent upon outside resources for a portion of the supply of the necessaries of life. France and Italy are reaching out into Northern Africa, while Germany is endeavoring to get whatever territory may properly be secured to meet these demands. These things are subjects of political discussion and form leading topics in the current newspapers and magazines, while little is said about the vast areas of fertile land yet available for development within the limits of the United States. The single State of Texas, for example, is of greater area that France or of the entire German empire, the figures being, in round numbers, about 204,000 square miles for France, 200,000 square miles for the German empire and 262,000 square miles for Texas. Thus it will be seen that either of these great countries of Europe might be placed in the middle of this single one of the United States, with ample margin all around.

The Gaelic Alphabet.

[New York Press:] Men familiar with the Gaelic tongue tell us that the alphabet of that ancient language is the most curious of all alphabets, in that nearly every letter is represented by a tree. The alphabet of today comprises eighteen letters; ancient Gaelic had seventeen. Now, as of old, all the letters with the exception of g, t and p, which stand for ivy, furze and heather, are called after trees. The Gaelic a b c now runs: Alim, beite, coll, dur, eagh, fearn, gath, huath, iogh, luis, muin, nuin, oiv, peith, ruis, suil, teine, ur, which is equivalent to saying: Elm, birch, hazel, oak, aspen, alder, ivy, whitethorn, iew, rowan or quicken, vine, ash, spindletree, pine, elder, willow, furze, heath. In the ancient Gaelic alphabet the letter h (the heath, or whitethorn) does not exist. The alphabet is called the bethluis-nuin, because b, l, n and not a, b, c, are its first three letters.

A Sure Shot at Scientists.

[Washington Star:] Paul J. Rainey, whose big game hunt in Africa has made him the champion lion slayer of the world, was asked in an interview in New York a question about the habits of lions.

"I can't answer that question," the young millionaire said, with a smile, "and I shan't pretend I can. Why should I emulate the scientific lecturer?

"A scientific lecturer, at the conclusion of a lecture of the most obtuse description, took a sip of water and said:

"'Question time. If any one now has any question of a scientific nature to ask I shall be glad to answer it to the best of my ability.'

"An old lady in a plaid shawl rose and said:

"'Will you please tell me why it is, sir, that wet tea leaves kill roaches?'

"The lecturer knew no more than Adam why wet tea leaves killed roaches, but, not to be nonplussed, he answered glibly:

"'When a roach, madam, sees a wet tea leaf he exclaims, "Hullo, here's a blanket!" and then wraps himself up in it falls asleep, and, naturally catches a severe cold, which, developing into pneumonia, in a few days kills the unfortunate insect.'"

Matrimonial Advice.

[New York Sun:] Rev. William E. Keating, curate at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, at Brockton, Mass., in a special Lenten sermon last night aroused much interest with his views on marriage. Here is some of his advice:

"Women who could marry and don't often are too particular. They start out in life by saying they will marry the man they want or none at all and usually, it is none at all.

"A widow has no right to set her cap for any man until all the young girls have been supplied with husbands. Profiting by their first experience, widows practice their wiles on men and thereby win second prizes. A man will have to be most extraordinary to be as good as the first husband.

"It is folly for a woman to think she can change the habits of a man after marriage. Do not exercise less care in selecting a husband than you would in choosing a girl to take charge of your mother's kitchen."

Trifles Cause Trouble.

[Washington Star:] President Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation was discussing an interview with a conferee.

"My friend was misquoted," he said, "innocently misquoted, but the misquotation, all the same, changed the whole meaning of his argument.

"It reminds me of an odd typographical error. George Brown was to marry Mary Jones, and the local paper in announcing the marriage meant to say:

"'George and Mary had been chums from childhood.'

"But the compositor made it read:

"'George and Mary have been chumps from childhood.'"

PERMIT RECORD SOARS.

Beach Construction Activities Involve Expenditure to Date for Month of Over Hundred Thousand.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

VENICE, April 20.—Building Superintendent Tate of Venice in his report shows that $112,350 had been spent in building permits during the first fifteen days of April. This breaks all records for any previous month and before the month is over he expects to see that amount doubled.

Work is well under way in the construction of the new pleasure pier at Navy street. The donkey engine and pile driver have been installed, piles have arrived for the falsework and the forms are being fashioned for the reinforced concrete piles that are to be cast. The force of workers will be increased from time to time as the work progresses.

The engineer, who will have charge of the supervision of the Virginia Reel, one of the new amusement devices to be built on the Venice pier, has arrived from New York and will remain here until the building is finished. Work upon the structure will begin within a few days and material has already arrived. The Virginia Reel will be a riding device in which the passengers will be transported in cars through beautiful scenery, mountains and caves. The material having arrived, a force of workmen will be put on the work of construction the first of the week.

Work will also be started the coming week upon several of the other amusements, which are to be built on the Venice pier. The piles are nearly all driven for the big amusement building, which is to fill the space between the auditorium and dancing pavilion and when this work is completed, work upon the building itself will be commenced. The promoters of these amusements hope to have all of them completed by the middle of June.

Lois E. Herndon of Los Angeles has taken out a building permit for a four-one-room apartment-house to be built on Westminster avenue, in the Country Club tract. It will be three stories and basement and will cost $14,500. Maude Armstrong of Whittier will build an apartment-house on Westminster avenue to cost $50,000. A permit for this building has not been taken out but, it is stated that work will be started soon.

Permits for new structures as issued during the week included the following: J. B. Durbar, residence on Park avenue, $1500; R. C. Gortner, four rooms on Lion and Cabrillo, $1200; Mrs. Bertha L. Thompson, Aldebaran and Rialto, six rooms, $1850; H. E. Davidson, Park place, six rooms, $1950; Mrs. Clara A. Rader, three cottages to be built on Mildred avenue in the Short Line Beach No. 3 tract, $1000 each; William A. Polkinghorn, two five-room cottages to be built on Woodlawn avenue, $2500 each; Phillip Slatri, six-room dwelling at Brooks avenue and Trolleyway, $1600; Mrs. Blanche Brown, four-room house at Sixth street and Elena avenue, $1000; Charles Billings, two-story house on Linnie street and Trolleyway, $10,000; Della Roberts, six-room house, Fourth street and Rose avenue, $2500; James R. Hardman, seven-room residence, Venice Gateway tract, $2500; Burlock and Maringo, two-room office and shop building, Lorelie avenue, $1000; W. C. Stone, five-room house, on Ozone avenue, $1000; Jane Sweetman, residence on Evangeline avenue, $1200, and Mrs. Lillian B. Streeter, six-room residence on Walnut street, $1650.

FOLLOWS VENETIAN STYLE.

New Crescent Bay Apartment-house to Boast Many Fine Features—Los Angeles Hotel Man Lessee.

VENICE, April 20.—One of the most attractive of the many new apartment-houses in the Crescent Bay section is that being erected by Harry E. Jones & Co. of Los Angeles for Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Rose of the same city, and which is to stand at the corner of Speedway and Horizon, in Venice. The property is to be known as the Palace Apartments. Its owners were formerly proprietors of the Palace Hotel Apartments in Los Angeles.

The house is to be made up of two and three-room suites. The design follows Venetian lines, half timber work, however, playing an important part in the construction. The exterior is of staff, heavily ornamented. The cornices are all of clay tile. All the suites are to be furnished with disappearing beds, and built-in seats and writing desks.

DIVIDENDS

MORE DIVIDENDS

Rich men never attained riches via the salary route. If they saved their salaries when they held salaried positions and made their salaries work for them through wise investments, then only could the salary claim any credit for the acquired wealth.

This is an age of investment. This is the age when dividends make other dividend investments a verity. If you have been compelled to save, you know that it is a slow process. If after saving "a nest egg" you invested it wisely, you know how rapidly your dividends increased your capital.

You know all about that, so it is not necessary to dwell upon that phase of the subject. However—you may not know of PACIFIC HOME BUILDERS' plan that earns a little more than plain dividends for the plain man as well as for the man of wealth.

Buy Pacific Home Builders' Stock

Make your money work for you, you need all the money your money will earn, or you would not be reading this plain "ad." We want to interest you and in so doing we will establish a community of interest that will earn dollars for everybody that has a dollar interested.

OLD DOMINION OUTPUT.

MARCH AVERAGE MONTH.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) April 18.—The March production of the Old Dominion was 2,412,000 pounds of copper, of which about 5 per cent. came from custom ores. This is about the average and has been maintained by the works for some time. Plans are being made for an increase of 50 per cent. in the capacity of the concentrator. The concentrating of the Kingdon shaft of the United Globe has been completed more than 300 feet below the shaft collar and another section has been started at the depth of 525 feet. About 1200 men are now employed in the Old Dominion-United Globe properties and around the smelter.

The first dividend of the Miami Copper Company has been declared of 50 cents a share, just a year after the company's first production of copper. The monthly yield now runs between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 pounds. The prediction of the management concerning the cost of the product has been even bettered, as the metal is being laid down in New York for a little over 8 cents a pound, giving a profit of nearly $200,000 a month.

The Shannon Company at Clifton is about to resume dividends, favored by the higher price of copper and by the completion of better smelting facilities and of its own railroad to the mines. The company has retired about $300,000 of its bonds and is getting into the best of financial shape, with a gross product of about 18,000,000 pounds of copper a year.

The Cloud-Spotter.

[New York Press:] "Among the new jobs that modern life has originated," said a statistician, "that of the cloud-spotter is interesting and odd. The cloud-spotter doesn't, of course, make spots on clouds. No, no. He stands on a high roof with a costly field glass, and he continually notifies his employer, a moving-picture maker, of the condition of the heavens.

"You see, for an elaborate moving-picture play a steady, uniform light is essential. The pictures must be taken all in sunshine or all in clear gray light. Otherwise they differ. Some are weak and some strong. They don't match on the screen. So the cloud-spotter on the roof, searching the heavens with his glass, studying the course and velocity of the wind, assures his boss of a good half-hour or hour for photographing a moving-picture play, and thus saves a waste of films that would otherwise be many times larger than his frugal salary.'

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Weights and Carat.

SANTA BARBARA, March 24.—Q.: Please give the number of grains in one pound Troy, Apothecaries and Avoirdupois weights. Explain the term "carat" as applied to the fineness of gold, and to the weight of gems. M. D.

A.: One pound Troy or Apothecaries 5760 grains. Avoirdupois pound 7000 grains. One ounce Avoirdupois 437.50 grains. One ounce Troy and Apothecaries 480 grains.

In weighing diamonds, pearls and other jewels, the unit employed is the carat, which is equal to four carat grains, or 3.168 Troy grains. Carat is also used to express the fineness of gold, and means one-twenty-fourth part (1-24.) For example, gold that is eighteen carats fine is 18-24ths, gold with 6-24ths, alloy.

Shale and Slate.

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) March 24.—Q.: I am sending you by prepaid express today a sample of rock taken as follows: The large piece is from the surface and the fine material is from about three feet below the surface. Query: Does this formation indicate proximity of oil or have any bearing in an oil-bearing district? Kindly answer in your regular columns in the usual manner. A. H. G.

A.: The samples consist of hematitic shale and slate. To each of the samples we gave time, close attention, and analyses, and realizing the importance of your questions we can add that on the particular specimens submitted the results for oil are negative. The formation indicates somewhat indefinitely that other and necessary formations of oil-bearing districts may be present at the locality from where the samples were taken. Nature very seldom shows its secrets on the surface and where "indications" appear plentifully at the surface the find, usually, is inconsequential; therefore, in good old United States language, if the formation of the surrounding hills (if any) are made up of horizontal layers of, apparently, stratified matter, and consisting of hydrous uncrystalline limestone of the secondary and tertiary formations in part, with shales giving on analysis, paraffin or asphalt, and not in a district where the true coal measures extend, there, in such a locality, hydrocarbon is obtainable at more or less depth. Petroleum stands for rock oil, and in no wise signifies coal oil. Coal oil is a misnomer. Petroleum can be manufactured in the laboratory from both limestone and coal, however. "It is to be noted that the great oil-holding strata are always regular beds, and they are also sandstones, conglomerates, or cavernous limestone. The fine-grained slates ('such as you submit,' ed. note,) act as roofs to the porous rocks, and the fine-grained limestones act in the double capacity of roofs to catch the oil coming up from below, and as generators of oil to be caught above. The earth's crust wherever dug into is found to have a local standing water level, and all the porous or permeable rocks below that level are water soaked down to as low a level as man has yet reached. Oil generated in the lower rocks, being lighter than the water, works its way upward until it is stopped, and collected in the first anticlinal axis (trough turned upside down) of impervious rock it meets..... If any of the oil turns into gas it collects at the top, right under the crown of the arch, and it is the first thing to be struck by a drill."

The oil land of the coast of California is of tertiary formation, but such beds of rock are not usually hard (in the scale of hardness.) The tertiaries cover miles of country in the basins between the Rockies and the Sierra Nevadas, and in many localities have been burnt "to a frazzle" by heat from the eruptive rocks. The tertiary formation is often confused with the older rocks.

Aluminum Silicate.

JUNCTION (Ariz.) March 25.—Q.: This sample is from a large body of uncovered ore. Is it gold and silver-bearing ore, or what minerals does it carry? I think there is considerable aluminum in the ore, but your analysis will settle all questions as to whether it is worth working. F. S.

A.: Gold and silver have been obtained from ore similar to the samples you submit time and again, but the ore now before us, is our old friend hard hematitic rock which in time will change to reddle (ruddle,) a red chalk. We have tested this mineral from Junction a number of times, not only in the West, but at the laboratories of the United States Geological Survey, and at the State Mining Bureau of California. It has always been alleged that such ore is "high in alumina," and the assertion is without truth in fact. Alumina is the oxide of the metal and ore carrying the oxide is of commercial value. A further fact is that this hematite carries the silicate of alumina to some 30 per cent., but the silicate in this combination is practically of no value.

Magnetite.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—Q.: Will you please classify this sample for me? I found it with a few other samples like it in San Diego county, with ores of iron. It comes from a small lead and may be wolframite. N. S.

Fine Crystals.

SAN DIEGO, March 25.—Q.: Will you kindly advise me as to the composition and value of small piece of ore I am sending you under separate cover? J. C.

A.: The value of mineral represented by the sample is the price obtainable from dealers in minerals. The specimen is epidote of more than ordinary interest; is of the variety known as Pistacite of Werner, and "occurs in prismatic crystals. Color pistachio-green, passing to olive and blackish-green, brown, and yellow. Transparent. Easily frangible. Sp. gr., 3.40." In composition the sample is lime—and iron epidote, in which a large quantity of the lime is replaced by iron protoxide, and a large proportion of the alumina by peroxide of iron. Before the blowpipe fuses at the edges, swells up and forms a dark-brown mass, which mass, by exposure to a more powerful blast, becomes black and somewhat rounded.

Graphite.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—Q.: Samples of graphite from San Bernardino county. W. J. K.

A.: When floated and washed the samples will form marketable graphite.

Phosphorous Absent.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—Q.: I am sending you some yellow limestone from Riverside county. Does it carry any phosphoric acid for fertilizing purposes? What causes the yellow color? B. T.

A.: When burnt the material will form an impure lime which would be a sort of fertilizer. The color is occasioned by hydrous yellow iron—oxide (limonite.)

Not Phosphate Pebbles.

PASADENA, March 25.—Q.: The pebbles in this package come from a wash located near Mt. Lowe. They very much resemble the phosphate pebbles of the Southern States. Do they contain phosphates? L. F. H.

A.: Phosphoric acid is not present in the cherty samples.

Iron-Ores.

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—Q.: With this mail I am sending you some ore samples which were sent to me by a prospector who has claims near Querida, Colo. He asked me to send them to The Times for test, as he believes they are rich in uranium. What of these samples? M. T.

A.: Samples are hematite and limonite, and do not carry a trace of uranium.

Pyrolusite.

LONG BEACH, March 27.—Q.: I enclose two samples, No. 1 has a red pencil mark. No. 2 I take for some form of iron. Will you kindly tell me what No. 1 sample is, is there any trace of pitchblende in it? These samples come from the Silver Bell mining district in Arizona. There is a four-foot vein of No. 1. I am an old reader of The Times. T. B. T.

A.: There is a form of uranium ore sparingly present in the Silver Bell mining district of Arizona, but its power in the domain of radioactive phenomena is low. Your letter was received by The Times and marked by the postoffice department "received in bad condition," and we find but one sample in the envelope. This particular sample is blackish botryoidal pyrolusite, and carries over 80 per cent. protoperoxide of manganese.

Soapstone.

LOS ANGELES, March 28.—Q.: I have been a reader of The Times for sixteen years. Will you kindly analyze this rock and let me know what it contains. It was found near Bagdad, Cal. I think it is oil-shale? C. H. S.

A.: Hope you may live to read The Times many times sixteen years, and then some more, as it were. The sample is not oil-shale, but it is an eatable variety of soapstone which comprises part of the bill of fare of the poor people of the South, and who are often seemingly referred to (by those who should learn the alphabet of charity) as "clay eaters."

Wavellite.

YUMA (Ariz.) March 28.—Q.: I send you a small piece of a sample of great interest to me, but I cannot classify it. Will you please name it? L. J.

Platinum and Tellurium Absent.

LOS ANGELES, March 28.—Q.: I enclose you three samples of ore from Kern county, California, marked Nos. 1, 2 and 3. This ore has some characteristics that puzzle me. Will you kindly test the samples for platinum, chloride of silver, sylvanite, lead carbonates or whatever it contains? R. C. M.

A.: No. 1 altered hematite, traces of dolomite and soda. No. 2 cerussite sparingly, trace of silver chloride, traces of boron, calcite, mica. Sylvanite (telluride of gold and silver) absent. Quartz (with opal silica) present. No. 3 is on the order of No. 2, but it would require a complete quantitative analysis to determine the exact constituents of the sample.

Carbonates and Oxides.

CORONA, March 29.—Q.: Am sending you by mail four samples which I will be pleased if you will give me a determination of each sample together with each one's commercial value, if any? They all come from the same locality fourteen miles from Riverside, Cal. No. 1 I think is halite; is kaolin present? This is from the foothills and comes native in big square chunks. No. 2 is from a three-inch vein with white, hard quartz on one side and decomposed granite on the other wall. In your judgment does it carry gold or silver? No. 3 is very heavy, and appears to be asbestos altered to some crystalline form; the crystals are found in the red-clay portion of the deposit only, which deposit is a slide and the crystals weather out. No. 4 is an outcrop sample, when you hit it, it rings like glass, and it comes out of a white-heat, chalklike. C. A. H.

A.: Halite, as perhaps you know, is crystalized sodium chloride (common table salt.) Chloride of sodium is present in the mass with low-grade Fuller's earth; kaolin present. No. 2 is siderite (iron carbonate.) No. 3 is a mixture of dolomite and gypsum; iron oxides present. No. 4 is a picked coating of brownish-white (microscopical) calcite. The samples are not of an encouraging nature. Purer grades may be present at the locality.

Magnetite.

OWENS (Ariz.) March 29.—Q.: I am sending you today one small sample I think is wolframite. Will you please tell me if I have named the sample correctly? The specimen comes from the Aubry mining district, Mojave county, Arizona.

Wulfenite.

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 30.—Q.: Samples of mineral, exactly like the specimen that I enclose in this package, have been repeatedly tested by different authorities with two results: vanadinite and wulfenite. What have you to report? B. E.

A.: We report that the microscope reveals a mass of wulfenite crystals in the matrix, and wet methods show that not a trace of vanadium is present in the mass

Lepidomelane.

INDEPENDENCE, March 30.—Q.: Three samples from the locality of Independence, Cal. What are they? C. H. Y.

A.: No. 1 is lepidomelane, a variety of unlaxial mica; an interesting mineral for cabinet purposes, but of little value commercially. No. 2 carries garnet (almandine,) with a coating of opal silica.

Sulphides and Oxides.

VONTRIGGER, March 31.—Q.: The enclosed samples are from a few miles north of here. No. 1 is the loose stuff, and Nos. 2 and 3 are from another vein about two miles west. Will you kindly give me a full chemical analysis of these samples, and is the ore of any commercial value? Letter explaining further, coming. J. S.

A.: The explanatory letter has not been received. We would gladly give you a "full chemical analysis, but, as you know, time is not given us for quantitative analysis. No. 1 is a granular mixture of silica, silicates, calcium carbonate, iron oxides, and trace of vanadium. No. 2 (the acicular crystals) epidote. No. 3 is pyritiferous rock, carrying iron disulphide (pyrite,) chalcopyrite (yellow copper of the mining boys,) with iron oxides and low in lead values. The samples are of ordinary moment only.

Bornite.

ASHLAND (Or.) March 31.—Q.: This sample was found in a small lead located in Ashland Canyon, and within the town limits. Will you please state what kind of ore it is? T.

A.: The sample is a handsome variety of bornite (horse-flesh ore,) and is in composition a double sulphide of iron and copper.

Thirsty Friends.

ANXIOUS FOR OWENS WATER.

Everybody Wants in on the Aqueduct Surplus.

Outlying Districts Send Men to Enter Pleas.

Will Meet Next Week With Plans and Figures.

Any lingering doubt that everybody wants aqueduct water was swept away finally and forever last night when representatives of all the districts for which the five principal projects have been planned by Chief Engineer Mulholland appeared in the Council Chamber and told their desires to the Council's Water Committee.

The chief engineer was there with Mayor Alexander and the members of the Public Service Commission, sitting with Chairman McKenzie and Councilman Reed, and there were Burdett Moody of Pasadena, G. Gardiner of South Pasadena, W. Watkins of Athens in the Shoestring Strip, M. Bunker and J. McLeod of Santa Monica, besides others who from time to time participated in the Council, with Burt Heinly and a number of other men from the water department.

"I am well satisfied," said Chairman McKenzie at the conclusion of the session. "There is no question now that the aqueduct water is in demand. All of the neighboring communities are after it."

Moody, who is consulting engineer for Pasadena, in charge of water investigation and valuation work there, declared a great majority of the people of the Crown City wish the aqueduct well and want the water, as the City Council there has proved by asking for prices and particulars. But he drew attention to the fact that this request was accompanied by a statement that the community wished it understood that some way must be found for it to get the water and yet maintain in its absolute political independence. He said Pasadena's present supply is about 235 inches.

POINTS A REMEDY.

Mulholland informed him that, if arrangements could be made to supply that large territory lying east of Pasadena to Monrovia, the unit cost to Pasadena would be greatly reduced. He pointed to the large map that hung up in the Council chamber to show the part of the San Gabriel country to which he referred.

Gardiner of South Pasadena said his community wants water, but at present that is subordinate to the burning issue of annexation, and annexation will have to be settled first. Until then, South Pasadena will not be able to state its attitude on the water question. It was pointed out that South Pasadena has an area of eight square miles and will need from 250 to 300 inches of water. This could be supplied from the Burbank main.

Bunker was spokesman for Santa Monica and announced that his community will ask for 500 inches and will need it all. Sawtelle, Ocean Park and The Palms will come in with Santa Monica, he said. But they only have $10,000,000 worth of taxable property and are coming in with a slim purse, he explained, and cannot pay too much. The present water supply is poor, he declared, and the aqueduct supply would be to it as champagne is to beer.

Rancher Hanson of the San Fernando Valley, who is interested in the 1100-acre tract known as the old Hubbard and Wright ranch, made a plea, not only for water, but for water at reasonable rates.

"We have the land," he said, "and you have the water. The land is good now, but with water it will be better and we've got to have water from the aqueduct. You can charge us what price you will, but we know that Los Angeles does not want to be unreasonable and that you will charge us only a fair price. We rely on that fairness."

Watkins spoke for the Shoestring Strip. Hailing from Athens, he said, he would like to know what is intended to be done for that part of the city and county. He said there are from 1100 to 1500 acres of land to be irrigated in that neighborhood and the people there, as taxpayers, think they should be considered. He was assured by Mulholland that all the territory embraced within the city limits of Los Angeles, which includes his home district, have been planned for.

TO PRESENT PLANS.

The delegates from the various districts agreed to return next week with definite plans and figures. This early meeting, as Engineer Moody of Pasadena explained, had taken them by surprise. The next meeting will be on Monday evening, and the following one on Wednesday. There will be no session of the committee next Friday, as the city officials are to go to Santa Monica to the aqueduct water meeting there on that day. The committee, after adopting as settled policy that the city is first to be supplied and that all other districts will be given an equal chance to get the water without discrimination, limits the discussion to the following questions:

Shall water mains be constructed at the expense of the city of Los Angeles, or at the expense of property owners?

If at the expense of the city on what basis should the water be furnished?

If at the expense of the property owners on what basis should the city acquire the title to such mains?

What bonus per acre in addition to water rates should be charged?

Should outside, contiguous, unincorporated territory be annexed to the city or should irrigation districts be formed in such territory?

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

After May 1 The Times Business Office, Advertising and Subscription Departments and Information Bureau will be located at 617-619 South Spring street, one block south of the present quarters.

The removal will be accomplished without interruption to business and, we trust, without inconvenience to our patrons.

Seeking Strength.

NO ROYAL ROAD BACK TO HEALTH

SENATOR TILLMAN TELLS HOW HE DOES IT.

Trying to Throw Off the Disease that Won for Him the Sobriquet of "Pitchfork Ben"—Twice a Day He Stirs Up His Circulation and Muscles.

[Washington Star:] United States Senators, as the men in other walks of life, have been unable to find a royal road to recuperation of broken health. That is the testimony of United States Senator Tillman of South Carolina. He has been striving to regain that strength of mind and body, reduced by disease, that won for him the sobriquet of "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman.

His rules of physical culture and deep breathing—for it is by that means that he is seeking to win back the lost vigor—are his own, and he has recently reduced them to writing. Here are some of them:

Before getting up in the morning vigorously kick the headboard of the bed.

Stand on your head—or as near as you can—in bed.

While lying in bed use the abdominal muscles to pull up the lower extremities.

Loosen the muscles of the spine, like working a rusty hinge, by throwing the head back to look at the ceiling and stooping forward to touch the floor in front of you, "if you can." The quotations are the Senator's.

Keep hold of the bed or chair and squat as low as you can; then straighten up erect and squat again six or eight times.

Pains-taking and pains-producing some of these exercises were found by Senator Tillman to be practiced morning and night. It is a system that has made getting up in the morning and retiring at night a ceremony. But he confesses that he found some muscles he hadn't realized that he had. These gave him some aches and pains when he first used them, but they were soon working as smoothly as a purring fire-fighting engine.

Senator Tillman lays down his rules as strenuously as he did precepts of public life in the days when "Pitchfork Ben" was in prime and vigor. There is no "swinging" of the arms or legs. He insists upon "throwing" the arms or "kicking" the legs.

If Senator Tillman's rules for recuperation of strength are to be followed in the morning the alarm clock should be set fifteen or twenty minutes earlier than usual, and the day is to be begun vigorously. His rules start off:

"First—Before getting up in the morning take the head off the pillow and stretch out, exhaling all the air out of the lungs, and then draw in all the air possible and hold it between movements. Kick briskly with first one foot and then the other, ten, twelve or fifteen times each, repeating if you feel like it.

"Second—Draw up the knees, with the heels on the bed. Throw the knees as far apart as they can be carried, swinging them apart and together vigorously, so as to strain the muscles of the thigh.

"Third—Throw one foot and then the other toward the headboard vigorously, kicking it if you can. Still lying on the back, kick upward, and drop the heels at least fifteen times.

"Fourth—Kick upward with both feet and throw the feet apart as you kick as wide as you can and as vigorously as you can. If these movements are made with vigor and emphasis, as they should be, it will be found that some new muscle is brought into play that is not often used."

In discussing his rule for the guidance of others, Senator Tillman here pauses to remark that he has an iron bed upon which to take these exercises. The vigor of the treatment which has been laid down by him might have suggested the need for a bed strong in its construction.

For reducing the "paunch" Senator Tillman has found the next exercise especially good. Continuing, the rules be says:

"Fifth—Stretch the hands out toward the rear so as to give leverage. Put them under you behind the spine and then throw both feet toward the headboard, also using the abdominal muscles to pull up the lower extremities, repeating up and down so as to strengthen the abdominal muscles by the work put on them, five or six times, or as much as this can be done with one breath. I have reduced my pauch four inches by doing this, as it changes fat to muscle and hardens the abdominal muscles.

"Sixth—Grasp the iron crosspieces at the head of the cot and throw both feet up, pulling up the body and standing as nearly on the head as possible. Throw the feet up and down as in the next movement five or six times. It supplements the preceding movement, and the two practiced together every day, will keep the upper part of the spine and the muscles of the shoulders and chest in good condition.

"Seventh—Fasten the feet under the crosspiece of the cot and pull the trunk up to a sitting posture and drop back and repeat four or five times. The first time I tried this I thought I had torn loose something, but it was only the sudden strain on the abdominal muscles, which were very flabby and weak, and after I became accustomed to it I found no pain at all.

"Eighth—Throw back the head and draw up the feet and lift the body clear of the bed, so that the shoulders do not touch. Two or three times is enough of this movement."

Senator Tillman takes it for granted that if one has been able to go through these exercises he is in proper strength to get out of bed. "This completes the exercise in the bed," he says in his rules. But it is like the saying of the man who announces the concert after the circus—the show is not yet half over. Continuing:

"Ninth—Get out of the bed and take a cold bath and rub down briskly. Put on an undershirt and get a light pair of dumb-bells—mine are three and a half pounds; I only use them to give momentum to the movements which are necessary to exercise the muscles of the arms and upper parts of the body. Standing flat-footed and clasping the dumb-bells, throw the arms down by the thighs backward and return, swinging backward and forward as far as possible. I do this fifteen times and then, continuing the same motion, I bend the trunk forward and let the dumb-bells swing down by the feet on each side, going as near the floor as you can, five or six times at least.

"Tenth — Keeping the knees straightened, try to punch each big toe with each hand, straightening up between each effort and coming back at it as though you meant business. This stretches the muscles of the calf and also the muscles of the back.

"Eleventh—Throw the head back and bend the neck as far as possible, looking at the ceiling. Then stoop forward and touch the floor in front of you, if you can. This movement is to loosen the muscles of the spine, like working a rusty hinge.

"Twelfth—Use the dumb-bells, swinging them backward and forward, to the right and to the left, one arm going to the belly while the other extends above the head as far as possible. As one goes down, elevate the other. This will lubricate and loosen the joints of the shoulders.

"Thirteenth—Extend the arms in front with the dumb-bells clasped tightly. Throw both hands behind the back ten times, so as to bring them as near together as possible, still holding the dumb-bells.

"Fourteenth—Throw one hand to the rear and the other to the front. Twist the spine, first looking over one shoulder, then the other. This is to loosen the spinal column and make the vertebrae twist each on the other. This movement can be practiced sitting down in a chair, with the face toward the back, but I think it better to do it standing up, because the dumb-bells assist in making the twist more effective.

"Fifteenth—Grasp the dumb-bells tightly and, swinging the arms by the sides, make a circle with the hands swinging forward, first, six times, then backward six times with each arm.

"Sixteenth—Discard the dumb-bells, straighten up and elevate the hands above the head, and then drop the arms and bend the body until you can touch the floor, with the knees stiff, straightening up and going down, a little lower each time. The first time I tried it, I got my hands as low as my knees, but now I can go to the floor without much trouble. Keep hold of the bed or chair and squat as low as you can, then straighten up erect and squat again six or eight times. This will strengthen the calves and has enabled me to ride horseback and mount the horse from the ground."

Regarding these exercises, Senator Tillman explains:

"I practice all this before breakfast in the morning and at night before going to bed, and I feel it makes a very marked difference in my strength and aids me otherwise. I have said that I thought my health would come back to me through this exercise and diet, if at all."

Baby Has a Tooth.

[New York Herald:] In the morning hours the stork flew over Wilkesbarre, Pa., and left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Morrow, of No. 60 East Market street, a baby girl which weighed eighteen pounds.

The weight was not the only surprise which the little stranger had in store, for after it showed the first signs of distress and cried aloud, a nurse in attendance discovered that the baby had a tooth. The tooth is in the lower jaw, and it is the first time in the history of the city where a birth of this sort has been recorded. This is the fifth baby in the Morrow home, and while all the others have been large, none ever showed so much weight

The 200% TREE

The United States Government has proved that it is just about impossible for a man to raise a more profitable crop than dates. Some pretty competent agricultural authorities have, since the starting of the Government experiments, looked into date growing pretty carefully, and they give the value of a ten-year-old date orchard at $10,000 an acre.

Now, we own 480 acres of the best date land in the United States, on which plenty of water is already developed. It lies midway between the two Government Experiment Stations in the Coachella Valley, where the possibilities of date culture were first established. Thousands of date trees are already growing there, and a big force is at work planting more. Every step of the culture is carried on along the lines which the Government found to be most successful. We are planting fifty date trees to the acre, and each acre will produce 1000 pounds of fruit, equal to the finest imported Algerian dates. Even at only 10 cents a pound the profits of an acre will be $1000.

In order to complete the development of the date orchard we offer for sale a limited amount of the stock in this company at $1.00 a share.

We are prepared to show you an absolutely certain profit of 200 per cent. per year, and we are prepared to show you positive, unquestionable safety. Isn't a proposition like that worth looking into?

FINE BLOCK FOR HILL AND SIXTH.

Modern Structure to Replace Small Stores.

Building Will Be of Latest Steel Frame Type.

Total Investment Will Exceed Million Dollars.

Construction will be begun early in May upon the magnificent eleven-story office block which is projected by W. I. Hollingsworth, capitalist and leading realty operator, for the southeast corner of Sixth and Hill streets. Plans for the building have already been completed by the architects, Morgan, Walls & Morgan, and the contracts are to be let at once. The razing of the one-story brick building at present on the site will be started on May 1.

The structure will be one of the most modern and imposing in the city and will be a distinct addition to the skyline of the downtown district. Its cost will be approximately $600,000, and the owner has refused considerably more than $400,000 for the site, making the total investment in excess of $1,000,000.

The building will have a frontage of eighty feet on Hill street and of 140 feet on Sixth and will reach to the full 150 feet of height allowed by the building ordinances. It will be of the latest type of steel frame construction and will in all probability be faced with white tile. Strictly class "A" construction will be followed throughout. The block will be similar in many ways to the Story building at Sixth and Broadway, which was designed by the same architects.

The structure will contain in all 250 offices, most of which will have a beautiful outlook over Central Park. At the east end it will front on a forty-foot alley, which is known as St. Vincent's place and which will be practically equivalent to another street frontage. The arrangement of the first story has not as yet been definitely determined. It may be kept as one large store space or divided into a number of rooms.

The main entrance will be at the south end of the Hill street front and will open into one of the handsomest lobbies in the city. The finish of the walls and ceiling will be in white marble and the floors will be of tile. All the corridors throughout the building will be wainscoated with marble and all of the woodwork will be in mahogany. Four passenger elevators and one freight elevator will serve the different floors. The appointments will be of the most up-to-date type.

The site was bought by F. A. Garbutt from the Hough estate twelve years ago for $26,000. Garbutt in turn sold it to W. I. Hollingsworth and Robert Marsh, about seven years ago, for $130,000. Two years later Hollingsworth paid Marsh $120,000 for his half interest. The property was improved by Hollingsworth a number of years ago with a one-story brick building, containing eleven stores, all of which are now occupied by tenants.

The structure to be reared by Mr. Hollingsworth will bear his name and will house the real estate firm of W. I. Hollingsworth Co., of which he is president. It will be ready for occupancy early in 1913.

OWENSMOUTH ACTIVITIES.

Three Wealthy Easterners Transfer Business Interests Bodily to New San Fernando Valley Town Site.

Among the investors in Owensmouth, the new town site of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands, during the week were: A. H. Ring, a banker of Hawarden, Iowa; W. E. Woods, a Kansas City lumber man, and William J. Vandiveri, a wealthy oil man from Marietta, O.

Woods bought three business lots and within twenty-four hours after the deal was consummated his men were unloading lumber for his new yards and for the construction of the rapidly-building stores and residence. He bought, also, a store lot on Sherman way and a ten-acre home site near the boulevard, on which he will at once erect a handsome home. The three different pieces of property cost him above $12,000.

Vandivert, who has extensive interests in the Texas oil fields, purchased twenty acres of orange land for $10,000. This property he will improve at once, building a home and removing to Owensmouth with his family.

A. H. Ring took residence property near the $500,000 boulevard. He will have a country home put up as quickly as possible, and come here to live after he has disposed out his banking interests in Iowa.

Another purchaser of Owensmouth lots was M. H. Whittier, an oil man of Los Angeles.

NEW VERMONT SQUARE.

The Southwest Land Company report the sale of eleven lots in New Vermont Square, most of which will be immediately improved with bungalows. The following are the buyers who purchased lots this last week: R. A. GLENDALE TO BE WELL LIGHTED.

CONTRACTS LET FOR SPLENDID MUNICIPAL SYSTEM.

Ornamental Street Lights to Be Patterned After Those of Fifth Street, Los Angeles—Commercial Body Will Boost for New Scenic Railway Project.

GLENDALE, April 20.—Contracts were let this week for the extension of the Glendale municipal lighting system into the section of the city west of Central avenue, recently annexed to this city. The contracts amount to more than $29,000. The trustees have upheld the suggestion offered by Manager Harry B. Lynch of the lighting department, to the effect that the city purchase the remaining portion of the system of the Glendale Light and Power Company owned by L. C. Brand, with the exception of that portion lying in Tropico city. This remaining part of the system covers those sections known as West Glendale, Casa Verdugo and a portion of North Glendale. The price paid for the system is $12,900.

Work will start within a few days on this city's ornamental electric lighting system on which the lighting department has been working for the past few months. It has been decided that posts and lights like those used on Fifth street, Los Angeles, will be used. These lights will be placed every 100 feet on either side of the street, the cost to property owners along the streets to be improved being $1 per front foot. All wires will be run underground, and the standards will be twelve feet high. Manager Lynch claims that when the work has been completed and paid for he will be able to refund some of the taxpayers' money to them, the material having been purchased and the work having been done more economically than was expected.

E. D. Goode has placed with the City Trustees a bond for $1500 for the faithful fulfillment of the work of constructing and maintaining the electric line between this city and Griffith Park, to be known as the Glendale-Griffith Park line. This line will connect with the Pacific Electric line at Fourth and Brand boulevard at its eastern terminus, while the western end will connect with a branch line of the Pacific Electric in Griffith Park, just south of the new Griffith Park aviation field. It is Mr. Goode's intention to start work on the line as soon as possible notwithstanding the fact that franchise allows him ninety days.

The residents at the southern end of this valley are proposing to erect a library, reading-room and lecture-room at a cost of about $5000, the building to be paid for out of the proceeds from the franchise which was let for an oil pipe line running from the northern to the southern end of this valley.

The members of the Baptist Church of this city held the cornerstone laying in their new $20,000 church building have a seating capacity of about 500 and will be on Gothic lines.

A committee of three has been appointed by the Glendale Chamber of Commerce to work up the proposition of erecting the proposed scenic incline up Mt. Verdugo. The committee has decided that it will be wise to build the line up to the first knoll of the mountain, which work can be done for about $17,000. The business men of Glandale are enthusiastic over the proposition.

The following building permits were granted this week: L. A. Hobbs, Sycamore road and Central avenue, dwelling, $1800; C. W. Spikerman, Hawthorne street, between Central avenue and Columbus street, residence, $1200; Viola B. Wright, No. 225 Louise street, bungalow, $2000; P. N. Portman, No. 1418 Oak street, residence, $1500. Building permits for March were the largest in the history of this city, totalling $65,750. This includes one business block for $25,000, one for $6000, two residences at $3500, five residences at $2500, one at $2000 and five at from $1500 to $1800.

B. W. Richardson is erecting a home to cost $6000 on San Fernando road in the Richardson tract. Mrs. E. W. Richardson, who is now residing in Berkeley, will soon start the erection of a home to cost about $6500 in the Richardson tract on San Fernando road, on the site previously occupied by the old Richardson home. The first residence is about finished on the tract recently purchased and improved by the Pacific Home Builders. There are several more in the course of construction and several others will soon be started.

CHALETS ARE ATTRACTIVE.

Two large eight-room residences of unique design are being constructed by Stuart W. Ritchie in Crestmont, Emil Firth's home tract near Sunset boulevard, and Golden Gate avenue, in the northwest part of Los Angeles. The house nearest completion is on the west side of Golden Gate avenue, at a short distance from the entrance to the Firth tract. The other, which will be completed in about thirty days, is on the south side of Firth avenue, near Golden Gate avenue, and will cost about $3600. Both houses are of the Swiss Chalet type, and are in keeping with the scenic character of the Crestmont district. The construction of a third eight-room house of the same style, to cost about $3800, will probably be undertaken in about two weeks. This will also be on Firth avenue.

BREAK BUILDING RECORDS.

Interior work on the first floors of the Los Angeles Investment building at Eighth and Broadway has been put well under way and the laying of the topmost flooring will be speedily accomplished. The plastering will keep pace with the setting of the exterior tile and stone work and within a comparatively short time the building will be ready for occupancy. One of the first occupants will be the Sierra Madre Club. The Globe Savings Bank and the Los Angeles Investment Company will occupy the first floors as soon as expedient. Every record has been broken in the erection of this building, plans having been made in advance with such care that there should be no delay anywhere. In connection with the million-dollar structure that the same company will raise at Ninth street, it is stated that there have been made several proposals from theater and hotel men. The purchase of the site having been confirmed by the courts and a cash payment given for the site, the investment company will shortly announce its definite plans for this thirteen-story structure, a perspective of which, was recently published exclusively in The Times.

TO USE NATIVE TREES.

An original plan for beautifying the streets of Du Ray Place tract, at the end of the West Adams street car line, has been adopted by the Carlin G. Smith Company. The plan is to use only native trees and shrubs for shade and adornment purposes, and to establish small parks where such characteristic plants as cacti shall be planted. The State Forester is being consulted for detailed advice on the trees and shrubs most suitable for the purpose in mind, and as soon as a selection of varieties has been made the California trees will be obtained and set out on every street, in the parking spaces, between the sidewalks and curbs.

VALLEY ACTIVITIES.

Dr. W. E. Ireland, a prominent Ohio banker, has purchased 40 acres of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands for his suburban home. Dr. Ireland returns to his home at Washington Courthouse, O., this week and expects in the future to spend his winters in California, where he has many friends and relatives. It is his intention to build a country place in the San Fernando Valley.

F. Meisel, a prominent manufacturer and inventor of Boston, has made large purchases at Owensmouth, investing in business recently.

John Haas, an old-timer in the Calabasas district, has purchased ten acres for his home near the town of Owensmouth, paying $600 an acre. Haas is a successful farmer and has been roadmaster of his district for several years.

SEWER CONTRACT LET.

An Overturn?

IS BRIAND, SOCIALIST, AGAIN TO RULE FRANCE.

Early Retirement of Raymond Poincare, the Present Premier, Is Predicted and France's Strong Man, Who Broke the Great Railway Strike, Has the Best Chance of Succeeding Him.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, April 1.—France is talking of the coming break-up of the "Ministry of All the Talents," as the Raymond Poincare Cabinet is called. According to the close friends of the brilliant Prime Minister, he believes that the critical circumstances in which he consented to take office have been or soon will be removed with the disappearance of friction, domestic and international, over the Franco-German Moroccan agreement. His duty done, he longs to return to his enormous legal practice, which is said to have yielded him an income of more than $50,000 a year. Indeed, so sure was he that his occupancy of the Premiership was only temporary that he is said to have retained all his briefs when he took office.

Who, then, will be the next Prime Minister of France? Three men stand out from all the army of candidates for the great honor. Two of them have already held the position and the third, one of the greatest men in France, is sure to reach the position some day. The men are Georges Clemenceau, Theophile Delcasse and Aristide Briand. The first two of these men are bitter political enemies, who for years have fought each other; the third is a friend of both and is the most likely man for the post.

No man living today has had a more romantic political career than the first of these three men—Georges Clemenceau. Although he is 70 years old and has been a constant and hard worker all his life, he is still healthy and energetic, with a pen as vitriolic and a tongue as keen and deadly, with a pistol eye as true and a rapier hand as strong and feared as ever.

Theophile Delcasse,

Who, as the most brilliant of French Ministers of Foreign Affairs, was forced to resign by Kaiser William's threat of war. The Germany bogey still stands in the way of his elevation to the post of Premier.

THE WRECKER.

"Wrecker of Cabinets" he has been called, and during the many years he has been in politics he has been the cause of the downfall of many of the most famous ministries of France. His most recent feat was the dramatic defeat of the Caillaux government several months ago, which still will be fresh in the reader's memory. He was a bitter opponent of Jules Ferry, the first French Minister with visions of a great French empire and contributed largely to that man's downfall. He unseated Freycinet, not once, but several times, and he drove President Grevy out of office following the collapse of the Rouvier ministry. It was Clemenceau who made the picturesque Gen. Boulanger and then, when the dashing soldier broke his promise to him, as quickly unmade him.

But Clemenceau probably will be remembered best by readers all over the world as the leading figure in the hard fight that ended in the vindication of Dreyfus. It was in L'Aurore, the paper owned and edited by Clemenceau, that Zola's now famous letter, "J'Accuse," appeared and created a sensation throughout the civilized world. Indeed, it was Clemenceau who invented the striking title. It will be remembered against what tremendous and almost hopeless odds the defenders of Dreyfus fought for justice and in the campaign Clemenceau was always in the lead. Day and night he went about with his life in his hands, grimly and defiantly receiving the taunts and threats of the majority of his countrymen, who saw in every friend of Dreyfus a paid emissary of a foreign government.

But in this fight Clemenceau was in his element. Every day he wrote for his paper one of his famous editorials "clear as crystal, biting as acid, sharp as a Damascus blade." He spent long hours in the law courts, made speeches before infuriated and hostile mobs and spent early mornings in lonely spots facing, with pistol or rapier, countless antagonists who had called in question his personal honor or that of the man for whom he was battling.

A DUELIST.

He threw himself into politics and became Mayor of Montmartre. Two years later he was chosen president of the Municipal Council of Paris. Three years after, he entered the Chamber of Deputies. Then for many years he was in opposition, playing his role of feared critic and wrecker of cabinets. Because of his wonderful power he was for ten or twelve years the virtual ruler of France, although he never held office. His tongue, his pen and his rapier were alike feared by all his opponents. A story is told that illustrates the awe in which he was held. At the time of the Panama Canal scandal Paul Deroulede arose in the Chamber of Deputies and slowly said:

"This indefatigable advocate of Hertz, who is as energetic as he is dangerous, you all know him. His name is on all lips, but not one of you dares pronounce it, because there are three things you are afraid of —his dagger, his pistol and his tongue. Very well! I dare all three: his name is Clemenceau." Amid the excitement that immediately prevailed on all sides Clemenceau arose and, in measured tones, replied:

"Monsieur Heroulede, you have lied."

And the inevitable encounter, in which Deroulede was wounded, took place.

Aristide Briand,

Now "Deputy" Premier of France, who has the best chance to succeed Raymond Poincare upon that politician's resignation of the post of Prime Minister, which is expected in the near future.

Georges Clemenceau,

Former French Premier, who is again in the running for the position. He has had a romantic career and lived four years in the United States as an exile.

UNDER A CLOUD.

Clemenceau has always refused to have anything to do with the modern duel which has made France the laughing stock of the whole world. He has insisted that affairs in which he participated be serious ones and frequently he has refused to meet men who have earned reputations as fake fire-eaters.

There was a period of Clemenceau's life when he was under a cloud. Unjustly suspected of selling his country to England he was driven from public life by his enemies. For many years he was in retirement. Apparently he was politically ruined and his paper lost prestige and power. For ten years he made no attempt to regain his old position and it is doubtful if he would ever have entered the political arena again had it not been for the Dreyfus case, which brought him out of his retirement.

In 1906, after many years in the wilderness, Clemenceau received his first Cabinet appointment and how it came about is still told as a good story in France. Sarrien, who had been asked to form a ministry, called a number of his friends together for a consultation. When they were all seated Sarrien turned to Clemenceau, who was next to him, and said: "My dear fellow, what will you take?" (meaning to order the refreshment most suited to his taste.) To the new Premier's discomfiture, Clemenceau immediately answered: "Oh, the Interior," and Bourgeois chimed in with: "And me the Foreign Office."

A few months later Clemenceau became Prime Minister and for almost three years he held the exalted post. In office he showed the same moral courage he had shown in opposition. He appointed Gen. Picquart Minister of War, although his name was associated with that canker on French history—the Dreyfus case. Then he made Briand, the Socialist, one of his colleagues and paved the way for that man's rise to the Premiership. He played the part of a despot, refusing to consult his Cabinet in matters of policy and yet forbidding all of them to take any action without first consulting him. In the last months of his ministry several of his colleagues were secretly working for his downfall.

DELCASSE.

It was, however, Theophile Delcasse who turned Clemenceau out of office. Delcasse should have been summoned to succeed his rival, but Germany had to be considered. It was France's northern neighbor who compelled the dismissal of Delcasse from the post of Minister of War. The latter instigated the French policy in Morocco, made certain demands upon the Sultan, which were refused upon the advice of Germany, and resigned when the Kaiser intimated to Rouvier, the French Prime Minister, that Delcasse's retention in office would be followed by a declaration of war by Germany.

In these circumstances President Fallieres refused to summon Delcasse to succeed Clemenceau, fearing that his appointment would be looked upon by Germany as an affront. And today the same consideration, although with constantly lessening force, stands in the way of his advancement. Sweep it aside and there would be little doubt that Delcasse would be quickly put in charge of the French ship of state. And all who have had opportunities of knowing and studying the man believe that he would make the most brilliant Premier in the history of the third republic.

Unlike Clemenceau, Delcasse has spent much of his Parliamentary life in office. He was born in 1852, and is just 61 years old. He studied at the Sorbonne, and obtained a literary degree. In common with many other men who have bulked large in French politics he became a journalist, making a specialty of political topics and parliamentary debates in the Chamber and the Senate. In 1888 he was returned to the Chamber, and five years later entered the Cabinet of Ribot as Colonial Under-Secretary. So highly was he esteemed that Dupuy, who succeeded Ribot, appointed him to the same position. The following year he was made Minister of the Colonies.

BANK WILL BE IMPOSING. CONTRACTS NOW BEING LET.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA BARBARA, April 1.—Plans have been completed by Parkinson & Bergstrom of Los Angeles for the handsome new banking house that is to be built by the First National Bank of this city. Bids for the construction are now being taken.

The building is to stand at the corner of Canyon Perdido and State streets, and will be one of the most imposing structures of its type in the city of this state in California. It will be of brick construction and faced with artificial granite. Architecturally it will follow classic lines.

The first story is to be handsomely finished in mahogany, tile and marble, for the use of the bank, while the second floor will contain a number of offices. A thoroughly up-to-date burglar-alarm system is to be installed.

Inquiry in motor trade circles points to a much larger showing than ever before at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, about the middle of September, lasting two weeks. The exhibition attracted more than three quarters of a million persons last year.

As a result of recommendations made by the Police Commissioners of Springfield, Mass., a committee has been named to investigate traffic conditions throughout the city.

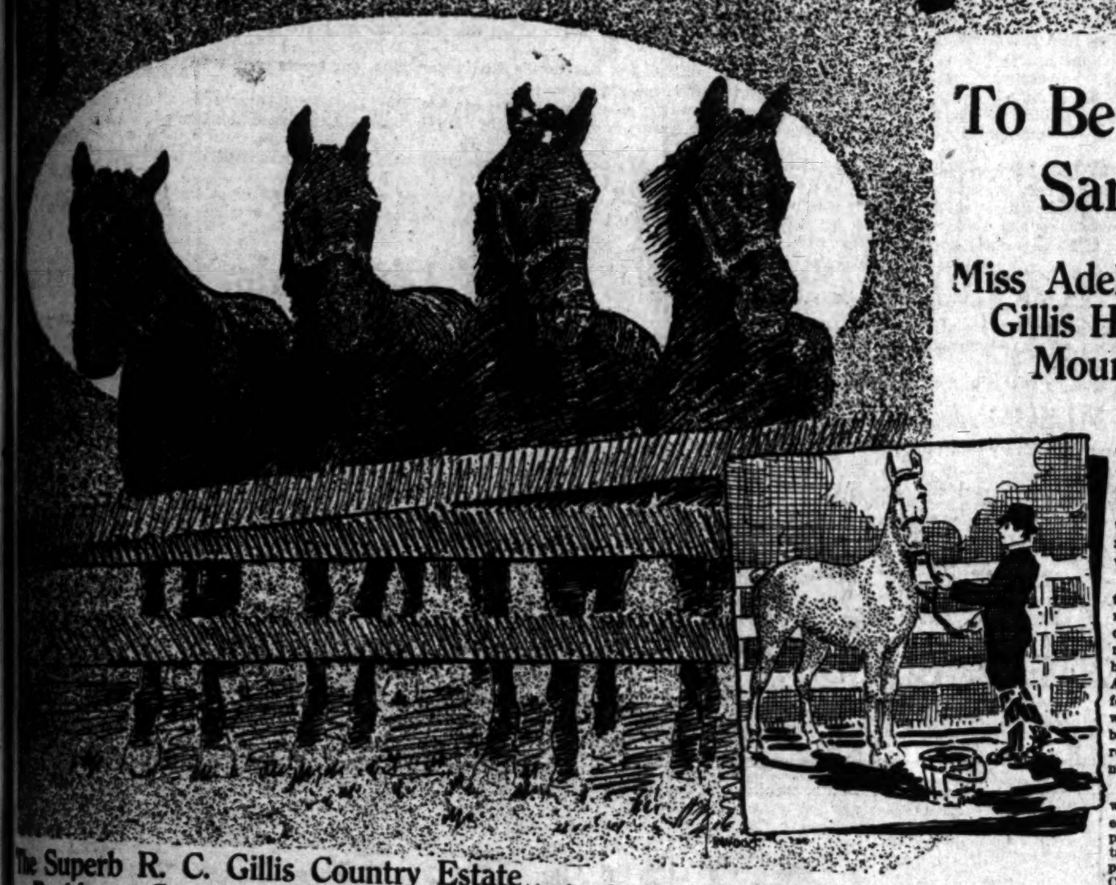
Mountain Corral for Pedigreed Horses.



To Be Prominent Factor of Superb Santa Monica Country Estate Home

Miss Adelaide Gillis The Senior Daughter Of The R. C. Gillis Household Plans Installation of California's Only Mountain Breeding Stables For Blooded Horses

At last Santa Monica is to have its own breeding corral for both riding and driving horses, to add but another feature to its already overwhelming number of pleasures for the sportsman, and this to be of a nature that will bear comparison with the noted stables of England.

It is doubtful, if even His Majesty, the late King Edward, manifested a more wholesome pleasure and thoroughness in his plans for his world noted stables, than is demonstrated by the youthful horsewoman, Miss Adelaide Gillis, in her present plans for the stables, which she anticipates will in time become world noted, due both to the pedigreed lineage of the respective horses and the thoroughness of their training.

One of the objects of Miss Gillis which inspired her to go to the present tremendous expenditure and pains to establish this corral in Santa Monica, is to put an end to the present scarcity of blooded horses in California, and that these horses may have not only the park training, that so many of the eastern pedigreed horses of the larger cities have exclusively, but will be as adapted to steep mountain climbing as they are to the suburban boulevards and city paved streets.

Though Miss Gillis has been a lover of fine horses and has ridden them from her babyhood, the realization of her life dream, of having her own stables of them, did not begin to be fulfilled until about last January when her father, Mr. R. C. Gillis, made his first trip of this nature to Kentucky and began the purchase of the present number.

His first purchase consisted of six as finely blooded horses as have ever trodden American soil, each with pedigrees and a lineage behind them that would bear comparison with Edward's own. Since the purchase a seventh has been added, a mare colt.

The names of the horses are respectively: "Don Castano," "King of All," "Kentucky," "Dolly Rex," "Dona Esmeralda," "Flash" and "Raincloud."

"Don Castano," formerly known in his Kentucky home as "Peter Rabbit," is a chestnut stallion, standing 16 hands high. His name, "Castano" interpreted from the Spanish means "chestnut." His sire was "Golden King" and his dam was "Indian Dream." He is at present 4 years old, and is a particularly clever "trick" horse.

"King of All" is a stallion of powerful weight and size, standing 16 hands high; his coat is a rich satiny chestnut. His carriage very appropriately bears out his name, being as majestic in every detail, as that of the most imperious ruler, and has never been defeated in a horse show. He is one of the noted products of the well-known Sideview Stock Farm.

"Kentucky" is particularly noted for his splendid action, having an unusually fast rack and manifesting tremendous power in every line of his being, whether being ridden in a trot, single foot or being driven in harness. He is said to have remarkable endurance. He is 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, and is in color a handsome seal brown.

"Dolly Rex" is an exceptionally fine brood mare, 11 years old. Her colts have commanded some of the highest prices known in Kentucky. Her sire was "Rex McDonald" and her dam "Lady Johnson."

"Dona Esmeralda" is a chestnut yearling of unusual strength and beauty. Her name "Esmeralda" interpreted from the Spanish, means emerald to signify her origin from the Emerald Stock Farm of Kentucky. She is just one year old; but shows such extraordinary promise, that she has already been entered in the Panama-Pacific Exposition to be held in San Francisco, California, in 1915, to participate in the $6000 stake. Her sire was "Golden King" and her dam was "Lady Johnson."

"Flash" is all that his name might imply, permeated with fire and action, from his small fleet hoofs to his sensitive nostrils and flashing eyes. He is sorrel with light mane and tail, standing 14 hands high. He is especially adaptable to mountain climbing, his dash, energy and superior strength giving him special advantages over the majority of horses, while in this environment.

"Raincloud" is the latest addition to the stables, a colt of a little over a week old. Her sire is "Cloud King" and her dam is "Dolly Rex." She is a direct descendant of the various "Clouds," in which "Red Cloud" and others are included, noted throughout the horse world as one of the most famous lines of saddle horses, taking her name from the dark lowering atmosphere that was in evidence the morning of her birth.

The Superb R. C. Gillis Country Estate Residence Soon to Be Established

The beautiful new home of R. C. Gillis will soon be installed on his southwest mesa, seaward from the mountains, which has long been the envy of so many homeseekers in this vicinity.

This superb, elevated spot, commands a view of such surpassing grandeur that it is doubtful if its equivalent could be found at home or abroad. On one side of it sweeps the majestic canyon, a low purple misted valley its rock-ribbed, emerald clad sides, standing out in striking color contrast, as it pursues its stately course to the sea. Straight ahead looms the Crescent Bay and the sea, with Catalina, in her royal purple attire, truly a fitting monarch over such a scene. On another side along the horizon lies Los Angeles, her myriads of tiny lights reminding one of a sabled goddess, shimmering with jewels. In the immediate background, rises the impregnable wall of mountains.

The Gillis' homestead is to be one of unusual beauty and attractiveness, to follow the California and Mexican architecture with a patio and to be built of concrete with a tile roof. The stables for the blooded horses, will be of much the same architecture, with its patio; though, instead of being located on the mesa as the home, it will be in the base of the canyon, close to the foothills.

THE GILLIS PROPERTY, JUST ACROSS CANYON FROM BRENTWOOD PARK.

Another feature in connection with the Gillis property which will materially enhance its value is its close proximity to the far-famed Brentwood Park, located, as it is, just across the canyon.

Brentwood Park has long been known as one of the most picturesque and ideal homeplaces of the Pacific Coast, attracting the attention not only of those familiar with this Southwestern territory, but also of those coming from the East and foreign countries.

Its palatial homes are owned and inhabited by some of Southern California's social leaders, and represent some of the highest types of artistic architecture in the West.

MARITIME LOS ANGELES.

BY STINSON JARVIS.

The steady advance that Los Angeles is making in maritime affairs is due to a large amount of new building and general improvements in our harbor. The dredging of the Inner Basin was only a small item in consideration of the improvements which have followed and are still to follow. Since then, millions have spent a fortune in digging up a ship canal for deep-water vessels all the way to Wilmington, and they have bulk-headed their entire inland to hold it together as a central loading place for the outgoing passenger steamers. Further down and away off through the old-channel to the Pacific Lumber Company's yards and the great areas of the Consolidated Lumber Company, an engineering point of view of importance that the friction of the sand-sided canals is reduced to a minimum, and nothing that has been made near the Inner Basin has given a second outlet to the tidal rushes which formerly came in the one channel that is now Dead Man's Island. In fact, it was almost impossible for a boat single-handed against the tide which at Mormon Island is like a mill race, but now the water, emptying of the fourteen miles called the inner harbor channel, and it will be still easier when another cut is made to Wilmington Terminal Island Improvements being made toward getting the harbor in such a condition that a large number of yachts that now have to leave after the opening of the boat have the docks, yards and other lay-out ways which they require. This influx of lordly vessels is looked for as the rising of tomorrow's sun. It has been announced solely on good authority. At present the men who have already built large vessels here know how to handle them in the water are exceedingly few. Fulton is one of the only two men of them. He has combined with Bowles, whose fine work on the model of yacht or ship is admitted to be beyond reproach. Fulton and Bowles have lately opened a shipbuilding establishment on one of the inner canals near Wilmington, and the number of vessels they have turned out is of itself one of the enormous demand that is being made as Los Angeles seeks her maritime supremacy on this coast.

One of these vessels is a passenger steamer built on the order of Matt Walsh, manager of the San Pedro Transportation Company. She has been nicely fitted out with leather-covered seats, and for the first time in history people who travel on local ferries are getting some comfort for their money when they sail on the new Peer. The Japanese have obtained another craft on the order of Mamma, to be used in the ocean fishing trade. Two other vessels from the same firm have been launched for George Evich, who is an old-time customer of Fulton, and has put his craft to hard ocean usage for many a year. A fifth vessel has been sent out for A. Sellal, and a sixth for Jack Rastmussen. The names of the owners of two other vessels were not produced, but eight vessels were launched in six weeks, which is a fact requiring no argument.

It is said along the water front that the Japanese are getting the best of it in the fishing trade and that the Italian and Greek contingents are taking second place. But this does not mean that they are not getting fish. The whole Japanese nation could not exhaust the supply of fine fish in our Pacific waters, and the clean little men are a valuable adjunct to our harbor. Their diving apparatusses are perfect and up-to-date in every way. On Sunday the big Yale came in from outside and soon afterward a swift steamer brought the diving men's boat flying to the harbor. A great crowd gathered on the Salt Lake wharves to see the Japanese diver go down under the Yale's keel. His white rubber suit was spotless. The whole procedure was in the hands of men who thoroughly understood their business. It was like human clockwork. The employees of the Yale would not explain why the Japanese were called. But it was evidently something unimportant, and the point is only mentioned to carry the suggestion that it is useful to have these skilled Japanese divers close at hand.

Railway Men Consider Best Routes Into New Industrial City—First Photographs of Refineries.

EL SEGUNDO, April 20.—J. McMillan, general manager, and D. W. Pontius, traffic manager of the Pacific Electric Railway, were in the city with E. I. McCray, general manager of the El Segundo Land and Improvement Company, and M. L. McCray, Los Angeles capitalist, during the week, to investigate the best route for the electric line from the east and to look over the field.

Work has been progressing satisfactorily the past two weeks on the Standard's mammoth wharf, and about 500 feet of work has been pushed out over the briny deep. The new wharf is five feet higher than the one first erected. Better progress will be made from now on, as the loose ends have been picked up and everything is running smoothly.

Reinhold Kiefer, a prominent mine owner of Elko, Nev., has bought an acre on Palm avenue, which he will immediately improve.

On April 7 forty palms were planted, walks surveyed, tennis court set out and trees trimmed in this place. All this was done under the supervision of the Park and Good Roads Committee, assisted by by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. report that there is considerable inquiry for acreage in their new addition. The demand now is largely for acre farm homes, close to the town proper.

The first photographs ever taken of the plant of the Standard Oil refineries have been secured by a Los Angeles photographer who succeeded in getting permission to take pictures within the company's fence. These photographs graphically reveal the vast amount of development that has already been accomplished here.

OVERLOOKING THE SEA.

Among the attractive new residences being erected by the Santa Monica Bay Home Builders on sixty or more lots in various parts of the Crescent Bay district is a fine home for H. M. Eichelberger, president of the Pioneer Paper Company of Los Angeles. The house occupies a sightly lot in the Vicente Terrace tract, and is two stories in height. It is of handsome exterior and is elegantly finished inside. The home building company has just completed its first fiscal year.

A man of 80 years proved to be the best speller at the old-fashioned spelling bee, held at the First Baptist Church, Bellefontaine, O., He is George Keasler, and he "spelled down" all others.

Parvin Swisher of Milton, Pa., who has just celebrated the eighty-first anniversary of his birth, still works every day. He was a tanner in early life and he hauled hides for his father from Millville to Philadelphia with five head of horses. The trip took six weeks.

CELEBRATE PANAMA CANAL.

Denver Proposes to Also Have a Commemorative Celebration of the World Event.

[Denver Times:] "If San Francisco and San Diego are to celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal, why not Denver?"—Colorado Electric Club.

"Not a reason in the world," was the answer of the club's directorate at a meeting held last night. Here is the plan proposed by the directors of the Electric Club, and which it will request every boosting organization in Denver to help carry out:

To hold in Denver, probably next September, an exposition to illustrate the benefits which will accrue to Colorado and the Southwest through the opening of the Panama Canal and the advantages to this city through its becoming the pivotal point on the gulf-to-sound line of the Hill railroad system.

The central feature will be a replica of the armored cruiser Colorado—a modern battleship in all its essential parts built and exhibited in Denver, 1000 miles inland, a mile above the sea. If the plan carries, the cruiser will be manned by real jackies.

As two-thirds of the work performed aboard a modern man-o'war is by means of electricity, that much of its construction can be provided through the combined ingenuity of the 681 members of the Colorado Electric Club.

President Taft will be invited to open the exposition, and if he is unable to come the invitation will be extended to the Secretary of the Navy, James J. Hill will be invited.

The exposition will in no way interfere with the exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 to commemorate the opening of the Panama Canal, but rather will attract further attention to that event.

As a consequence the co-operation of the two Pacific Coast cities is expected to be extended to Denver in promoting the success of the local exposition.

STITCHES IN A COAT.

Kansas City Tailor Keeps Count As He Sews and Finds About Thirty-three Thousand.

[Kansas City Star:] While the season was still slack in the tailoring business, Herman Axene, a tailor in the Waldheim building, took time to count the stitches in the last coat he made. He found 23,800 machine stitches and 9137 hand stitches.

The coat on which the count was made was a four-button sack, 32 inches long, and single stitched. A frock or evening coat or a double-stitched street garment, of course, would require many more stitches. Here is the classification of the stitches:

	Machine stitches.	Hand stitches.
Five ockets	1,297	478
All seams, except sleeves	4,979	1,000
Inside work, lapels, edge tape, etc	1,200	2,400
Basting, trying on, etc		2,151
Making sleeves	1,264	616
Collar and coat stitching	4,865	1,000
Putting in sleeves	754	700
Buttonholes and buttons		692
Miscellaneous	1,619	670
Totals	23,800	9,137

"I kept a little tablet with me at my work, and every time I counted a hundred strokes of the needle I made a mark. On my machine, I found four and half stitches were taken at every stroke of the pedal. That was forty-five stitches to ten strokes, and so I put down a mark every tenth stroke."

The Guileless Farmer.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] An apparently poor but honest farmer came into Samuel Heusel's store at Ann Arbor, Ind., lugging what to all appearances was a crate of eggs. He told a hard luck story. His father had instructed him to take six crates to a certain grocery store, but he had unfortunately forgotten the name of the store. He opened up the crate, and sure enough there were rows of strictly fresh eggs, and all he asked was 20 cents a dozen.

Heusel lost no time trying to assist him to remember the name of the grocer to whom he had been directed. In speed he hustled him out after he had paid for those eggs.

Later in the afternoon Heusel, gloating over his "find," started to open the other five crates. Sure enough, there reposed rows of fresh, clean eggs on top of each crate, and if Heusel had stopped there he would have deferred his disappointment longer.

Instead, however, he took out the top tray and there found nice rows of black dirt where eggs should have been. The same condition was found in all the other crates—one tray of eggs, four trays of dirt.

ALFALFA LANDS ARE IN DEMAND.

Many Noteworthy Transfers of Dairy Holdings.

Santa Ana Concern Takes Over Fine Property.

Title to Large Tract Secured by Job Harriman.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PORTERVILLE, April 20.—Somewhat of a lull marked the real estate operations of the past week, probably due in part to disagreeable weather and consequent difficulty of auto travel through the orange districts, which are characterized for the most part by heavy dobe soil. Alfalfa and dairy lands showed the greatest activity during the past week, not only for the gross amount of investment, but for number of transfers, as well.

Alfalfa land is being held at from $50 to $75 per acre below the current price in other dairy districts of this State, although with the present demand there is little likelihood that this condition will continue throughout the season.

Quite the most interesting and significant sale of the week was that of the Ridgway Bros'. dairy plant, including the Sunflower Co-Operative Creamery, situated in the Poplar-Woodville district, to Raitt Bros. of Santa Ana, the deal for the place having been negotiated by J. P. Raitt through McKelvey & Holland. The Ridgway dairy consists of 480 acres of the cream of the Woodville alfalfa land, of which 250 acres are in alfalfa and the rest under ditch and cultivated. The creamery is a well-known institution and the product is marketed wholly in Los Angeles. The Raitts paid approximately $100,000 for the property and will expend $25,000 in further improvements to the place. Orders have been given to an eastern importer of blooded cattle for a trainload of Holsteins and these will be used as the foundation for future dairy herds.

Another was added to the colony of wealthy property-owners of this district this week when William H. Nelson, a banker of Brown's Valley, Minn., purchased of F. R. Bergman a half-section of alfalfa land in the Poplar district. Nelson expects to make his winter home in this city and will arrive here in August to take personal charge of the contemplated improvements. He expects to conduct the place as a fine stock and dairy ranch. His plans include the erection of a number of fine buildings and he will pay particular attention to the breeding of blooded Jerseys.

BUYS FINE GROVE.

Rollin C. Lewis, an employee of the City National Bank of Long Beach, has closed for a thirty-five-acre Valencia orchard in the Merryman district, the property being purchased from the Randolph Fruit Company. The trees are barely five years old, and the price paid for the property is said to have been $15,000. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, who came to the south from Janesville, Wisconsin, but two years ago, expect to make their home in the Merryman district when their orchard comes into full bearing.

Following up a policy which was inaugurated by the company in the south, the Randolph Fruit Company has begun the development of about sixty acres of Valencia orchard lands in the Rocky Hill district of the Merryman section, the land being purchased this week from the Merryman Land, Fruit and Lumber Company. They expect to put the entire tract out to oranges.

LARGE BLOCK SOLD.

Philadelphia Capitalist Buys Business Corner—Curtiss Lays Foundation for Aviation School.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN DIEGO, April 20.—Charles Beck, a capitalist of Philadelphia, this week purchased the four-story brick building at the southwest corner of Sixth and H streets for $130,000. The property was bought as an investment. The building is 100x100 feet and is occupied by a wholesale and retail hardware firm. It was erected several years ago by D. H. Steele, a former Los Angeles dry-goods merchant. The sale was made by Heilman brothers for G. A. Davidson, president of the Southern Trust and Savings Bank.

Glenn Curtiss, of aviation fame, has bought twenty lots in Coronado, where he will erect a residence to cost $6000 and a number of cottages for pupils of his aviation school. The site lies on the west end of the island from which is obtained fine views of the Coronado Country Club, the golf links and the aviation field on North Island.

Walter S. Koehler of Chicago, has bought 340 acres in the Union addition at the east end of the southeast corner of Balboa Park, the consideration being in the neighborhood of $50,000. The property was bought of D. C. Collier & Co., and the purchaser will develop it into a high-class residence subdivision.

R. H. Knight, a capitalist of Sault Ste. Marie, Can., has bought of D. C. Collier & Co., an entire block in the Point Loma highlands, the consideration being $15,000. Knight will build a fine residence on a part of the block and will hold the remainder as an investment.

A syndicate composed of A. T. Crane, F. A. Yardi, Albert Dreher, J. K. Mason, S. Barnson and others this week bought from Mrs. A. E. Frost four blocks of land north of Balboa Park, each block being 600 feet deep by 25 feet wide, and the consideration being $45,000. The tract is bounded by Arizona, Idaho, Dwight and Myrtle streets. It will be improved and put on the market.

The Homeland Improvement Company reports the sale to a local syndicate of the John G. Capron home, a residence and 100x150 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Twelfth and D streets, for $50,000.

H. G. Fenton, a contractor of Coronado, has purchased through E. J. Swayne & Co., a third of a block, comprising four lots, at Twelfth and N streets for $25,000.

Martha Ingersoll Robinson has sold for John S. Hawley, Sr., a new twelve-room residence and lot at the northwest corner of Albatross and Laurel streets for $11,000. N. T. Foyer was the buyer.

Joseph W. Sefton, Jr., recently bought of Mrs. Mary Eddy of Baltimore, 2800 acres of ranch land in Jamacha Valley, adjoining the Sefton ranch, the price being $40,000.

The First Baptist Church congregation is having plans prepared for a new church edifice to be erected at Tenth and E streets and to cost $100,000.

Mrs. T. S. Ogden will improve her lots at Burlingame by the expenditure of $9000 on residence, pergola, lily pond and landscaping.

Dr. Edward C. Maun is having plans prepared for a residence at Sixth street and A avenue, Coronado, to cost $8000.

SPECTACLE OF THE MISSION

High School Students Garb as Franciscan Friars.

Over Four Hundred Boys a Girls in Parade.

Characters and Costumes Bygone Times.

Four hundred students of the Po[illegible]chaic High School are expectan[illegible] awaiting May 9, San Diego Day d[illegible]ing Shrine week, with its gorgeo[illegible] Mission Pageant, in which they a[illegible] to appear, and in which they are [illegible] represent the characters who liv[illegible] and worked in the days when t[illegible] Franciscan fathers built the splend[illegible] chain of missions reaching from S[illegible] Diego in the South to Sonoma in t[illegible] North.

Great interest in the missi[illegible] pageant is apparent in all parts [illegible] the school. The students, boys a[illegible] girls, appreciate the opportunity o[illegible] fered them to appear in such a sig[illegible] nificant pageant.

Each of the twenty-one beautif[illegible] mission floats and its corteris of a[illegible] pendants will be captained by a st[illegible] float, who will have entire charge [illegible] his float and his people during t[illegible] time it is passing in review befo[illegible] the packed grand stands, and also [illegible] the business streets. These captain[illegible] are already organizing their several companies.

It has been a task to arrange f[illegible] the 400 and more participants i[illegible] this pageant. The number of stu[illegible] dents of proper size and strength t[illegible] enter the parade and appear in th[illegible] main roles was a problem in itself [illegible] but it was solved satisfactorily through the co-operation of the school officials and the student body. Measurements and the weight of each contestant was required that the costumes might fit perfectly.

MIRROR OF THE PAST.

The students have been addressed several times by Henry Kablersky, the director and designer of the Mission Pageant.

"It is like holding a mirror of the past up to the present-day world," said he, "and so perfectly will we present the characters and costumes of that bygone time, and so impressively will the story of the early struggles of the Franciscan fathers be depicted, that the hundreds of thousands of visitors, and the people of Los Angeles will stand in silent awe as the Mission Pageant passes."

Gen. Frank C. Prescott has been appointed grand marshal of the Mission Pageant by Potentate Flint of Al Malaikah Temple. He has asked representatives of the old Spanish-Californian families—whose ancestors were a living part of the mission days—to assist. He has already received a number of responses. These men will be splendidly mounted and costumed.

It is through the Panama-California Exposition that the Los Angeles Shrine Committee is enabled to present the Mission Pageant. Arrangements for the shipment of the floats to this city have been made. They will be loaded on flat cars and should arrive and be unloaded not later than Wednesday morning. All the floats have been redecorated and upon arrival will be redraped with velvet and silk, while such parts as may have suffered damage in transit will be repaired. They will then be held in readiness for the beautiful morning of May 9, when San Diego will invade Los Angeles with a huge crowd of exposition boosters and extend the glad hand of fellowship to the visitors Los Angeles is to entertain during Shrine week.

UNIVERSALITY OF MAN.

On the following day, May 10, this city will celebrate its usual Fiesta of the Flowers, with a gorgeous street parade and pageant. There will be five divisions in this splendid display, including beautiful floral floats, an allegorical display representing the Universality of Man, of which Perry J. Weidner is historian, and which has been designed and produced under the skillful direction of Kablersky.

There are eight floats in this one division and ten distinct groups, which will present in chronological sequence the progressive development of the human race from the days of Greece and Rome, through the Teutonic and Spanish periods of European history, to the Saxon conquest of England, and its later development. The development of the race, and its progress in the arts and science, is portrayed. Early American history, the development of the western hemisphere and the growth of a grand civilization on these western continents is to be beautiful float pictures.

The first float will represent the Greek, accompanied by the Sun and Moon and the Seven Planets of the Solar System, human participants dancing and riding, who will be dressed in unique costumes, presenting the true planetary colors, and on each will appear the ancient symbol representative of the planets. This is the idea of an astrologer.

North America, and particularly the United States, will be represented in the second float. South America will be in distinct scenery will be presented in the third. The fourth float will depict Britannica, the growth of the British empire and the colonies. Another will be representative of Europe, with Germany, Spain, France, Russia and Italy illustrated in costume and customing. Africa, and its mysterious history, has another float. Asia, with its splendid expanse of mountain and desert and its singular people, will be presented in another beautiful creation, while the eighth will depict the history and opportunities of Australia.

Students of the Los Angeles High School will participate in this pageant, and will participate in the Universality of Man, and are observing an interest equaling that of the students of the Polytechnic High School, in their active preparations for correctly presenting the story of the growth and development of the human race, and its fundamental basis of universal brotherhood. Costumes will be distinctive and correctly present the period each character is cast for. All is under the direct and personal supervision of Prof. Kablersky.

Another section of the Fiesta Day parade will be given over to the fraternal organizations of the world, and the reports received this will be large. A division will be devoted entirely to floral entries, while the civic organizations of the various individual communities of Southern California have another division.

Educational, Beautiful.

SPECTACLE OF THE MISSIONS.

High School Students Garbed as Franciscan Friars.

Four Hundred Boys and Girls in Parade.

Carriers and Costumes of Bygone Times.

Four hundred students of the Polytechnic High School are expectantly awaiting May 9, San Diego Day during Fiesta week, with its gorgeous floral Pageant, in which they are to appear, and in which they are to represent the characters who lived and worked in the days when the padres fathers built the splendid chain of missions reaching from San Diego in the South to Sonoma in the North.

Great interest in the mission event is apparent in all parts of the school. The students, boys and girls, appreciate the opportunity offered them to appear in such a significant pageant.

Each of the twenty-one beautiful floral floats and its corterie of attendants will be captained by a student, who will have entire charge of his float and his people during the time it is passing in review before the packed grand stands, and along the business streets. These captains are already organizing their several groups.

It has been a task to arrange for the 400 and more participants in the pageant. The number of students of proper size and strength to ride in the parade and appear in the floral mass was a problem in itself, but it was solved satisfactorily through the co-operation of the school officials and the student body. Measurements and the weight of each entrant was required that the costumes might fit perfectly.

MIRROR OF THE PAST.

The students have been addressed several times by Henry Kablersko, the author and designer of the Mission Float.

"It is like holding a mirror of the past up to the present-day world," he says, "and so perfectly will we present the characters and costumes of the bygone time, and so impressively the story of the early struggles of the Franciscan fathers be depicted, that hundreds of thousands of visitors, and the people of Los Angeles themselves, will stand in silent awe as the Mission floats pass."

THE MAN MADERO FEARS.

Gen. Orosco Not Rightly Judged by Outsiders.

Gen. Pascual Orozco will have left his impress upon the country, no matter how the revolt of which he is now the military leader results, says a Mexican correspondent in the Kansas City Star.

It was in the rich Guerrero Valley that the nucleus of the army which brought about the overthrow of President Diaz was formed, and this same valley has contributed several hundred men who are now under the banner of Orozco to remove from power President Madero, whose success against Diaz they were largely instrumental in bringing about.

Gen. Orosco is a product of the Guerrero Valley. He is the idol of the people of this mountainous region. When he was identified with the Madero revolution and the new administration of the national government his old neighbors were loyal to that cause. When he recently transferred his allegiance to Vasques Gomes and assumed command of the revolutionary army of Chihuahua the men of the Guerrero Valley flocked to his standard. So great has the new revolution drawn upon the men of this region that there are not enough men left to grow the crops to feed the women and children who were left behind. That Orosco will succeed in his plans no one here doubts for a moment. His old neighbors say he is a man of destiny and that if he does not occupy the Presidential chair it will be because he does not want that high position. They look upon him as a patriot and offer ample excuses for his change of allegiance from Madero to Gomes.

Much that is erroneous has been published in regard to Orosco. He has been pictured as an illiterate, brutal and stubborn man of the bigand type. It has been cited that his affront to Madero immediately following the first battle of Juarez showed him to be disloyal and overofficious. It is asserted, however, by men who know the inside circumstances relating to that sensational incident that Orosco was fully justified in his treatment of Madero and that the break between the two men on that occasion was never healed.

In view of the fact that there is something more than a possibility that Orozco may become President of Mexico, or at least, that he may occupy a prominent position in the government of the country, should the present revolution succeed, an authentic biography of him would be of interest.

Pascual Orosco was born February 2, 1882, in the little village of Santa Ines del Monte, a few miles from Guerrero. His father gained a livelihood tilling a small farm near the town. His mother was Senora Amanda Vasquez, daughter of a wealthy ranchman of this section. His early boyhood was spent upon his father's farm and the ranch of his grandfather. He was given the benefit of as good an education as the schools of this part of the country afforded and received his finishing education in the San Augustine College in Guadalajara. He was graduated from that institution with high honors in 1899.

When he had finished his education he returned to Guerrero, where he worked for a time on ranches as cowboy up to foreman.

Three years ago he established a freighting agency at Minaca and was employed by three of the largest mining companies in the western part of the State to transport their bullion and ore to the railroad shipping point from the mills and mines. Orosco usually headed each conductas, and he had several engagements with bandits who made attacks upon the trains.

In personal appearance Orosco is not prepossessing. He is tall and angular and has a facial expression that is somewhat repulsive. He is known among his own people as the man who never smiles. He is also a man of silence. Not even to his closest friends does he do much talking and when he does take occasion to express himself it is never upon frivolous subjects. He is serious-minded always. He is an ideal military commander. His very presence demands obedience and respect. His orders never have to be repeated. Madero knows the power of Orosco and fears him more than any other man in the republic.

Some idea of the popularity of Orosco, not only among his home people of the Guerrero Valley, but throughout the State of Chihuahua, may be had when it is pointed out that within a few days after his announcement repudiating Madero more than 4000 men flocked to his revolutionary standard. The business element of the city of Chihuahua showed its confidence in Orozco by contributing $1,000,000 to his cause.

For the part he took in the Madero revolution Orosco was made general of division and was given charge of the rural corps in this State, which position he held until March 1 of this year, when his resignation went into effect and he became identified with the revolution that Vasques Gomes and his followers were promoting.

Orosco has made a particular study of political economy. While employed upon ranches and in mining camps he spent his leisure hours reading books treating of government policies and other serious subjects. It is said by men who know him well that he is much better equipped than he has been given credit for occupying a high position in the government.

WILL TRANSFORM TRACT.

Development of Water in Abundance Assures Success of Noteworthy Agricultural Venture.

SANTA ANA, April 20.—Typical of the development of many acres all over Orange county, the Dawn Land Company's property at West Orange in a month's time has bridged the chasm that lies between wild land, covered with brush and cactus, to a fertile area with a water supply all its own.

As has been the case in various sections of the county, a well and a pumping plant have made all the difference. But a few years ago there was a large section of the county that was thought good only for pasturage or a crop when the rains were plentiful. Experiments with pumping-plants produced water, and plenty of it. West of Anaheim, along the west side of the Santa Ana River, and about Garden Grove are some of the finest ranches in the county.

In West Orange, just west of the main road between Anaheim and Santa Ana before the road turns to cross the Santa Ana River at West Orange, was a tract of land, 300 acres in all. It was part of vast acres bought nearly forty years ago by Uriah Shaffer, who farmed but little of it. When Shaffer died the property went to his widow, Mrs. Martha Shaffer, who farmed a part of the land, planted sixty acres to walnuts and left over 100 acres in its primeval condition, covered with willows and cactus.

There the land lay for years unimproved. Overtures to buy it failed until about three months ago, when an option upon it was secured by W. A. Zimmerman, president of the Orange County Savings and Trust Company of Santa Ana; R. J. Thompson and J. A. Nunn, retired, and Harry W. Lewis, a young rancher of Tustin. These four men formed the Dawn Land Company. They paid $50,000 to Mrs. Shaffer for the land.

The company started men to boring wells and this week their venture was crowned with success, for they got a good well, which is now being cleaned out. The well was bored 185 feet. A pipe two feet in diameter runs down sixty-eight feet and a twelve-inch pipe runs 102 feet lower than the two-foot pipe. Water standing in the well comes to within thirty feet of the top.

This year the place will be planted largely to lima beans. Next year it will be planted to oranges, walnuts and possibly apricots.

ACTIVE AT PALISADES.

SANTA MONICA, April 20.—While the rain was responsible for a diminution of real activities among the builders, the planning goes on and basing estimates upon lumber bills that are being figured by the several yards and mills, there will be something doing quite soon. In the Palisades a number of plans have been accepted for work to be started soon, while in the new Palisades subdivision the beginning of work awaits only the installation of the street and utility improvements. This entire Palisades section promises to be the storm center of building activity during the summer months, although no section of the city seems to have escaped the hammer-and-saw chorus. Brick laying is being rushed on the Busch casino, to the end that at least a part of the place may be ready for use on road-race day. At the site of the Elks' Clubhouse the foundation workers are busy and the new structure will soon be ready for the laying of the cornerstone.

The following permits for new buildings were issued during the week: R. J. Darling, five-room residence, No. 722 Nevada, $1800; Sheridan Batterson, four-room bungalow, Utah and Seventeenth, $1200; W. H. Sanders, six-room cottage, No. 1507 Sixth, $2000; A. A. Young, bungalow, Eleventh and Ashland, $1000; Miss E. Slauson, three-room brick building, Kinney and Ocean Front, $3000; W. H. Sanders, residence, No. 610 Utah, $1000; Mrs. M. Weathe, cottage, No. 2530 Fourth, $900; E. J. Crawford, cottage, No. 2629 Sixth, $600; Golden West Home Builders, cottage, No. 1309 Fremont, $1250; same, residence, No. 1317 Thirteenth, $1300; George Leatherman, residence, No. 1317 Tenth, $2000; G. Anderson, cottage, No. 915 Ashland, $1150; Charles Avril, residence, Fourth and Bicknell, $1150; J. H. McMonan, cottage, No. 1342 Fourth, $1000.

PLANS THREE HOUSES.

LOTS SOLD TO BE IMPROVED.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

A. B. Russell, who has been away from the city for about one and one-half years, has returned and opened a real estate office at No. 406 Mason building. While Mr. Russell expects to do a general real estate business, it is his intention to make a specialty of hotel brokerage.

OPEN NEW DEPARTMENT.

The National Home and Town Builders this week has opened a department to handle lease holds and business property. This department has been placed in charge of W. A. Griffing, who will be assisted by R. L. Bushey.

BUNCOED A GOVERNOR.

Shrewd Method Whereby a Texan Convict Secured a Full Pardon from the State's Prison.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] If Balzac were alive to recreate his "Vautrin," the type of the master criminal, using every ruse and every force against society, he would have to introduce one new phase to cover a modern development of the continuous conflict between crime and the community; the utilization of the false humanitarianism of our age to escape punishment and go free to start new devilries.

The dodge by which a Texas convict got a Thanksgiving Day pardon from Gov. Colquitt out-Vautrins Vautrin. He simply had printed in the prison paper a pathetic piece of verse, "Another Chance," as his own. Lee Mitchell, an Ohio convict, really wrote the verses. Mitchell was a man of some cultivation, and had contributed to several magazines before his conviction. "Another Chance" had been printed first in a paper gotten out by the convicts in the State prison of Ohio at Columbus.

There are penalties for stealing a watch, or for snatching a pocketbook, and there are penalties for forging a pardon. If Jake McKinney of the Texas prison had worked a forged pardon to get release, he could have been rearrested. For stealing a poem there are no penalties that means anything to a criminal, and a fellow who goes free on a genuine pardon can't be arrested again till he has tackled his next criminal job.

Gov. Colquitt and other Governors could find this incident instructive. The best weapon of society against the criminal classes is in sentences unalterable by anybody's whim. Only evidence of innocence is a good reason for a pardon. That is a good rule of action for every Governor and for every pardoning board in every State of the Union.

Spoiled the Chinese Almanac.

[Peking Daily News:] It looks as if the Chinese public in the south will be in a fix this year for the want of the usual almanac, which is an indispensable requisite in every household in order to distinguish between lucky and unlucky days, and the like. The little books are sold by the hundreds of thousands, and the trade got them ready as usual. To meet the situation new covers were put on with new dates, while the inside remained the same as if there had been no change. The sale of these is strictly interdicted and nothing has been provided to take their place.

San Fernando Mission Lands

Your First Opportunity to Purchase These Superb Lands

—And it will be your last opportunity to buy—within 22 miles of Los Angeles, citrus lands proven to be the richest and most valuable in Southern California. For several years the Syndicate owning these lands have kept them off the market but now—just when the Owens River water is available, when the electric railway and two magnificent boulevards to Los Angeles are practically completed—you are given the opportunity to buy the finest citrus, alfalfa and general farming lands in all Southern California—and at remarkably low prices.

—Every acre in the 16,000 acres of this tract is a money-making acre—and a large number of them are absolutely frostless—as was proven this past winter. If you want to see the most beautiful—most productive—most profitable lands in all this southern country—go out to this tract and cast your eyes over these wide sweeping acres—the low rolling hills where the winter vegetables for Los Angeles are grown—the high mountains in the background that guard these lands from cold winds and frosts. It is a picture that will delight the eye of a painter, with the old San Fernando Mission lending a note of interest; a picture that will delight the eye of the investor with the magnificent orange and lemon groves, olive orchards, and garden truck, demonstrating conclusively the extraordinary productiveness of these lands.

The Most Profitable Crops—Fine Schools—Hotel

—A prophet is not required to predict the productiveness or profitableness of these lands. The citrus orchards are here now—a 20-acre orange orchard paid for itself in three years. The lemon orchards have been even more profitable—bringing as high as $7 a box last season. Winter tomatoes and other winter vegetables for Los Angeles are grown here—a big money making crop. The largest olive orchard in the world is in this valley. These are all actual facts now, not future possibilities.

OWENS RIVER WATER—Settlers on this property have the opportunity to take advantage of the Owens River Water. The city is now endeavoring to contract with the purchasers, for the sale of this water.

The settler on the San Fernando Mission Lands has practically all the advantages of the city, as the city of San Fernando has been established for many years. Two fine grammar schools, a large high school, electricity, and natural gas from the great Midway oil fields will be piped to this tract within a year. A fine $75,000 hotel to be built by the Company, will be started immediately. There is nothing to wait for, no pioneering to be done. The lands are here—the advantages are here—the profits are here.

Pacific Electric Cars Running in 90 Days to the Town of San Fernando

—This car line goes out through Cahuenga Pass, making a most beautiful 22-mile ride from Los Angeles to San Fernando. This electric road, together with the superb San Fernando County Highway Boulevard—one of the good roads system—puts the San Fernando Mission Lands in immediate touch with Los Angeles. The Chatsworth Highway, which runs through this property, is also one of the good roads system to be built this summer. On the completion of the Panama Canal, citrus fruits from these lands can be shipped via Panama at very low rates, thus bringing the grower greater profits than was ever possible before.

A New Selling Plan---No Cash Payment Required

The Mission Fathers Knew

They selected this particular spot as the choicest of all the surrounding country. Here they founded the San Fernando Mission more than 125 years ago. Because of the richness of the soil, this Mission became the most prosperous of all the California Missions.

Others Who Know

"OUR OWN" FRANK WIGGINS, Secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, knows the value of these lands. He purchased a 20-acre orange grove in this tract. Ask him about the profits it has paid him.

MR. STODDARD JESS, Vice President of the First National Bank, owns a splendid 40-acre lemon grove on this property. Ask him what he thinks of it.

ALTHOUSE BROS. for years the foremost fruit dealers of Los Angeles, bought a 25-acre lemon grove in this tract. They are experts—get their opinion.

CALIFORNIA VEGETABLE UNION are familiar with fruit and farm lands all over California. They have invested here.

—This Company inaugurates an innovation in the selling of lands. For the first time in the history of Southern California you have an opportunity to buy land without making a cash payment. Actual settlers who will spend $2000 or more (according to the amount of property purchased) in immediate bona fide improvements, will not be required to make a cash payment for one year. We want improvements — we want settlers—we want your money spent immediately on your own property. We are willing to wait for our money, and are willing to sell the property on these terms, because we have absolute faith in the value of the lands. What stronger guarantee could you have for the property.

Prices | Alfalfa and General Farm Lands $300 Acre / Citrus Lands $450 and $500 Acre

Terms are one-quarter cash, balance one, two and three years at six per cent. You can buy on these terms, or on our "no cash payment plan" as you wish. But buy—and buy immediately. No one is in a position to overlook the actual facts as they exist regarding these lands, for to the settler they mean immediate and good incomes—to the investor they mean dollars doubled.

Stockholders in the San Fernando Mission Land Company

These names in themselves are an unquestioned guarantee as to the financial responsibility of this company. Every one of them stands for progress and growth. They are people with large vision and great faith.

The writer has resided here 43 years. When I first came here we had a few poor immigrants, a little corn and grape raising, a few poor-grade cattle and horses and the entire production of the South five counties was estimated to be about $500,000.00 outside of the mining interests. At that time the population of Los Angeles was estimated to be 4000 people. There is now a population of 400,000, so you will see we have grown 10,000 per cent. and there is no reason why we should not grow at the same rate for the next 40 years. See Mr. Goodrich's report estimating from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000. Is there any reason why we should not grow as fast in the next forty years as the past forty?

In 1870 a man had taken up 200 acres where the Paul de Longpre home now stands in Hollywood. I drove past the place and saw he was moving, and asked him what was the matter. He pointed out some posts 3 feet in height which he had put up, whitewashed and with barrels on top of them, and he said, "Do you see that?" I said "Yes," and he said, "Well, I put them there to keep the squirrels from stealing my eggs and the grasshoppers came and ate the hay out from under my hens. If you want this land you can have it free of charge and move into my house when I move out." That same property today could not be bought for $6,000,000.00.

RESIDENCE OF RALPH RODGERS

Buy! Buy!! Buy!!!

More people are working for Los Angeles than ever before. The whole world, except New York, seems to be trying to sell out and come to California. Why? Because they have found out from their numerous friends that Southern California is the finest place to live in and make money in, in the whole world, and everybody, except a few vice-presidents of banks, are boosting. One of these vice-presidents said to me in 1887, when the 120 feet where the Alexandria Hotel now stands was sold for $30,000.00, "How under the sun will they ever make two per cent. per annum interest on that investment?" This same property is today worth $1,000,000.00 without the buildings. The block bounded by Sixth, Seventh, Broadway and Hill was sold at that time for $100,000.00 and the same party said, "Crazy! If they would put their money at 3 per cent. per annum interest they would have been better off than to have bought that block. Said block today would be cheap at five million dollars without any buildings. So buy lots in Highland Park and Oak Hill Park!!!

Forty-three years ago lots 120 feet front on Spring street could be bought for $250.00 each. All of the same lots today are worth five to eight hundred thousand dollars each. Big figures, you say. Well, there is no reason why some of the lots bought today for $500.00 to $1000.00 should not be worth five hundred times that amount in 40 years. So do not be afraid to buy lots in Los Angeles.

Property purchased anywhere in Los Angeles County is better than purchasing life insurance, stocks, railway bonds or any other kind of bonds. Why? Because we are building the biggest water ditch in the world to supply domestic water. We have the biggest oil business in the world, the biggest orange business in the world and we are going to have the biggest and finest union depot ground in the world. And the city ought to issue bonds and buy all of the ground between Alameda street and the bluffs on the east side of the river and Seventh street and where the Main street bridge crosses the river, and furnish free depot grounds to every railroad that wants to come into Los Angeles. Ought to take all the extra ground and make beautiful parks, properly dredge and wall up the river and make a pleasure canal of the same, and the surplus of this ground, after furnishing all terminal facilities, could be rented out for enough to pay for the property in 25 years with all improvements made. This would only aid in making us the most beautiful and largest city in the world. This canal could be connected with the harbor that is going to be built from San Pedro to within seven miles of the corner of Temple and Spring streets and from Venice to within six miles of the same place.

Already London, New York and Chicago are getting jealous of us. People are coming here with burros, mules, horses, steamships, railways and automobiles, and none of them are fast enough. They will come in airships. You cannot keep them away.

Buy! Buy!! Buy!!!

When a few of the old-time knockers go up in smoke, we will be able to build and maintain the tallest buildings, the finest boulevards, the finest parks and the greatest amusement places; the biggest churches and playhouses in the world. Beautiful homes will be built from Redlands to the sea, including all of the south side of Mount Wilson, and from San Diego to Santa Monica, and San Diego will be annexed to Los Angeles by that time, with all the intervening property. They will HAVE to be annexed to get the surplus water which we own, and they cannot get elsewhere. Railways and steamships will get their material here and their offices and main factories will be established here. We will have the largest banks and factories, etc., and the world will come here to sell her products. We will dictate whether government will go to war or not. All foreign countries will pay tribute to us. We will have the biggest, richest men, the sweetest and prettiest women and the finest children and the biggest liars outside of New York. We will fix the standards of education and the standards of railway and bank management for the whole world.

Now, why not all of this? With all of the improvements we have made and with climate unequaled anywhere, with the biggest bunch of optimists on earth, why shouldn't we have percentage of gain in the next 40 years, the same as the last 40 years. There is no question but we will have ten million inhabitants in the next 40 years.

IS BRIAND SOCIALIST.

It was in the Brisson Cabinet in 1898 that he first made his appearance as Minister of Foreign Affairs. When he took office, France did not have a friend in Europe. He inherited from his predecessor the dangerous Fashoda affair with England, which threatened to lead to war between the two countries. Thanks to the common sense of Delcasse, the incident was amicably settled, and the new Minister entered upon the most brilliant conduct of the Foreign Office in recent years. Probably his two greatest achievements were the entente cordiale with England and the alliance with Russia. The former secured the much desired equilibrium of power in Europe, and did much to insure the peace of this part of the world, while the latter served one good purpose in preserving the peace of Europe during the Russo-Japanese War, and confining that conflict to the two powers in the Far East.

Then came the dramatic events of 1905, when Germany and France were on the brink of war, and Rouvier, fearful of the condition of the French army, retired before the menacing mailed fist and shining armor of the War Lord of the North. And on the day that Delcasse resigned, Von Bulow, Germany's Chancellor, was created a Prince by the delighted Kaiser.

Since then, although Delcasse has not been in charge at the Quai d'Orsay, he has been the ruling spirit in the foreign affairs of France. The policies that became identified with his name have been carried on by his successors. He entered the Caillaux Ministry as Minister of the Navy, when France afloat was in a scandalous condition. In the short time he was there he accomplished a miracle, initiated the new spirit among the personnel and officials, and today the French fleet has entered upon a new lease of life, ready, despite lack of ships and men, to give a splendid account of itself in case of a clash with a stronger neighbor.

Either of these two men stand a chance of being the next Prime Minister of France. But the man who on all sides is being talked of as the successor of Poincare is Aristide Briand, the man who, instead of Delcasse, succeeded Clemenceau as Prime Minister. He is about 50, and although he did not enter the Chamber of Deputies until ten years ago, he was, when he reached office in 1909, one of the youngest Prime Ministers of France on record.

In his younger days he was known as a Socialist, and he still calls himself one, although the rank and file of the movement call him a traitor to the cause. Time has certainly watered the red wine of his views, and Clemenceau, one of his staunchest friends and admirers, is authority for the statement that he is one of the most conservative men in French public life. "Indeed," said Clemenceau on one occasion, after a meeting of the Cabinet, of which Briand was Minister of Justice, "Aristide always finds our decisions too radical."

BRIAND'S FIRST LEAP.

Briand first came into real prominence when he drafted the separation bill, which cut the tie that bound State and Church together in France. When Clemenceau fell and Briand took office there was a momentary sensation in France, because of his supposed socialistic tendencies. But Briand soon demonstrated that as Prime Minister he was quite a different person from the Briand, who as a young man, attended Socialist meetings and wrote Socialist articles for extremist newspapers.

His great opportunity came when an attempt was made to call a general strike in France, and tie up the industries of the entire country. The Syndicalists soon discovered that they had to deal with a strong man, a man who would not hesitate to use every weapon in his power to save the country from the calamity and ruin of a general strike. The military was called out all over the country, and and tied up the various systems, he summoned them to the colors as reservists, and compelled them to do the work as soldiers that they would not do as workmen. He thus broke the back of the great strike, and put a crimp in the plans of the Syndicalists to secure for themselves the control of the French government, but he set in motion a number of small conspiracies in political circles that ultimately caused him, out of sheer disgust, to resign office.

When the present Ministry was formed, Briand was one of the "Talents" called to office to deal with the critical situation. Poincare, the Prime Minister, is said to have urged Briand's selection to the highest post in place of himself, and when, finally, he did accept, it was only on the understanding that Briand be "Deputy" Premier, which position he now holds.

Invest Where Capital Invests for Profit

When you consider the purchase of a Little Acre Farm in EL SEGUNDO you are face to face with an opportunity to own a piece of ground that you may later decide to plat into city lots.

Do you realize what that means—dividing acreage into city lots? Of course you do! It means BIG PROFITS. That is one of the reasons why our sales at EL SEGUNDO are so enormous. Another reason is the fact that already the great Standard Oil Refineries at EL SEGUNDO employ a large number of men on good salaries.

Capital, as represented by other large manufacturing institutions, is investigating the unusual advantages of locating here.

An independent income from a little farm of your own is a mighty fine thing—especially when you reflect that the very ground on which your garden, chickens and fruit trees grow is becoming more and more valuable each day.

EL SEGUNDO is already on the map—and a very live place it is, with its good hotels, substantial bank, weekly newspaper, row upon row of well constructed business buildings, houses in course of construction and commercial and welfare clubs in the formation.

Seven months old. That's all! Is not GROWTH like this an argument that appeals to your shrewdness? It is a wise investor who can grasp the significance of advantages such as are offered at EL SEGUNDO—especially when the Opportunity calls for only $10 down and $10 a month.

We will be glad to show you these acres close to town, and also town lots for only $350 up. The same easy terms prevail throughout. Here is a REAL Main Chance you should not let pass by.

UNCOVER PLOT TO BURN CITY.

San Diego Menaced by Vagrant "Dynamite Squad."

Water Mains Guarded by Vigilant Police Officers.

Description of Seven Anarchists in Official Hands.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.

SAN DIEGO, April 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the past three nights every vulnerable point in the city water system has been under the guard of city employees to prevent what the police say they have reason to believe is a carefully laid plot of anarchists to blow up the mains and cut off the entire water supply and thus fire the city afire.

The information that the plot was to be carried out was conveyed to Chief of Police Wilson by government officials together with a description of seven "reds" constituting the "dynamite brigade" which it is charged has been selected to do the dastardly work.

So startling were the plans of the conspirators to destroy the city which has stood for law and order and the American flag that the police have made every effort to keep the facts from the public.

Councilman H. R. Fay superintendent of the water department has been directing the work of guarding the reservoirs. He has been on duty constantly since the first news was received. It is known that the added precaution was taken this morning of establishing day patrol at all the reservoirs.

The police have a description of the seven men constituting the "dynamite brigade" as it is said. This arrived came here from Los Angeles only this week. They were at once placed under surveillance and their movements closely watched until Wednesday night when they succeeded in eluding the detectives and have since kept out of sight. This is what caused the guard to be established at the reservoirs.

Orders were issued for the police to arrest all suspects found in the city.

A COSTLY LESSON.

Significant Remark Attributed to the Head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

[New York Tribune:] The grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is reported as saying that "the people need an object lesson" in the form of a great railroad strike to teach them the necessity of higher freight rates in order that the railroads may pay higher wages. It may be that higher wages should be paid, and it may be that the railroads cannot afford to pay them unless there is an increase in freight rates—which is equivalent to saying that the public must pay the additional wages of the engineers and other employees of the railroads. These are pertinent questions. The present point of interest is whether a strike should be the means of preying upon the public, the government or whatever power may be centered.

They have been having a strike as an object lesson in Great Britain. Between three and four million persons were out of work and millions more of dollars because of their idleness. Most of the strikers were non-unionists and therefore received no strike pay, while those who do belong to organizations exhausted the funds which it had taken the unions years to accumulate. Tens of thousands of persons were dependent on charity for food. Some actually died of starvation. The rate of infant mortality rose to an appalling figure. In Manchester it is from eighty-four to one in the thousand, and the physicians and health officers say that this is directly due to the inability of parents to procure proper food because of the strike. Incidentally the Labor party has suffered a split over the matter which will cripple its influence and efficiency for years to come.

So much for the cost of an object lesson there. We have an intimation of what it would mean here, given to us by the same man who declares that "the people need it." "A strike," he says, "would paralyze the industries of this country. Freight could not be shipped, passengers could not be transported; New York will not get a pound of food at the end of a week." That is his forecast of the effects of the proposed strike, which the people need" as an object lesson. It is probably not overdrawn. It is safe to say that so costly a lesson is necessary in order to teach the people of the United States simple common sense and justice seems to be extravagant. Charles Lamb told of a colony of Chinamen who burned down a house whenever they wanted roast pig, but we cannot believe that the people of America are so blind and perverse that they must suffer an appalling national calamity to be forced upon them in order to teach them the solution of a business problem which a dozen well-informed and reasonable men sitting around a table should be able to dispose of in a few hours with equity and satisfaction.

A Course in Chores.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press:] A petition has been presented to the school board asking that boys be taught how to make useful articles for the home in their manual training courses. The clubwomen wish to have their boys learn how to make screens, repair broken windows, chairs, put on protectors on doors and the like. And think that the manual training classes in the public schools may be devoted to instruction along these lines than to fancy woodworking and cabinetmaking. It is urged that the boys may as well be acquiring knowledge which they can put to practical use in their own homes. There are dozens of ways in which they can help their mothers in doing the repairing around the house, such as fixing screens and putting in window sills. This would save many small bills for professional work.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

AS IF THE National Railway of Mexico had not trouble enough with the rapidly recurring revolutions and insurrections in that much disturbed country it is now threatened with a strike of its locomotive engineers. Many of them are Americans and they want an abrogation of the rules providing that all service orders be printed in Spanish. Others want a three years' contract.

It begins to look as if the American coal strike may be settled as a result of the conference at Philadelphia on April 16, between the miners and mine owners. The owners modified their refusal to consider the demands made by the United Mine Workers and, says the Sun of New York, offered to submit all differences to the Anthracite Strike Commission, appointed in 1902, for arbitration. Also there seems to be a disposition to grant a 10 per cent. wage increase if the demand for industrial slavery—recognition of the union—is withdrawn.

The strike of 1911 cost union labor for money paid out as "cost of strikes" almost five millions of dollars ($4,582,852.) as shown in the Gompers and Company report. No less than seventy-four trades contributed to this great "money-out-of-pocket-loss," the chief sufferers among which were (besides the millions of lost wages:)

United Mine Workers, coal	$1,947,588
Machinists	296,900
Molders	229,745
Ladies' garment workers	200,000
Carpenters	249,177
Western Federation of Miners	228,522
Cigar makers	221,944
Men's garment workers	214,2[illegible]
Boilermakers	159,663
Printing pressmen	91,000
Brewery workmen	77,611
Granite cutters	74,436
Plumbers	56,318
Typographical	45,721

From the union labor standpoint of today, was the game worth the candle? Gompers and Company contributed only $4192.

Nearly all the municipal laborers of Montclair, N. J., are on strike for more pay and less work. That is just what added a million dollars to the taxpayers' burden in Milwaukee last year, under the now extinguished Socialist city government. There it was more and too many municipal employees and more pay for each worker, no matter how lazy or incompetent. Socialist labor loves to fatten at the public crib. Los Angeles escaped that destructive embargo by its decisive action against Job Harriman and Company, on December 5 last. Late advices (up to April 16,) indicate that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have voted for a strike for more pay on fifty eastern steam railroads. Their demand is outrageous—$7,289,000 a year more.

Stonecutters' helpers in Albany, N. Y., are out on strike for a raise from $2.50 to $3 a day, following an increase to the stonecutters of from $4 to $4.50 a day. It would seem as if the present $2.50 a day is pretty good pay for unskilled labor. As the contractors are reconstructing the Capitol at Albany on a percentage basis, it is up to the Capitol trustees to refuse to grant the demand. It was that body which gave the stonecutters 50 cents a day more.

Even though Easter Monday, April 8, was a public holiday in Great Britain (about the most popular public holiday of the year,) the British coal miners rushed back to work, following the really futile "settlement" of their recent disastrous strike. Workmen whose families had been reduced to dire want during the long period of idleness were glad of the opportunity to work, holiday or no holiday. The whirr of machinery was again heard in the land and it was music to the country's ears, particularly the always chief strike sufferers, the women and children. The strike cost the miners in lost wages and spent savings, fully $40,000,000. Others thrown out of work lost $40,000,000 more. The non-production of coal and the suspension of other trades cost a further loss of $120,000,000. Adding only $20,000,000 for minor collateral losses, makes up a total of $200,000,000 as the cost of five weeks' strike. This $40,000,000 average cost was a fearful bill to pay for no result other than legal recognition of the principle of a minimum wage without fixing the minimum wage. That futile result is why many miners, particularly in South Wales, are still holding out. The grievances of the surface men at the mines have not been settled in any way. All the miners now have to fight with the local district boards to get their minimum wage fixed, district by district, subject to local conditions in each case. The strike decreased the funds of the unions by $7,139,000 and the $2,541,250 remaining is in the hands of unions belonging to only one or two districts. Some mine operators made big money out of the strike by selling huge stocks of coal to the government at enchanted prices. The ship owners, too, have made money carrying foreign coal, as the Transport Union did not succeed in preventing imports, as threatened. In the meantime the strikers and others lost their wages and their union reserve funds. That is almost always the case with strikers. Then nion funds remaining consist mainly of securities which cannot now be sold except at a loss. Between the vaunted statutory minimum wage, to be fixed by the valueless district councils, the miners will not really reap any benefit from their ill-advised strike.

Advices indicate that if the eastern locomotive engineers go out on strike the firemen may not go with them as many firemen are capable and anxious to become engineers. This may be the opportunity for them to realise their ambition. Many members of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers do not belong to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and are therefore free to serve if the latter organization decides to call a strike of its members on the fifty eastern roads.

The pottery workers suffered the most in the British coal strike for want of fuel. Fifty thousand of them were thrown out of work. The suffering in Arnold Bennett's "Five Towns" was excessive. The pottery owners are planning to fix their furnaces for the use of oil as fuel in the future. Many pottery workers refrained from receiving municipal relief as by doing so they, under English law, would disfranchise themselves. Paupers cannot vote in England.

The seamen's strike is threatened for Liverpool, because of the refusal of bail for Tom Mann, the seditious English socialist leader and writer. He tried to incite the soldiers to uniting—so the charge says.

It is reliably calculated that the American coal miners on strike are losing $3,000,000 a day in wages. At that rate their loss from March 30 to April 20 (Sundays excepted,) was $54,000,000.

Another railway strike is not likely in Great Britain for some time. J. H. Thomas, M. P., organizing secretary of the British Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants (what labor union here would stand the use of "servants" in its name,) says that his union has 70,000 men out of work whose relief is costing from $125,000 to $150,000 a week, and that they will be out of work for weeks yet.

Most of us remember the American hard-coal strike of 1902, which caused a loss of $100,000,000 and, of which the strikers lost (as usual) $25,000,000 in wages and $1,500,000 in relief pay. Do they want such a loss again?

The socialist labaorites of New York have publicly in meeting denounced William D. Haywood, the union-labor anarchist, for raising the red flag of anarchy in the strikes at Lawrence and Passaic. Haywood leads the Industrial Workers (?) of the World, and is advising the striking weavers to smash ballot boxes, to slash warps and to break up mill machinery. In other words, to destroy their own means of living. These socialists have the decency to refuse to parade the children of Passaic strikers in New York. Haywood is keeping under cover in Passaic because orders are out to arrest him on sight for unlawful agitation, which is the same as anarchy. The Passaic strikers refused a 5 to 10 per cent. raise, demanding 15 to 25 per cent., though a good many Passaic workers are still workless. All the mills are guarded, as also are the workers.

A strike is threatened in the J. and P. Coats Company's five thread mills at Pawtucket, R. I. About 1000 employees demand 10 per cent. more wages.

Strike conditions at Lowell, Mass., are not acute yet, though "musical picketing" has begun, drums and bugles being used.

Soldiers are still enforcing law and order in the textiles strike at York Mills, N. Y.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

During the progress of the textile strike at Lawrence, Mass., a lot of balderdash was spoken and written about "poverty wages," and "distressful living conditions" of the workers there and in other New England textile towns. It was asserted that the wages of male workers only amounted to $6 a week average, while official and unbiased investigation proved the wage average (counting in all the women, boys and girls) exceeded $9 a week, some families of three earning together $18 a week. If this were not the case how came it that the workers of Lawrence were able to buy $727,032 (postmaster's figures) worth of foreign money orders in the five fiscal years, 1907 to 1911, inclusive, as follows:

1907	$153,189
1908	146,709
1909	136,716
1910	161,907
1911	128,471
Total	$727,002
Postal savings deposit, February 12	11,108

The Rev. Clark Carter, city missionary in Lawrence, a man closer in touch with the poor in that city than any other man there, recently said (reports the Protectionist of Boston:)

"The best proof that wages in Lawrence are not as low as stated is that nearly every worker manages to save. I remember a Polander telling me once of his own people. 'Never give relief to a Polander who has been two years in Lawrence, because in two years' time every Polander has money laid by.'"

All of the nationalities represented in Lawrence have shown signs of thrift and there is ample evidence that they have been able to lay by considerable savings. Note the position of the three savings banks in that city as reported by them for 1911:

Total deposits	$15,494,720
Number of depositors	46,821
Average amount of account	$423

The average savings bank account for the entire State of Massachusetts in 1911 was $375, so Lawrence, with almost 47,000 savings-bank accounts, averaging $423 each in a city of 86,000 population, makes a showing $48 per account better than the average for the entire State of Massachusetts, which State is only outranked by the States of New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

Then note the five years' foreign-money-order buying and postal-savings-bank deposits of New England's other textile towns, in partial refutation of the false claim that textile wages there are "starvation wages." It's a queer kind of "starvation" which has money to send as a gift to less fortunate relatives abroad. And note the steady yearly stream thereof:

SUMMARY.

The foregoing official tabulation shows that these eight textile towns alone bought $14,064,033 worth of foreign money orders in the five years, 1907 to 1911, out of their (alleged but not proven) "poverty wages," as follows:

Boston	$10,600,500
Springfield	874,615
Worcester	784,853
Lawrence	727,032
Fall River	621,325
Lowell	529,765
Total in five years	$14,064,033

Adding for some of the smaller New England textile towns the foreign money orders bought in the five years, it could easily be proven that out of their (alleged) "poverty wages" the New England textile workers sent "home" $3,000,000 each of the five years. Not $3,000,000 a year put in the regular savings banks (where they have probably $200,000,000 now,) nor in the postal savings banks, where their "poverty wages" deposits are steadily increasing, but money sent out of the country to help their kith and kin in several of the countries of Europe and in Canada.

Besides all these savings-bank deposits, and these large remittances abroad, a great many of New England's textile workers own their own homes, wholly or partially paid for, worth millions of dollars in the aggregate, all of which came out of the (alleged) "poverty wages."

Surely enough evidence is adduced in the foregoing to put a quietus on that maliciously false cry.

With wages not more than half what they are here and salaries equally disproportionate.

You can compare the American wages or salary workers' lot with that of wages or salary workers in any other country on the face of the globe and it is, indeed, a happy one. Were it not so, why do hundreds of thousands of foreign workers flock to our shores yearly? Far too many of them our wage workers often think, but this is a free country and we have no moral right to shut our gates to the deserving workers of any land.

Wage Increases.

The wage increases throughout New England will aggregate $10,000,000 a year, of which the woolen operatives get $5,000,000, and the cotton operatives $5,000,000. If all the mills join 275,000 operatives will share in the raise. But the talk about the previous wages being "poverty wages" is all rot.

Paper-Making Wages Compared.

	Average, per hour.
Eastern States	24.43 cents
Canada	15.16 cents
Advantages to Canada paper factories	8.27 cents

Yet, we are letting in Canadian paper free of duty. Why not stop it for the benefit of American paper factories and American paper factory wage-earners?

Cost of Living Compared.

By percentages of cost of living to similar incomes, Australian official inquiry shows the following to hold:

	Per cent. of Income.
Housing.
United States	17.6
Germany	14.96
Australia	13.76
Food.
United States	36.46
Germany	39.33
Australia	34.39
Fuel and light.
United States	5.95
Australia	3.46
Germany	3.13
Clothing.
United States	15.73
Germany	14.91
Australia	12.72
Other expenditures.
Australia	40.40
Germany	30.76
United States	32.46

Considering the much higher rates of wages prevalent in the United States than in either Germany or Australia, the living condition outlined here is quite favorable to us.

Railroad Employees' Wages.

[Albany (N. Y.) Evening Journal:] In a pamphlet published by the Bureau of Railway Economics at Washington, the effect of recent wage advances upon railway employees' compensation in the year ended June 30, 1911, is set forth in detail.

Net revenue declined $40,988,539, while the wage increase mounted up to nearly $50,000,000.

First National Bank, Dinuba.

A grain farm near Dinuba, now being sold as "Al" orange land.

A subterranean lake of water underlies the Dinuba District.

A fertile and growing section of the San Joaquin Valley.

THE EYES of Southern Californians interested in the citrus business are turned upon the San Joaquin Valley. During the last five years a wonderful development has been going on along the western slope of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Thousands of people have settled in this rich new country and have fearlessly invested in the citrus business.

Only fifteen years ago an orange grove in the eastern foothills of the San Joaquin was a novelty and an experiment. Today one may travel along those same foothills and see planted thousands of acres of citrus stock. The eastern San Joaquin foothills have evolved into the largest citrus belt in our State and the industry is but yet in its infancy.

It does not take a visionary mind to picture in this country the embryo of the largest citrus belt in the world. The industry has to grow and must grow rapidly. This last year when California made her largest shipment of citrus fruits to the East two record prices were paid for navel and valencia oranges. They were the largest prices ever experienced and show beyond a doubt that the demand for the product is growing much more rapidly than the supply.

The San Joaquin Valley of California affords the largest area of available land for the growth of the citrus industry. People who are looking for citrus lands to develop are turning there and this is the reason for the rapid colonization and improvement of the valley.

Up in the big San Joaquin is a growing, prosperous community in which has sprung up the town of Dinuba. Extending from the town north and east to the foothills of the Sierras there stretches a large level area, many thousands of acres in extent, which is typical for citrus culture.

ADVANTAGES.

The Dinuba district has centered within its territory every attribute, essential to the successful culture of citrus stock.

In the first place the entire citrus section of the San Joaquin is devoid of that damaging pest so dreaded by the orange growers in many places and known as the "black scale." Repeated experiments have proved beyond a doubt that the scale will not exist in this valley. It has been found that it thrives best in places near the sea coast or other large bodies of water around which the atmosphere contains much humidity. The "black scale" cannot survive the dry, warm air of the San Joaquin and owing to this fact the costly remedy, fumigation, is entirely unnecessary.

The next great fact of importance to the rancher is that a very early navel orange is produced in this locality. Crops are picked here from two weeks to two months earlier than in other parts of the State and this is also an additional source of revenue. Premium prices are obtained every year for early fruit and these prices are always received by the orange producers of the San Joaquin Valley.

Not only does the early ripening of the navel oranges afford the producer more money than a later crop would, but the early ripening is the best assurance of a large and heavy crop as the fruit is generally all picked off the trees before the cold weather arrives. During the exceptionally cold spell experienced over the entire State last winter, the citrus fruit crops of the San Joaquin bearly suffered a loss of 2 per cent. due to the fact that nearly all the fruit was packed and in transit to the East when the frost spell fell upon the country.

When a man fully appreciates the real value of these advantages to the industry it becomes his immediate conclusion that land in a country affording these immense opportunities must be selling at a prohibitory price. Yet this is not so. Today at the prices at which land is selling in the Dinuba district a man may secure the very best of soil, the most protected locations with water from ditches or shallow wells and all the special advantages of early ripening fruit, etc., for less than the value of alfalfa or deciduous fruit lands.

To the north and east of the town of Dinuba may be found some of the most excellent soil and water-bearing lands in this State, selling at this time at from $125 to $175 an acre and on exceptionally long terms. One company, which has subdivided some 3000 acres in twenty-acre tracts, is selling at the above prices per acre and on terms of one-sixth down and the balance in six years at 6 per cent. interest.

LOCATION.

Dinuba is in the northeastern part of Tulare county, about 266 miles from Los Angeles, and approximately the same distance from San Francisco. The Southern Pacific Railway passes through the heart of the town, while the Santa Fe has a station called Dinuba about one and a half miles from the business section.

A new electric railroad, known as the Tidewater and Southern, is rapidly pushing its lines from Stockton to Fresno, and will then pass through the Dinuba district. Fourteen miles of their line are already completed, but it cannot be definitely stated just how soon the tracks will be laid through the Dinuba country. This railroad company is a $5,000,000 corporation, the stockholders of which are principally San Joaquin Valley ranchers and business men. The completion of this electric car service through Dinuba will open up large sections of new lands, and will give a great impetus to business everywhere.

Dinuba is about eight miles west of the main chain of foothills which skirt the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevadas. Towering immediately above these foothills are the majestic mountains, snow-covered for the best portion of the year.

Dinuba is thirty miles south of Fresno, forty miles north of Porterville, and is twenty miles from Visalia, the county seat.

CITY OF DINUBA.

Dinuba is a compact little city and impressively neat, clean and substantial. It is incorporated as a city of the sixth class under the State laws, and has a population of approximately 1500 congenial and progressive people. There are several blocks of brick, concrete and frame store buildings. The city lies at a general elevation of 300 feet above sea level, and is in a healthy, well-drained locality.

Four years ago the citizens voted the municipality "dry," and the ban was placed on all saloons. From that time on the city has built up rapidly and substantially, and today stands as a model home town, with excellent educational, religious and moral environments, which have proved assets of permanent progress for the community. The municipal tax rate is $1.25.

The San Joaquin Light and Power Company supplies the electric current for the street lighting system of the town and also for domestic illumination and power purposes at very reasonable rates.

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company has a network of telephone lines running through the town and into the ranching district for miles in every direction.

A gas company is in a state of organization. Already a canvass of the city has been made to secure the names of residents who will agree to use gas if delivered to them before March 1, 1913. A rate of not more than $1.50 per 1000 cubic feet is promised the consumer.

The Dinuba city water works is a municipal enterprise. In the northern part of the city a 270-foot well has been sunk. The well has a 12-inch casing and is pumped by centrifugal pumps, electrically operated. A 60,000-gallon tank elevated seventy feet above the ground stores the water and provides a thirty-five-pound constant pressure. A pressure of eighty-five pounds to the square inch can be maintained in case of fire. The plant, which has an approximate valuation of $20,000, has been in operation over two years, and is sufficiently large to supply a population of 5000 people. The town's domestic water rate is $1.50 for ordinary family use.

A feature of the municipal water system is that the water mains are principally laid in the alleys instead of in the streets. This prevents the tearing up of the roadways and is just as convenient for the consumer.

There are forty-two fire hydrants in the town and a good volunteer fire department is maintained.

Dinuba has a large mileage of graded and improved streets. Throughout the business and residential sections these streets are bordered on both sides with concrete sidewalks. The town site is located on level land, and the good roads, devoid of grades, make teaming very easy.

There are eight packing-houses at Dinuba, where the rancher can bring his fruits and receive either cash for his product or share with the shipper a chance to find a good market with good prices. Many of the ranchers have formed associations and pack their own fruit independently.

BUSINESS.

One of the most definite indications of the prosperity of a country is the condition of its banking institutions. The success of the town's banks is the direct measured success of the people living in the district.

The Dinuba banks have been doing a wonderful business—a business that for the size of the territory and population they represent, and for the age of the banking institutions themselves, would give them a large marginal lead over many banking companies located in the metropolitan cities.

It was in February, 1902, that several of the leading business men organized the Bank of Dinuba, with a capitalization of $25,000. The institution started with a leap and steadily grew until in May, 1908, it was reorganized as a national bank. In 1910 the directors of the First National Bank commenced the erection of a modern bank building, and this edifice now ornaments the town, standing on the corner of the principal intersecting streets. Within the next two months the capitalization of the bank will be increased to $50,000.

In 1910 the deposits of this bank were $222,442, which jumped to $294,527 in 1911 but when in 1912 the deposits soared to $514,593 the community was astounded at their own wealth. The First National Bank of Dinuba has loans outstanding to the amount of $266,339. Its surplus and undivided profits are $23,979 and

Vacant business lots in the city of Dinuba command a price of from $60 to $125 per front foot. Residence lots 50 by 150 feet on graded streets with water and electricity delivered to the property sell from $225 to $400 each. These prices are for lots in subdivisions just outside the incorporated city limits. Residence lots inside the incorporated city limits may be had from $275 up.

SCHOOLS AND SOCIETY.

One of the features in the development of the San Joaquin Valley which greatly surprises the visitor, is the excellent schooling facilities afforded by the smaller towns.
Dinuba had a fine High School building which was accidentally destroyed by fire December 24, 1911, during the Christmas vacation. Almost before the embers had cooled the enterprising townspeople definitely started the movement to rebuild the school. There had been some talk of a new building, however, even before the old school was destroyed.
When the new term opened after the Christmas vacation, the "school-less" students resorted to an abandoned grammar school building once owned by the county and here they daily ply their tasks at the present time while awaiting the erection of the new, bigger and grander High School structure.
February 21 last, the Dinuba High School District voted bonds in the sum of $40,000 for the erection of the new educational edifice. This, it is hoped, will be completed by the opening of the fall term during the present year. It is planned to make the building a model High School in every respect. It will contain all such features as manual training shops, domestic science kitchens, typewriting and stenography rooms, chemistry and physics laboratories, etc.
The present High School enrollment numbers 120 students and seven teachers. The school is on the accredited list of the State universities.
Dinuba is fortunate in having an exceptionally able man presiding over the local High School work in the person of A. M. Simons. Mr. Simons is a graduate of the University of Illinois. He is president of the Tulare County Board of Education and president of the central section of the California Teachers' Association.
The $28,000 Dinuba grammar school is a nine-room structure situated on a seven-acre piece of ground. The 420 pupils enrolled in this school are taught by twelve competent teachers.
Owing to the rapid increase of the town's population a new primary school will, of necessity, have to be constructed during the coming year.
At this time the primary tots are taught in the grammar school.
There are a number of smaller grammar and primary schools scattered throughout the ranching district surrounding the town.

CHURCHES.

All leading church denominations are represented in Dinuba and most of them have erected church buildings. Fraternal orders and many civic and social organizations are doing good work.
There are two newspapers which are issued twice a week. These organs are valuable adjuncts to the community, spreading local information and advertising quickly and effectively and being dominant factors in the upbuilding of the country.
Dinuba has a comfortable and convenient reading-room located in a building a little apart from the business center. This is a station of the County Circulating Library. Here may be found about 400 volumes of fiction and reference books, besides a large number of magazines and newspapers. The reading-room is provided with tables and chairs and a librarian in constant attendance. The reading-room is well patronized by the towns folk and has about 400 registered borrowers.

GENERAL FARMING.

Although the citrus business is a new pursuit in the Dinuba district the land has long been producing quantities of deciduous fruits. Many varieties of grapes are raised. Some are converted into wine, some shipped as grapes and others dried for raisins. Figs and olives are grown extensively and pay well. Alfalfa is the main forage crop and pays from $12 to $15 a ton, from seven to nine tons to the acre being produced a year without an irrigation in most instances.
One of the best paying crops is watermelons. Watermelons grow in this section's soil like weeds and many tons to the acre, from twenty-five to thirty pounds in weight, being produced.
Apricots and peaches are leading crops. These fruits are used for table use and are also

[illegible] any other kind of vegetation

The water supply of the Dinuba district is obtained from three sources. The first source of irrigating water is the annual rainfall. Many of the alfalfa growers, some of the deciduous fruit growers and all of the grain farmers depend entirely upon the rains to secure their crops. The average rainfall is twelve inches.

The second source of water is from the mountain snows. Over 130,000 acres of valuable soil through this country is under a great irrigating ditch system. The territory traversed by these ditches is called the Alta irrigating district. All property owners in this district are assessed per acre according to property valuation and the revenue thus derived goes to the maintenance of this immense ditch system. The average cost to the land owner is less than 50 cents per acre.

The water for this system is taken from the Kings River. The Kings River has its source in the high Sierras and the continual melting snows in that region feed the river the year round.

The third source of water supply is from wells. The first water strata through a large portion of the Dinuba district is found at less than ten feet below the surface. Thus established alfalfa roots or grape or peach roots are generally sub-irrigated and if sufficient rainfall is experienced to moisten the surface of the soil, crops are perfectly and naturally irrigated.

Generally at a depth of sixty to ninety feet, pure fresh water is found in sufficient quantity to supply the farmer's domestic needs. Some of these domestic wells are also irrigating as much as ten acres of ground besides supplying water for the household.

The average irrigating well, however, in this country will range between ninety and 100 feet in depth. The pumping is principally done by centrifugal pumps operated by both electric motors and gas engines. Hardly a well of these depths has a lift of over twenty feet. The average irrigating pumping plant here is installed at a price from between $300 and $500.

STATISTICS.

Watermelons are the first crop to ripen for market. This crop is ready about the middle of June. Last year Dinuba shipped 350 cars of melons in six weeks, the shipment principally being consigned to Oregon and Washington. Monson station on the Southern Pacific, which is a few miles south of Dinuba, shipped 200 cars. Dinuba station, on the Santa Fe shipped 50 cars.

E. C. Carlyle bought twenty acres of land near Dinuba about four years ago, for $40 per acre. The first season he had the land he planted it to watermelons and his crop netted him $160 an acre, thereby paying for the land and giving sufficient money to pay his living expenses for the remainder of the year.

On an average the melon growers produce from thirty-three to thirty-five tons to the acre. One man netted $3100 on twenty acres planted in melons. Another secured the remarkable crop of seventeen tons to one and a half acres, in one picking, which averaged $8 per ton. Melons grow exceptionally large here, many weighing as much as fifty to seventy-five pounds. The market season lasts about one month and the melons raised after that are disposed of as stock feed.

Following the melon crop the table grapes are ready for marketing. After the shipment of table grapes the balance of the crop is dried and shipped as raisins. The entire season lasts from July to late October. Last year 150 cars of table grapes and about 100 cars of raisins were shipped from Dinuba.

Sultanas, Muscats and Thompson seedless grapes, when dried, net the average grower $150 to $175 per acre. Emperors and Malagas are the table grapes. It costs from $12 to $15 an acre to cultivate, irrigate, prune and care generally for a vineyard in this section. In 1911 one man cleared $1100 from ten acres of Muscats, while a neighbor cleared $1600 from ten acres of Sultanas. About two and two and a half tons of raisins are generally derived. During 1911 the average prices obtained by the raisin growers were 4 cents a pound for Muscats, 2 cents for Sultanas, 5½ cents for Thompsons. Four-year-old grapevines have produced as much as $300 per acre with average market prices.

The peach growers will average better than $100 per acre profit, taking all conditions into consideration. One man raised fourteen and one-half tons of peaches on nine acres in 1910, which sold for 8 cents per pound. Another cleared $350 per acre on a ten-acre ranch. The average price of $150 per ton is generally received for dried peaches.

Milch cows net the stockmen in this country from $6 to $7 per head every month in the year. Over fifty cars of hogs and cattle were shipped from Dinuba during 1911.

Bailed alfalfa sells from $8 to $20 a ton and is always in demand.

The Asiatic and Calymerna figs are the leading varieties grown. With forty-eight trees forming a border around an orchard one rancher received $500 gross for the crop.

Wheat and barley produce from twelve to twenty-four sacks to the acre.

From October on through December the orange crop is packed. Thus from the early part of June until the beginning of the next spring the farmers in the Dinuba district are continually shipping one or the other of their products.

NEEDS.

The Dinuba district produces large quantities of deciduous fruits and at the present time most of the crop is being canned at Visalia. It is generally conceeded that two-thirds of the fruit crop canned at Visalia is shipped in from Dinuba. In order to save this leak of money from the town it has been suggested that a cannery be constructed at Dinuba. This would save the ranchers' expense of shipping to Visalia and would prevent the loss of time occasioned in transportation as well as adding to Dinuba a business which would employ several hundred local people.

Many of the business men consider that an up-to-date foundry would find a good field for operation and now that the orange industry is growing to such a large scale a cement irrigating pipe construction company is also needed.

A properly managed second-hand store would pay well. There is no business of this nature at present in Dinuba.

A small ice plant has also been suggested and it is thought it would be a successful enterprise if introduced.

Houses for rent and for sale are needed. This kind of an investment business would undoubtedly be profitable.

BOOSTERS.

The following property owners in the Dinuba district will be very glad to furnish the reader with additional facts of information regarding the country, or communications addressed to the secretary of the Dinuba Board of Trade will be courteously answered and literature mailed descriptive of the section:

SOUTHERN PROGRESS.

During the Past Thirty Years the Cotton Crop Has Been a Half More Than the World's Gold Production.

[Memphis News-Scimitar:] Those skilled in handling figures have been making some calculations of late that are most interesting. In all the world, it is estimated, $10,500,000,000 in gold and silver have been produced in the past thirty years. During the same period the cotton crop of the South has amounted to $15,500,000,000, or five billions of dollars more than the products of gold and silver combined in all the world. In 1830 the population of the Southern States amounted to 18,600,000, and in 1911 it had increased to 32,000,000, or 77 per cent. The South raised 5,757,000 bales of cotton in 1880 and 12,120,000 bales in 1911, or an increase of 115 per cent. The value of the cotton crop, with the seed, in 1880 was $325,000,000, and in 1911 it had enhanced in value to $1,030,000,000, or 217 per cent. In 1880 the South produced 793,000,000 bushels of corn, wheat and oats. In 1911 the aggregated crop was 1,274,000,000 bushels, or an increase of 61 per cent. In 1880 the number of hogs, cattle and sheep in the South amounted to 45,686,000, and in 1911 only 53,000,000, or an increase of 16 per cent. Flesh foodstuffs have not kept abreast of the times. Rather have they fallen behind them. This is strange, for no country in the world is better suited to cattle, sheep and hogs than this section. Perhaps the boys' corn clubs will solve the problem. When their corn is made it must be fed to something.

Offenses to the Eye.

[Providence Journal:] The effort which is to be made in New York to restrict or remove the huge and unsightly signs which disfigure the streets of the city by day and night, will be watched with interest elsewhere. It is believed that many of these violate existing ordinances and that others might be eliminated by proceeding against them as nuisances. Those that threaten life or shut out light and air ought to come easily within that category. The public is somewhat slower to recognize the fact that simple offenses to the eye may be proper objects of regulation; but with the increasing appreciation of civic beauty, this recognition is bound to come. It is futile to erect handsome buildings and lay out attractive parks if any one who chooses can mar the effect.

Germany Astonished.

[New York Tribune:] The officials of the imperial German treasury were astonished the other day when Capt. Niblack, the United States naval attache, walked in and informed them that he wished to pay $23 on behalf of the United States government.

He explained that a small German cruiser, the Condor, had called eight months ago at the Island of Guam, a United States possession, to coal. The coal was brought to the dock and paid for, but as the amount was more than the captain could stow, he left some of it behind, and apparently thought no more of the matter.

The American officials, however, carefully calculated the value of the coal left behind, and the money for it was remitted to the embassy in Berlin to be returned to the treasury.

Governor Couldn't Do It.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] "The queerest talk I ever had over the telephone," confided Myron T. Herrick, just before he left us, "was down in Columbus, when I had the honor of being the Governor of this State.

"I was about to retire for the night, when a local reporter rang me up. You must know that I had been reported dead that evening. I was in the best of health, as a matter of fact, but it was said that I had gone the way of all flesh. On this last call I answered the phone myself.

"'Mr. Herrick's residence?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Is he dead?'

"'No.'

"'Do you think he'll die tonight?'

"'I do not.'

"'Well, if he does, will you answer the phone and tell me?'

"'It won't be possible, in that case.'

"'It won't, eh? Well, get somebody on the line that can help me out—you are useless.'

"I acknowledged my limitation," continued our new Ambassador to France, "and sent the cook to see if she could do better."

Thumb That Made a Fortune.

[Harper's Weekly:] Dr. Metzger, who has just celebrated his seventieth anniversary in Saxony, has been retired from active life for many years owing to the fact that he became immensely wealthy long ago through the use of the wonderful thumb of his right hand. This thumb stands out at a right angle from the rest of his hand and cannot be bent back automatically. He soon found it of great use in massage, and when he became a specialist in intestinal disorders he was called as assistant to the greatest surgeons of Europe and brought relief to many illustrious patients. Almost all the sovereigns and reigning princes of Germany have had occasion to thank him. The Queen of Roumania sent for this doctor with the curious thumb when she had facial neuralgia, while the late King of Sweden once drove a beautiful span of horses over the border of his kingdom to consult the doctor and on returning left the horses as a token of gratitude to his preserver.

There was a time, early in his career, when the use of this curious thumb was looked upon as a form of charlatanism, but so well did Mr. Metzger establish his reputation that the medical profession accepted his thumb for what it was worth without trying to explain the phenomenon.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA HOME BUILDERS — $ THRIFT

The organization of this Company was to meet a need.

Despite the many eminently successful home building companies, this need was plain.

It was for an organization that would meet the views of many "home-building" and would-be "home-building" investors.

After months of preparation the plans were completed.

A remarkable demonstration of support and confidence followed the public announcements.

From twenty-two shareholders to nearly FOURTEEN HUNDRED SHAREHOLDERS since February 14th (nine weeks) is a wonderful showing.

The need has been met. What the investing public wanted is supplied.

It was only the size of the need that was underestimated.

Our growth has but just begun. Already subscriptions at 22½ cents are coming in fast.

Soon the price of shares will have to be advanced to twenty-five cents.

That means a premium of 25 per cent, and you understand dividends are always paid on the par value of shares and not on the premium, too.

This is the time to investigate and to buy.

We were only able to give a few days' notice of the last advance, and many were too late.

From all appearances this is going to happen again.

Better be among the first two thousand shareholders, and make 12½ per cent by saving it.

PUBLIC FUNDS IN THE BANKS.

RELATIONS BETWEEN TREASURY AND MONEY INSTITUTIONS.

Direction the "Money Trust" Inquiry May Take and Whether the Choice of Depositaries Has Been Influenced by Political Relationships—A Partisan Movement.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—[Special to the New York Journal of Commerce:] One of the topics to which the "money trust" inquiry now about to begin is expected to devote itself is the relationship between the Treasury Department and the banks of New York. The original resolutions which were intended by the Rules Committee to govern the inquiry specifically indicates this as one of the subjects to be investigated. Although there does not seem to be any intention of giving the subject the peculiar biased trend that was apparently intended in the original resolution, the topic itself is one that has been considered appropriate for investigation, both because of its support among the radicals and beause the general situation referred to has long been a matter of comment in Congress. It does not seem at all probable that any one institution will be singled out for attack, but rather that efforts will be made to cover the whole field of institutions that are affected by similar circumstances.

The suggestion that all officers of banks who have formerly been Treasury officers be summoned before the committee grows out of the belief on the part of many Congressmen that not a few Treasury officials in the past have shaped their course in such a way as to make themselves acceptable to banking institutions and thereby to assure themselves satisfactory appointments when their term of public office expired. At times there has appeared to be a considerable amount of warrant for this view. It has frequently happened that men who had little or no fitness that men appointments have been transferred directly from the Treasury to banking institutions. Some of them have succeeded in developing into capable bank officers, while others, after a more or less unsuccessful career, have gone back where they came from or have shifted into other business. But enough have remained in actual banking work to raise the constant critism in Congress that government officers were setting their course with a view to smoothing their own pathway in the future. This belief has also raised the question of relations between the banks and the Treasury at the present time. For a good while there has been constant complaint of the way in which two or three large institutions apparently managed to maintain a very close connection with the department, obtaining early information of what was going on there, and at times when special financial operations were in progress exercising a very decided influence upon the course adopted by the officers of the Treasury. It has never been found possible to sustain any charges of improper influence or illegitimate relationships between these banks and the Treasury, the nearest approach to anything of the sort having been found in Secretary Gage's sale of the old Customhouse building in New York. But criticism of a vague sort has continued. If an investigation showing that it is without foundation or indicating exactly on what basis, however slender, such charges rest can be carried through it will probably be a serviceable piece of work in quieting this kind of discussion for the future.

Closely connected with this matter of the relationship of the government and the banks is the question of public deposits in banks and the terms upon which such deposits have usually been made. In spite of the legislative acts of Congress requiring a distribution of deposits according to population and otherwise attempting to regulate the use of public funds, it is probably true that when the government has had anything to put into the banks it has been very largely guided by political favoritism. This was probably the case under the Shaw regime in the department when more than 1400 banks were designated as depositaries and funds were distributed among them in a way calculated to please the influential men of various sections. There was so much criticism on the subject at the time that even Treasury officers themselves were in some cases inclined to participate in it. The evil grew less after Secretary MacVeigh became head of the Treasury, although his time was still very much taken up with demands on the part of banks which wanted to get public funds. Mr. MacVeigh was not disposed to use the funds for political purposes and the pressure on him was relieved by the rapid decline of the surplus, which enabled him to withdraw all except a nominal deposit of $1000 from most of the banks in which funds had been left. The evil of bank favoritism has therefore been a good deal less within recent years and is not one that need excite special worry at present. It is, however, likely to recur at any time when the Treasury has a large sum of idle funds, and there are cases in which it exists even at present. If the committee which now contemplates looking into this proposition can exhibit the real truth about the subject, and suggest a remedy, it will have done another good piece of work.

The relation of this kind if investigation to the so-called money trust idea is seen in the fact that charges have been made concerning the alleged selection of government officers for places in banks because of their methods in making deposits or in selling bonds or in otherwise shaping governmental policies in a way that would please the larger banks. As has been seen, there is no reason to suppose that any such charges can be substantiated, although there is plenty of evidence that a bad situation in which political considerations have figured in an improper way has existed. The fact that the Administration has been continuously under Republican control during the sixteen years since 1896 and that these evils have become specially well recognized and prominent in that time affords a foundation for the manufacture of political capital, and the making of charges concerning party relationships and undue friendliness to banks. That there will be work in committee designed to show the politics of the Treasury situation is thus decidedly to be expected.

Mayer Gaynor of New York is not entirely eliminated from the "dark horse" column. Already his friends have engaged rooms for him at a Baltimore hotel, and the ninety delegates from New York State are expected to vote for him on the first ballot.

The Bank of England

"As solid as The Bank of England" has for many years been a proudly made statement among Britishers and others when establishing by comparison the solidity of communities and the worth of enterprises. It is founded upon the fact that no financial disturbance shakes public confidence in that

Grand Financial Gibraltar

But there are other "solid" institutions, the solidest being the American Citizen (or the corporation) that does business on a safe basis by the careful avoidance of dangerous speculation and costly debts. In addition, the character of assets and the methods, policy, the integrity and the capacity of the board of the Managing Directors (if a corporation) are most important factors to every investor.

Consolidated Realty Company

This Company owns $1,862,408.00 of tangible assets. Those assets consist of close-in business corners on Hill street; they include Consolidated Realty Building, at the corner of Sixth and Hill streets, a monument of security and of steadily increasing power.

The Treasury resources, together with the surplus earnings and the advances in the values of the assets will produce at the end of about two (2) years

Net Assets of $2,000,000.00

Then there will remain only 10,000 shares of stock to participate, making the intrinsic value of each share not less than $200.00 and as much more as the cash earned dividends will justify for business good will.

Consolidated Securities Co.

With over $500,000.00 of the best of business offerings this strong young Company, too, is similarly solidly founded. It avoids the dangers of speculation and of costly debts. It lends its money on mortgage, sound stock, and bonds, on approved building contracts, and does all those safe and profitable things that sound banks do (except to receive deposits)—and like the banks, it makes money at every turn. It will lend its money to you if a stockholder—repayable on the easiest of terms. It will pay dividends at liberal rates and build up a healthy reserve with the surplus—all invested along with the capital its stockholders furnish in Liquid Assets.

An Interesting Inquiry

A business man handed a banker the prospectus of the United Mortgage Corporation and said:—

"One of my employees wants my advice regarding the corporation. I would like your opinion before advising him."

The banker replied: "I consider it good. The corporation is on a sound foundation. Loaning money on mortgages is safe, which is the first consideration, and the business pays large dividends."

Business Man: "How are profits made by loaning money on mortgages?"

Answer: "My dear sir, there are numerous ways, loaning money on mortgages is only one; buying mortgages at a discount and selling them at a premium is another rich field for profit. Every bank that loans money on mortgages pay big dividends to their stockholders and their stock constantly increases in value. This corporation loans on the same kind of security."

Business Man: "Is not this corporation encroaching upon your business?"

Answer: "Yes, it is, but have WE any more right to engage in this business than they have? Personally, I am glad the corporation is selling its stock in small monthly payments so as to give the people with limited means the same opportunity that rich men have heretofore enjoyed."

Business Man: "What do you think of the officers and directors of the corporation?"

Answer: "A man is judged by what he has done. These men have made good, they are straightforward, active, wide-awake, and are taking their places among the financiers of the country. The fact that they have no promotion stock or rake-off, and will pay no salaries until the business will warrant shows that they are building for the future, this is exactly why I approve of, and recommend the proposition. I predict this stock will not only pay big dividends quarterly, but will rapidly increase in value, and I would advise those who are seeking, not a gamble, but a safe and conservative investment to investigate."

Business Man: "That was my opinion and I thank you. Will not only advise the purchase of this stock, but will buy a block for my children."

NOTE: A limited amount of the stock will be sold at $10.00 per share (par value) or they may be purchased for 50c per share, cash, and 50c per share per month for twenty-one months. As little as $5.00 per month may be invested. Call or write for a handsome booklet.

NEW YORK HAS WOMAN SLEUTH.

Petticoat Detective in World Enjoys Work.

Made Thrilling Capture of Desperate Robbers.

Fifteen Years She Has Been Police Matron.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEW YORK, April 19.—A quiet, plain-clad, unassuming woman, dressed neatly in black, sat in her apartment on the top floor of a very imposing apartment-house in the heart of Greenwich village, and in an unassuming but impressive manner told a tale of detective work that was as thrilling as anything in fiction. It was the tale that gripped the story about this woman's share in the running down of the men concerned in the Trinity place taxicab robbery, wherein desperate criminals made a clean away with $25,000 after shooting two clerks into insensibility—all at midday in a thickly populated section of downtown New York. Mrs. Isabella Goodwin is the unassuming woman detective, and it was easy to get her to talk at all about her share in the work that was done, and then only after Police Commissioner Waldo and First Deputy Commissioner Dougherty had given her leave to talk.

Commissioner Waldo has a theory that interferes with the effectiveness of a detective to have too much publicity thrown about his or her work. Detectives, like criminals, accomplish most in the dark. In Mrs. Goodwin's case, however, he decided that she had fully earned the gratitude of the public and that the public was entitled to a glimpse behind the scenes. Besides, Mrs. Goodwin has many interesting things to tell of other cases in which she has been concerned in that are not nearly forgotten.

In recognition of her effective work in this case and others the commissioner has just advanced her to first grade in the detective bureau with a salary of $1250 a year. Thus she wins, in addition to this reward, the unique distinction of becoming the first municipal woman detective in the world. Mrs. Goodwin has none of the earmarks that are usually associated with detectives. She is not dashingly smart, the type one would suppose to be most effective with a certain criminal element, nor yet spectacularly made up in dime novel fashion.

HER MOTHERLY FACE.

She has a kind, motherly face. Her gray hair is not yet streaked with white and her gray eyes are full of expression and sympathy. A broad forehead denotes intelligence and her quiet manner would lead one to take her for a married woman of the well-to-do class.

For nearly fifteen years she was a police matron attached to a station. In that capacity she came into personal contact with every important criminal of her sex that was arrested in New York during that time.

"For the last year and a half she has been doing special detective work on assignment from the chief of the detective bureau. In this capacity she has done laborious sleuth work that has been responsible for the arrest and conviction of more crooks, including clairvoyants, spiritualists and fake medical practitioners than all the other women investigators or matrons doing similar work in the city put together.

"I HAVE LONG TRAINING.

"I have already said more than I intended to about the robbery case," Mrs. Goodwin to a reporter, "and would rather talk about the other cases I have been concerned in. Of course the work I have done before the robbery occurred has had no such spectacular results, but it will give a better idea of what kind of training I had to go through to make me one of the more responsible workers. I began at the beginning. I think I was born for just such work as I am doing, I think highly of the work, too; I have a great fondness for it, and I don't think I would have been satisfied to have done any other line of work.

"My husband was a roundsman, and always took the deepest interest in my work. When he died, about seven years ago, I was left with three children on my hands, and I decided to become a police matron. I took the civil service examination and got on the eligible list.

"SCENT OF EXCITEMENT.

"Mr. Roosevelt was then police commissioner, and as soon as I was appointed I threw myself body and soul into the work. I grew to like it, although it has its ups and downs, and furnishes about as much excitement as almost any other profession. It has its compensations also, for the excitement always keeps one's nerves at the fever point.

"I was assigned to the Mercer street station, and there I remained about a year and a half ago, when I was promoted to the detective bureau. I have a son now, by the way, who is a detective assigned to duty at headquarters, so you see it runs in the family. My daughter, Marjorie, is also interested in the work, and is already able to make a detective out of me.

"The Mercer street station, owing to its proximity to police headquarters, is one of the most important in the city, for there all women prisoners of importance are taken to be booked or attended to, and for this reason I soon began to get acquainted with notorious women criminals. My experience as a matron stood me in good stead when I took up regular detective work.

"WORK ON SPECIAL WORK.

"I was for many years at what you might call the drudgery of the profession, but was glad enough to be put on special investigation work—that of collecting evidence against clairvoyants and other swindlers."

Mrs. Goodwin says her experience in social work as well as among the criminal classes has not made her cynical. "Human nature is the same the world over," she went on, "and every one has something good in him. It is only a question of how to get to it.

"In my peculiar work I try not to neglect my home. A woman's first duty is to her family, and I have tried always to remember that."

Mrs. Goodwin's children bore her out in this particular. There is not a more cozy home in all the city, and during the action to the above story Mrs. Goodwin, police matron and detective, bustled about her kitchen preparing supper.

W YORK HAS OMAN SLEUTH.

Petticoat Detective in rld Enjoys Work.

Make Thrilling Capture Desperate Robbers.

Fifteen Years She Has Been Police Matron.

[Correspondence of The Times.]
W YORK, April 16.—A quiet, modest, unassuming woman, dressed neatly in black, sat in her office on the top floor of a very large apartment-house in the heart of Greenwich village, and in an interesting but impressive manner told of detective work that was as exciting as anything in fiction.

Not the tale that gripped the attention about this woman's share in the breaking down of the men concerned in the Trinity place taxicab robbery, wherein desperate criminals got away with $36,000 after they had driven two clerks into insensibility—but a thrilling story in a thickly populated district of downtown New York.

Mrs. Sybella Goodwin is the unofficial woman detective, and it was her duty to go her to talk at all about the case in the work that was done, not only after Police Commissioner Waldo and First Deputy Commissioner Dougherty had given her the tip.

Commissioner Waldo has a theory in connection with the effectiveness of police to have too much publicity about his or her work. Criminals, like criminals, accomplish the dark. In Mrs. Goodwin, however, he decided that she fully earned the gratitude of the police and that the public was entitled to a glimpse behind the scenes. Mrs. Goodwin has many interesting things to tell of other cases she has been concerned in that are very important.

But regardless of her effective work in this and others the commissioner has just advanced her to first grade in the detective bureau with a salary of $1200 a year. Thus she wins, as is this reward, the unique distinction of becoming the first municipal detective in the world. Mrs. Goodwin has none of the earmarks are usually associated with detectives. She is not dashingly handsome, as the type one would suppose would be most effective with a certain class of criminal, nor yet spectacularly attired in the fashion novel fashion.

A MOTHERLY FACE.

She is a kind, motherly face. Her hair is not yet streaked with gray, but her gray eyes are full of expression and sympathy. A broad forehead denotes intelligence and her manner would lead one to take her for a married woman of the well-to-do.

Fifteen years she was a nurse, attached to a station, and her sympathy she came into personal contact with every important case of her sex that was arrested in New York during that time.

For the last year and a half she has been doing special detective work under assignment from the chief of the detective bureau. In this capacity she has had various sleuth work to do, responsible for the arrest and conviction of more crooks, fakirs, clairvoyants, spiritualists and medical practitioners than all the other women investigators or those doing similar work in the city together.

NO RECENT LONG TRAINING.

"I have already said more than I should about the robbery case," she said in answer to a reporter, "and I do not like to talk about the other cases I have been concerned in. Of course, the work I have done before has received has had no such public results, but it will give a fair idea of what kind of training I had to go through to make me fit for the more responsible work. I was put at the beginning. I think I am cut out for just such work as I am doing, and I take a great happiness for it, and I do not think I would have been satisfied to have done any other line of work.

"My husband was a roundsman, and took the deepest interest in my work. When he died, about three years ago, I was left with children on my hands, and I decided to become a police matron. I passed the civil service examination and was placed on the eligible list.

THE DAY OF EXCITEMENT.

"My husband was then police sergeant, and as soon as I was able I threw myself body and soul into my work. I grew to like it, and it has its ups and downs, about as much excitement as almost any other profession, with compensations also, that always keeps one's interest at the highest point.

"I was attached to the Mercer street station, and there I remained for a year and a half ago, when I was appointed to the detective bureau. I am now, by the way, who was assigned to duty at headquarters, so you see it is a family affair. My daughter, Marjorie, is also interested in the work, and is already showing a talent to make a detective out of herself.

"From the station, owing to its proximity to police headquarters, is one of the most important in the city, as all women prisoners are taken to be arraigned in, and for this reason I got acquainted with many criminals. My experience as a matron stood me in good stead when I took up regular detective work.

"MY SPECIAL WORK.

"I never learn at what you are working of the professional enough to be put on to a detection work—that of protecting against clairvoyants and fortune-tellers."

Mrs. Goodwin says her experience has taught her as well as among the criminals has not made her cynical. "My work is the same the world over," she said, "and every one has something good in him. In my particular work I try not to see the bad, but to get to it. A woman's first instinct is motherly, and I have tried to be that."

Mrs. Goodwin's own children bore her no ill will. There is not a happier home in all the city, and following the action to the letter, the police matron is very proud about her husband's upper.

Mines and Mining in the Great Southwest.

Northern California.

HIGH GRADE IS MECCA OF MEN.

Capitalists and Prospectors Are Side by Side.

Deep Snow Interferes With Work Just Now.

Famous Keystone Mine Under New Management.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FT. BIDWELL (Cal.) April 18.—The rush to High Grade has started. Men are pouring in from Reno, Denver and other mining centers, and before the end of summer the new camp promises to be the liveliest in the West. Despite the deep snow, which still prevents work in the district, and will probably postpone active operations until June, prospectors and capitalists are crowding to all outlying points, anxiously awaiting the earliest moment to get into the mines.

Spokane, Los Angeles, Seattle, Chicago, Denver and other capitalists have already commenced the inspection of the developed mines. Rich shipments continue to be sent out from the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated and Sunshine properties, while work is progressing at the Modoc mines and one or two others. The deep snow naturally handicaps operations, and only small forces are working at the various properties. But while actual developments are restricted, numerous deals have been consummated during the past month, with others pending. A townsite has been located on the southeast quarter of section 36, on patented land owned by the Modoc Mines Company. This company is composed largely of Chicago capitalists, headed by William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing-gum magnate. The town will be built on a beautifully wooded strip lying between the Modoc and Sunshine mines. Application has been made for the establishment of a post-office.

The greatest amount of development work thus far accomplished in the district has been done by the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated Mines Company, composed largely of Detroit and Los Angeles interests. This company controls over twenty claims, of which the most valuable are the Mountain View and Sugar Pine. On the Mountain View two distinct veins have been developed. The first averages about twelve inches wide and has been opened about fifty feet. Values are said to average $250 per ton throughout. The second vein ranges four to six feet wide, with values averaging about $4 to $6 per ton. All of the ore is free milling, and values readily yield to simple amalgamation. On the Sugar Pine three adits have opened strong veins of ore claimed to average $15 to $20 per ton. This ore is not of the free milling nature found on the Mountain View, and cyanidation will be required in treatment. The ten-stamp mill is situated on the Mountain View, and a tramway extends from the Sugar Pine workings to the plant. This company started operations in the district about four years ago and has blocked out a fair quantity of good-grade ore. Arrangements are being completed for the installation of a sawmill and cyanide plant.

High Grade is located in the extreme northeastern portion of Modoc county at an approximate elevation of 5000 feet. It is reached by automobiles from Willow Ranch, a station on the Nevada-California and Oregon Railway. Connections are made with this line by the Southern Pacific at Reno, and the Western Pacific at Doyle, Cal. The country rock of the district consists largely of rhyolite, andesite, dacite and basalt. Aside from the work performed on the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated, Sunshine, Big Four and one or two other properties, only a small amount of development has been thus far accomplished. It should be remembered that High Grade is far from a poor man's camp at this time, as it will be at least two months before active work on the surface can be conducted. It is also largely a prospective region, although it must be admitted it gives promise of developing into one of the big camps of the West.

The Great Keystone.

Under new ownership the famous Keystone mine at Amador City is being rapidly placed in shape to resume its position among the great gold mines of California. The shaft has been unwatered and repaired to the 1200 level, the first time this point has been attained in twenty years. An air compressor and large blower have been installed and the sinking of the main shaft will soon commence. Considerable work has also been undertaken on surface. The Keystone for years was the premier producer on the mother lode, and has been worked along small lines during the past two decades largely owing to friction among owners, and lack of finances. It has an estimated production of about $10,000,000 from a depth of 500 feet. The property recently passed into the hands of the New Keystone Mines Company. Several Southern California capitalists are understood to be interested. C. R. Downs is superintendent.

Rich Strike in Plumas.

Ore running $500 to $1000 per ton has been struck in the Gruss mine, near Greenville. The mine lies in the Genessee district, and the discovery was made in the southern end of the importance as work progresses. Former gold discoveries in the property consisted of small deposits, but the new find exists in vein formation. The old fifteen-stamp mill will be overhauled and placed in commission if developments continue favorable.

Big Fraction Cuts Figure.

A five foot vein of quartz running as high as $500 per ton has been intersected in the Big Fraction mine, three miles from Mokelumne Hill. The ore carries free gold, with a fair percentage of sulphurets. The higher grade is being sacked for shipment to the Selby smelter, and the lower quality reserves for treatment on the ground. On surface the vein in places shows a width of about twelve feet. The owners plan to install a milling plant before spring closes.

Siskiyou Hydraulic Mining.

The Bennett company is actively operating the Crapo and Forks of Salmon placers, with three giants in commission. Considerable development work has been done on the Crapo and the outlook is particularly bright. The company has leased the Nigger Hill hydraulic property to Gorham McNeil, are operating at full capacity and an & McLaine. Operations are in full blast on both holdings. The Forks of Salmon Mining Company has installed a large elevator on its Salmon River placers, and is handling large quantities of excellent gravel. The giants are operating at full capacity and an abundance of water has been provided. The Michigan Salmon Company has installed an elevator on its Know-Nothing Creek properties. A good body of gravel has been opened and sufficient water obtained to operate the giants until well into the summer. A number of other placer companies are also active, the recent storms greatly facilitating work. Considerable Los Angeles capital is interested in these companies, some of the best placers being controlled by capitalists from the Angel City.

Prepares for Summer.

The Trinity Reduction and Mining Company, operating the noted Headlight mine, at Carrville, is arranging for the summer season at the big property. During the winter months ore is largely extracted from underground workings, while in summer it is mined principally by the glory hole method from surface deposits. During the summer months the ore, averaging about $5.25 per ton in gold and silver, is mined at a total cost of 50 cents per ton. The mill is at present handling 250 tons of ore per day, and the mine ranks among the largest and most profitable producers in Northern California. In addition to the vast tonage of ore blocked out in the main workings, the company is devoting considerable attention to other claims with satisfactory results. The mill is equipped with forty stamps, and a complete cyanide installation. It is stated milling costs are kept down to $1.50 per ton. Angelenos are principally interested.

STRIKE IN MAGMA MINE.
RUNS HEAVY IN COPPER.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 18.—Superintendent James Neary of the Magma Company reports that another wonderful strike has been made on the 800 level of the Magma mine, where a crosscut has passed through quartzite into a four-foot vein averaging 72 per cent. copper and fifty ounces of silver to the ton. The same crosscut has demonstrated that the main ore body is fully sixty feet wide, carrying high values in copper and silver all the way across. It has been stated that the average assays are around 30 per cent. metal. A new triple compartment shaft is being raised from the 800 level to the surface and new boilers and other surface equipment are being placed at the mouth of the shaft, to be in readiness for the handling of a large production.

It is reported that the American Smelting and Refining Company will add a lead jacket to its smelting equipment at Hayden. If true this will be of large importance to small miners throughout northern Pinal county. Lead-silver ores are to be found broadly scattered in the Mineral Hill district, sixteen miles east of Florence, a region which has been mined for nearly forty years. Many of the best copper properties are capped by lead-silver ores, which in the early days gave phenomenal returns in the crude reduction processes of the period.

About one hundred men now are employed in the Ray Central property at Ray, where it is understood that ore shipments will soon be started to the Hayden concentrator. This property is closely associated with the Ray Consolidated.

PROSPERITY TO CONTINUE.

SIXTEEN-CENT COPPER'S EFFECT ON THE INDUSTRY.

Old Dominion Smelter Is Being Operated at Full Capacity—Production Will Be Increased Fifty Per Cent.—Irish Mag Engineers Discover Ore at Greater Depth.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) April 18.—Sixteen-cent copper is having a visible effect upon the prosperity of this district and there is local expectation that the good times will be long continued.

The most important work now in progress in this locality is that at Douglas on the site of the new Calumet and Arizona smelter. The old smelter is being operated at full capacity and beside it is arising the new plant, which will not only work great economy but increase the production at least 50 per cent. The site is being graded into a number of terraces, that the reduction processes may be assisted materially by gravity, the ore to be dumped into the furnaces at the highest level and the copper bullion to be drawn off into cars on the floor of the plant. The great concrete foundations of the plant are complete, including the concrete base for a smoke stack which is to be forty feet in outer

Look Back Seven or Eight Years

Opportunities

If you have been in Southern California that long, you can look back and see opportunities (probably hundreds of them) that you had for investment that would have made you independent today. Just stop and think a moment—take one instance—one that you are familiar with, or perhaps that you hesitated about, or even went so far as to investigate—some certain piece of land or stock—how much could you have made?

Remarkable Increase

Maybe you knew or heard of the Original HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES seven years ago. If you had invested $10 a month in the company since its beginning in 1905 and reinvested your dividends in stock you would now have holdings valued at more than $18,000, and it would pay you a salary in dividends of more than $80 monthly. Suppose you had merely taken $100 and bought shares, today it would be worth $3379.50.

Safety Most Important

Of course, seven years ago you did not realize that Los Angeles would be the city it is today, or you certainly would have taken advantage of some of the opportunities presented to you.

'A Settled Fact

You may say, "There were several hundred home building and investment companies started during 1905 and 1906 that are not in business today. How was I to know?" Here is just the point we want to bring out. The Original Home Builders of Los Angeles was started more than seven years ago—has passed through the experimental stage—has been successful and this fact should convince you that it is just that much better an investment today.

No need to tell you what Los Angeles will be in seven or ten years from now. It is a settled fact in your mind. You are convinced that Los Angeles will grow, and now you must realize what your investment in the Original Home Builders of Los Angeles today will be worth seven or ten years from now.

Say I Will

The simple question on making such an investment is, "How much can you spare now?" If you can save it now, you can probably do it again. None of the monthly payments will be much harder than the first. Isn't it only a question of saying, "I will" and paring a small saving off of your income? You have seen the advantage of co-operation—you realize the tremendous growth and value of compulsory savings. Is there any reason why you should not start today?

Advance in Price

Shares advance in price to $1.60 on May 1, 1912. This means you save $10.00 on every 100 shares purchased now; you also receive the next regular quarter's dividend of 3% (at the rate of 12% per annum,) payable May 10, 1912.

Do It Now

Start your saving today. If it is only a dollar, it is a start. Select one plan from the above table. Arrange to send in the first payment now. You won't regret it.

Buys $1,000,000.00 Worth of Los Angeles Investment Company's Stock

The Guarantee Fund, held and managed by the Globe Savings Bank, has purchased more than one million dollars' worth of Los Angeles Investment Company stock.

It has protected every investor in the Los Angeles Investment Company from loss, whether he owned five shares or a thousand, by buying his stock when he wished to sell. To date it has paid spot cash for all stock offered it, returning stockholders their money in full on demand. Here is the bank statement:

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15, 1912.

This is to certify that this bank holds a fund of over $100,000.00 to be used solely for the protection from loss of those persons who have purchased from the Los Angeles Investment Company not more than five hundred shares of stock.

The fund was donated by the officers and old stockholders of that Company, but its management rests wholly with the officers of this bank.

During the years this bank has managed this fund, it never has failed to pay back in full on demand all money paid to the Los Angeles Investment Company for stock. To date it has purchased over $1,000,000.00 worth.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK,
By R. H. Morse, Cashier.

A $100,000 Fund

The Guarantee Fund was donated years ago by stockholders of the Los Angeles Investment Company, who had been made wealthy by investing in the Company's stock. It amounted originally to only a few dollars, and has been increased from time to time by voluntary donations, and by its earnings, until now it totals $110,628.52.

The Object

The sole object of the Guarantee Fund is to protect from loss, those who purchase from the Los Angeles Investment Company not more than 500 shares of stock. This it accomplishes by buying their holdings when they wish to sell. The fund maintains a continual bid for the Company's stock. If a stockholder wants his money he goes to the Guarantee Fund, which has ready more than $100,000.00. The Guarantee Fund is as positive a guarantee that a stockholder cannot lose money by investing in Los Angeles Investment Company stock as could possibly be devised. The fund is not a promise or an offer to resell your stock. It does not list it. The money is ready—over $100,000.00 of it.

Managed by a Bank

The management of the Globe Savings Bank has sole control over the Guarantee Fund. By the terms under which the Bank manages it, the Fund purchases stock first from those having the smallest holdings. Thus the smaller the investment, the better the protection. The fund is perpetual and cannot be withdrawn. Stock purchased by the Guarantee Fund is sold at auction weekly.

During the panic of 1907 the Guarantee Fund, although amounting to less than $10,000, purchased for spot cash, more than $105,000.00 worth of stock, or every share that was offered it for sale.

The officers of the Globe Savings Bank believe that the Guarantee Fund will always be able to purchase every share of Los Angeles Investment Company stock offered to it. If a stockholder wants his money back, the procedure is simple. He takes his certificate to the Globe Savings Bank and asks for a check or cash.

Stock—A Splendid Investment

Under the protection of the Guarantee Fund, Los Angeles Investment Company stock is as close to a money-back proposition as there is. Past records prove it.

Today there is no bigger opportunity in the investment field than that offered by the Company's stock. One Dollar opens an account, and that dollar will work harder and longer, more economically and more satisfactorily than a dollar put in almost any other channel. The small sum of $10 a month invested in the stock since the Company was organized in Los Angeles about sixteen years ago, with dividends reinvested as they were paid, is now worth $45,363.38. Ten cents a day is worth $18,609.01.

Stock purchased this month participates in the quarterly cash dividends payable May 15th.

Great Race.

PHILIP ZEYOUMA WINS FIRST MARATHON HONORS.

BY R. A. WYNNE.

A TIRELESS little brown figure came pattering up the last long grade on West Seventh into full view of the awaiting thousands of spectators who had gathered yesterday afternoon about the Los Angeles Athletic Club to witness the finish of the first Times Modified Marathon.

As the figure mounted the grade and came into relief against the skyline a great shout went up as the winner was in sight.

Down the center of the street came the little figure running rapidly and with short quick steps. Absolutely regardless of the eager shouts of the spectators the little firm figure swung along the center of the street toward the finish line.

Suddenly there was a white flash seen for a second as a tall lithe figure swung over the brow of the grade and came leaping down the finish.

The brown figure turned its head as it scuttled along and saw the long, lithe, white shape leaping after it and lowering its head it began to run as though a banshee was after it.

THE FINISH.

The white figure leaped forward at the same time. Not more than one hundred feet separated the runners. The brown man was running more naturally than his opponent; but the white figure had a long, powerful stride that was eating up the distance that separated them.

Two blocks away could be seen the white tape that was stretched across the street showing the finish. The white figure was gradually overhauling the fleeing brown man. Suddenly the latter threw back his head which he had kept bowed and stretching out his arms in front of him ran as he never had ran before, flashing across the tape at least two hundred feet ahead of the pursuing white runner.

It was little Phillip Zeyouma, a Hopi Indian boy, running in the great Times Modified Marathon, under the colors of the Sherman Institute. His close second was Paul Westerlund of the Olympic Club of San Francisco.

The finish was dramatic and a fitting one to perhaps one of the greatest marathons ever held in the West.

HOW THEY STARTED.

A perfect day and an unprecedented entry list had aroused interest in the event that resulted in the entire twelve-mile course being lined with spectators and hundreds of automobiles.

Promptly at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the runners appeared at the corner of First and Broadway, riding in big automobile trucks.

They were composed of every nationality on the globe with the exception of the Chinaman.

WORLD RECORD IN ROAD RACE.

Santa Monica Classic to Be Great Speed Event.

Oldfield and De Palma Against Bragg and Brown.

Star Motor Pilots to Clash in Fierce Duels.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

There is every reason to believe that another world record will be established at Santa Monica Saturday, May 4. When the giant cars rush across the finish line at the end of the free-for-all 300-mile race a mark never before hung up by an automobile should be registered for the day's event.

Ralph de Palma is on his way from the East to be here in time for the practice spins which are to be commenced on Thursday. He will start against Barney Oldfield in a field that will include David Bruce Brown, on a Benz, Caley Bragg on a Flat, and Bart Dingley on a Simplex. In addition to this, three Stutz cars will be sent into the grand prize event with at least two additional Fiat cars fighting for honors and the big purse.

Never before in the history of motor racing have these men been started together over the same course. This aggregation of stars outshines anything ever fixed in the motor firmament. They are the leading men in the motor world today. This card exceeds that promised for the Indianapolis 500-mile event. It is the greatest race ever carded. Manager A. M. Young says the entry list exceeds that of any other Santa Monica Road Race.

HOW FAST?

What will be the average of the winning car? This question is puzzling many motorists. An estimate of seventy-six miles an hour seems to be the closest that has yet been placed. It should be at least that fast and there is a possibility that the seventy-eight-mile average mark will be reached.

At Santa Monica everything is buzzing along merrily. The residents of the beach town are a unit in favor of the race. The fight for the bridge was decided Thursday morning when Manager Young, with Mayor Dow and Chief of Police Randall got into ac-

WINNER OF THE WANKOWSKI CUP.

Private Charles Amador of Co. C, won the cup offered by Gen. Robert Wankowski for the first National Guardsman to reach the tape in the Times Modified Marathon.

Aside from the military marching teams there were seven runners in the great race from the armory.

Soldier Amador was picked as a possible winner till he sprained his ankle last week and the day before the race was on crutches. The doctor forbade him to enter the race, but he appeared on the marks at the start and after getting started forgot the pain in an endeavor to win the Wankowski prize for his company.

Capt. Anderson entertained all the runners from Co. C, at a stag banquet last night.

MORELAND ON RECORD RUN.

Fast Trip to Channel City in Big Oil Truck.

Ten Hours and Twenty-six Minutes Mark Set.

Observer Smith Gives Graphic Account of Trip.

One of the most sensational motor runs of the year was made yesterday by the Moreland motor distillate truck, which established a record run of 10hrs. 26min. Homer Crouch was at the wheel and Cecil H. Smith was observer. The run was made on an economy test and was started from in front of The Times office at 8:32 o'clock by Bert Leonard. The Moreland drew up in front of the Hotel Potter at 6:58, the afternoon of the same day.

In spite of an almost blinding sand storm the two young men handled the truck like veterans and took the commercial car through in record time and with a record for consumption that has not been equaled. The big truck averaged 10 1-10 miles to the gallon of distillate and reached its goal in perfect shape. Ten minutes after the machine had reached Santa Barbara it was delivered to a purchaser.

The Casitas Pass was crossed by a truck for the first time since the dangerous landslide of a month ago. The commercial car fought its way over the perilous grade where the said accident makes touring almost out of the question. When it topped the high hills it was sent down the grade to the Shephard's Inn turn and then was shot swiftly over the smooth roads to the Channel City where the run was ended.

Following is the story of the remarkable run as told by Observer Smith over the wire. Smith was in charge of the car from the moment it left The Times office until it reached the Hotel Potter. He had no word of complaint to make and found nothing wrong with the mechanism. Here is Smith's graphic account told in his own crisp style.

SMITH'S VERSION.

SANTA BARBARA, April 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Moreland distillate motor truck left Los Angeles Times office 8:30 a.m. with Homer Crouch of the Moreland factory at the wheel and with C. H. Smith as official observer. The machine arrived at Calabasas at 10:42 a.m. No stop. Roads good. Arrived Camarillo 1:38 p.m.; roads being worked on and in poor shape; stopped ten minutes for lunch. Left Camarillo in blinding sand storm; arrived at Ventura 3:30 p.m. Wind still so strong almost impossible to drive. No stop.

Roads good to Casitas Pass. Wind died down on entering pass. Roads in East Casitas Pass fearfully cut up from recent storms. Moreland truck made a gallant fight and won.

Required great caution on part of driver. Roads better in West Casitas Pass, having been worked on. Roads continued good into Santa Barbara. Officially checked in at Potter Hotel at 6:58 p.m. Great trip.

Had absolutely no mechanical trouble. Tools not touched. Measured distillate. Truck averaged 10 1-10 miles to gallon of California six and half distillates.

No attempt was made for speed. After checking in made demonstration to special agent A. C. Grant of the Union Oil Company, who purchased the truck for the company. Truck goes into service tomorrow morning.

SIMPLEX LOOKS LIKE NEW.

A. H. Braly is touring in a new Simplex; that is, to all appearances it is new. In reality it is his old Simplex "90" remodeled and repainted until it has every feature of the most up-to-the-minute machine. The body was of the old open front type. After a month in the shop of the Coleman & Bentel company it came out with foredoors, a new dash and a fine coat of Brewster green paint, which gave it all the appearance of a new car. The machine has attracted much attention and as a demonstration that good work counts this job alone was responsible for a half a dozen others of a similar character being taken to Coleman & Bentel.

The North Attleboro (Mass.) fire department has made an appropriation of $5500 to buy a new combination chemical and ladder truck.

CADILLAC IN NEW HOME.

Handsome Quarters Now Occupied By the Concern, and Many Cars Are Delivered.

The Cadillac sales department is now established in its new salesroom at No. 1205 South Main street. This is the building formerly occupied by the Diamond Rubber Company. The sales of both new and used Cadillacs will be conducted at the new place, while the old garage will be kept entirely for a service department.

The week just ended has been a good on for the Cadillac. Salesmanager Newton Gresser reports eleven local retail sales. This with the number sold by the San Francisco branch and the sub-agencies brings the Cadillac total for the year well over the seven hundred mark.

Sane Advice.

PEERLESS TRUCK MEN IN ACTION.

TRAFFIC CONDITIONS OFFER SERIOUS PROBLEMS.

Poorly Trained Drivers Injure the Business, According to Expert Who Says Men Who Handle Commercial Cars Should Be Experienced Mechanicians.

C. P. Cary of the Peerless Motor Car truck department has some interesting things to say of the truck situation of the present day. While in former days most business firms bought a motor vehicle with the idea that it gave them a reputation for progressiveness, it was before the traffic conditions were understood and now in the last two or three years there has been a marked change in the manner in which the business man goes about the purchase of a motor truck. The field has expanded rapidly, but as the Peerless truck can be easily adapted to all lines of service, Cary is in a position to know the real condition of the truck industry.

"Naturally when a business firm knew nothing about trucks, a truck was a truck, and they usually took the one that was represented by the most engaging salesman," said the Peerless truck man. "Those who happened to select a proper capacity vehicle found in most cases that instead of being more expensive than the horse delivery, as they had expected, that motor hauling really saved them a great deal of money, provided they had men who knew how to operate the vehicles properly and care for them.

"Those who purchased trucks not suited to the service or who permitted them to be operated by poorly trained drivers, either returned to the horse or after much expensive pioneering found a suitable truck that would do their work economically. Now, with the radius of delivery expanded by so much competition, it is almost imperative for the horse delivery merchant to adopt motor vehicles or fall far behind his competitor.

"Many of the larger users who buy trucks in quantity have found that it pays to investigate carefully along engineering lines the various trucks with their own peculiar traffic problem in mind, and to secure the advice of others operating motor vehicles in similar service. The truck when well made and given enough work to pay its way performs an extremely valuable service. And as this service over a period of years depends on construction, most buyers go rather carefully into the mechanical features of every vehicle which comes under their consideration.

"Much thought is also given to the stability of the concern which offers the truck for sale, to its financial history and its experience in manufacturing. Buyers want to know the reputation of the maker for taking care of customers and assuring them satisfaction in the product at any cost. The importance of the salesman no longer lies in the attractiveness of personality or his oratory, but in the knowledge he has of traffic conditions and truck possibilities."

TO TEST TAXIMETERS.

An ordinance which is being prepared for testing of taximeters by the St. Paul City Sealer provides that the meter on each cab is to be tested by removal from the car and attached to a tester. The measurement of the cab wheels and tires will then be taken and the cab run over a measured course with meter attached. If the correct fare is shown the meter will be approved and sealed against tampering. Another provision is that a passenger may refuse to pay for any part of the ride should the cab break down, unless he waits for the cab to be repaired.

Moreland Truck Which Made an Economy Test Run

Under the auspices of The Times to Santa Barbara. At the wheel is Driver Crouch and with him Observer Cecil H. Smith and Bert Leonard is just passing the clearance papers to young Smith as the big truck leaves The Times office for the dangerous run over the grades to the Channel City. The truck was the first commercial car to crawl the Casitas Pass since the landslide a month ago

An Engineer's Report

Remarks by MR. DAVID FERGUSSON
Chief Engineer PIERCE-ARROW MOTOR CAR CO., on KNIGHT ENGINES

Reprinted from the Published Report of the Proceedings of the Society of Automobile Engineers Held at Detroit, Mich., July 28, 29 and 30, 1910.

Knight Engine Successful

From Page 301

The Knight engine is delivering the goods and they are selling them by the thousands. It is quite a sensation all over Europe; it is a practical proposition; it is giving splendid results, whatever it may be theoretically. I have observed it running. It has given a satisfaction which we do not seem to get with the poppet valve type. The Knight engine has made wonderful strides and created the demand for a more quiet engine. I think it does not give any more power at slow speed, but it certainly does at high speed. The power curve does not fall away at high speed the way it does with most poppet valve engines; you can gear your car very low, thus obtaining great hill-climbing ability without getting the noisy action that you get with the high speed poppet valve engine. If the car is geared low, you get 60 or 70 miles an hour, which is as much as the public wishes to have.

Positive Valve Operation

There is a big advantage in having positively operated valves of the sliding-sleeve type. The poppet-valve engine works all right when turned out. When it has been working six months the poppet-valve springs have decreased in strength perhaps 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. The engine loses power without the operator knowing why. After a year's use there is still further decrease. Then again, carbon forms around the exhaust and inlet valve guides and the valves stick. The clearance between the valve stem and the lifter must be looked after; although there is not much wear between the lifter roller and cam, there is a little.

Wear

The poppet valve is a somewhat crude proposition; yet it is doing good work in spite of its liability to give trouble. An engine of the type of the Knight, when properly lubricated, seems to last a great length of time without any undue wear. After the severe trials in England of two of these engines by the Royal Automobile Club, they reported no perceptible wear in any of the parts.

You will find that the opinion of practically all of the big automobile engineers coincide with Mr. Fergusson. It has been the directors and officers of the factories that have objected to the change from poppet motors to the Knight, on account of the enormous expense involved, but ultimately they will have to come to this type.

Are you going to be one of the last with the old type motor, or one of the first with the new?

LARGEST TIRE EVER MADE.

Hook and Ladder Truck Equipped With Monster Castors Which Make Good in Indianapolis.

The largest automobile tire ever built for practical use is the 38x8 nobby tread, being put out by the United States Tire Company.

These tires were made for use on heavy trucks and are giving general satisfaction in various parts of the country.

A huge hook and ladder truck of the Indianapolis fire department uses these tires and they have been found serviceable on sight-seeing wagons in the East. These tires were exhibited at all the eastern shows and attracted considerable attention.

H. L. McClaren, who won many friends on the Pacific Coast, when he came here as western representative for the Morgan & Wright tires, is now assistant of the Central District Manager, with headquarters in Chicago.

J. S. Wiese, Los Angeles manager of the United States Tire Company, was in San Francisco last week for a couple of days. Wiese was in conference with the western district manager, C. A. Gilbert. Wiese's report was one of good business throughout his territory, and general enthusiasm over the product of the United States Tire Company.

As a result of two big fires that burned the town hall and a church, the residents of Braintree, Mass., have appropriated money to purchase a motor-driven fire-wagon.

PRUDENTIAL WIDE AWAKE.

When Cut In Prices Arrived Tire Concern Was Ready for Rush of Business.

The slashing of tire prices did not catch the Prudential Tire Company asleep, as this firm was one of the first to make a cut, and it was a regular slaughter of all existing prices.

The Prudential was also lucky in having a carload of tires on the way when the cut was announced. This shipment arrived Friday and is now on the racks of the local company. The concern is the first to put out inner tubes in a small cloth bag. This is a great convenience. The tube can be taken out of the pasteboard box and instead of being thrown loose into the car, it is held inside the bag and cannot be shaken about.

The new Gibraltar casings are also neatly wrapped and are in excellent shape for shipping. The new Gibraltars are heavier than former tires of this make.

Jubilee CHIME TONE Horn

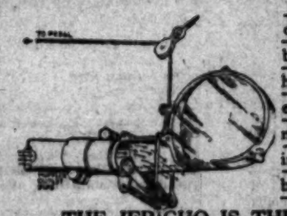
The Signal of a Gentleman—Warns without Offense



City after city is enacting ordinances requiring automobiles to be equipped with horns that shall give instant, effective warning, yet shall not annoy or confuse persons in the street by nerve-racking barbarous sounds.

THE JERICHO IS THE PERFECT HORN

It is superior to bulb horns because it is equally effective in the crowded city street or on winding country roads. It is superior to electrical horns because there is not a penny of expense for batteries or maintenance. It is superior to every other exhaust horn because it never clogs.

Any Motor Car Agency, accessory dealer or garage will sell and put on a Jericho or Jubilee and the entire cost will be less than $10

tion. They soon had the matter settled and the bridge will span Fourth street, making the approach to the grand stand ideal.

Just in the nick of time, when there seemed a possibility that the bridge must be placed at Eighth street, almost a mile from the grand stand, Mrs. W. G. Miller solved the problem. She gave her consent to the viaduct being placed at Fourth street, and every resident along Nevada avenue swung into line at once. This plucky little woman showed her good judgment and made a host of friends. She was given a rousing cheer by the Road Race Committee as the men swung away in the big Thomas car, which A. M. Young had just piloted over the course.

THE RIGHT MAN.

Road Overseer A. W. McPherson has gone on record as being in favor of as safe a course as possible. With Supervisor Nellis to guide him, McPherson will get to work this week in earnest and the great race will be made faster by the work that is to be done by the scarifyers. The San Vicente boulevard is rough. This is to be given special attention. Ocean boulevard has already been pounded into shape and Henry Stone, road overseer of Santa Monica, is almost ready to hand over his stretch of the course.

FIERCE DUEL.

Eddie Maier, president of the Maier Brewing Company, is to figure in the great race. He owns the 150-horsepower racing Fiat; Barney Oldfield will handle the machine. Dr. Edwin Janss, general manager of the Janss Investment Company, has purchased an exact duplicate of the Maier machine, and has signed Teddy Tetzlaff as Oldfield's competitor in the same big race.

Maier and Dr. Janss have planned a match race between Oldfield and Tetzlaff before the Santa Monica racing date. The exact time was not specified, but a side bet of $2500 was made. The "Select Kid," as Maier's machine is cristened, is pited against the "Owensmouth Baby," the Janss car.

TETZLAFF THERE.

Teddy Tetzlaff, who will pilot the Fiat has announced that his car will be equipped with Miller tires and Dorian demountable rims. This is a ten strike for W. D. Newerf as the Fiat is the undoubted favorite in the big race.

Tetzlaff was led to make this choice on account of past experience with Miller tires. He has given them a thorough test and did not decide until he had assured himself that he could not do better than select Newerf's tire.

The Dorian rim is one of the most popular as well as one of the fastest. Newerf is also Coast agent for the Dorian and this makes a double victory for him.

When it comes to winning races no tire man has been more fortunate than Newerf. Among his victories have been the Baldy race, two Phoenix races and theround -trip record between Los Angeles and San Francisco. His force has had much experience in racing and knows how to take care of a car.

TO TIME RACE.

W. H. Halliwell of the Warner Autometer Company will have charge of the timing. He has arranged to clock every car and will have a corps of able assistants on hand to manage the big speed event. He will be assisted by his brother Charles Halliwell and the two men will use the famous Warner chronometer.

Just who will referee the big event has not been decided. Bill Ruess will be in charge of the pits at one end and Ralph Hamlin will look after affairs at the other. Attorney Edward G. Kuster will be the A.A.A. representative on the field of action and will see to it that the rules of the contest board are complied with. The race has the official sanction of the Automobile Association of America.

Manager Young promises to make special provision for the members of the press. A stand will be erected in order to accomodate the newspaper men and the photographers. Space will be provided for typewriters and for the telegraph instruments. This year the news of the race is to be flashed over the world with every convenience possible being given the men who report the event.

Making the Fastest Road Race Course on Earth a Trifle Faster for the Santa Monica Road Race.

Above the workmen are hammering the bridge into place. This viaduct will be used by many thousands of motor cars on the day of the great race. The question of where it should be placed was one of the acute problems which faced Manager Young. In the center the big fire horses are dragging the road-scarifyer over the dangerous Dead Man's curve to chop down the bumps, and below Mayor Dow of Santa Monica, with Chief of Police Randall, Manager A. M. Young and others are discussing the details of the big race. The car is the Stoddard-Dayton Silent Knight with Glenn Calkins in charge. In the tonneau of the Stoddard is Frank P. McLauthlin, who has charge of the Red Cross work during the day of the big race.

From the Factory.

FEW CHANGES IN STEVENS.

NO RADICAL DEPARTURES FOR LATE MODEL CARS.

Luxury of Finish Is Feature of the Cars Which Also Have the Multiple Disc Clutch and the Six-cylinder Engine Which Has Shown Its Power Under Severe Tests.

The Stevens-Duryea factory makes little change in the design of their cars from year to year, like many of the older manufacturers, who have had cars out long enough to be fully developed. The models this year have only changes in added refinements or additions to equipment of the cars. Of the three models for 1912, which were put out by the Stevens-Duryea people, two are like the 1911 cars exactly, and the other is different only in small things.

These cars, which in practically every radical change in automobile practice since the beginning of the industry in this country has made its first appearance, have been unchanged in essentials for eight years now. The unit power plant, with its enclosed clutch and fly-wheel, and the multiple-disc dry-plate clutch, which are now recognized as standard the world over, were brought out by this factory in 1904. The six-cylinder engine, of which nearly every factory is now building, was introduced by Duryea in 1905.

Since that time there have been no great changes in automobile design. The "three-point support," which flexibly attaches the power-plant to the frame, is another idea originated by J. Frank Duryea, and was adopted in the Stevens-Duryea in 1897. This year's development is in the direction of more luxurious comfort, and that appears to be the line which the builders of cars will follow in the future, unless some new improvement in construction is devised.

MACADAM HIGHWAY.

A movement is under way in the Fox River Valley of Wisconsin to build a macadam highway connecting the principal cities at private expense. Motor car owners have been asked to subscribe $10 each. The proposed highway will be seven miles long and start at Neenah-Menasha, the twin cities at the head of Lake Winnebago, running to Appleton.

IN THE BLACK.

Local Gun Men to Hold Attractive Shoot at Glendale today—"Good-time" Shoot.

In its "good-time" shoot, held today, the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club will offer local rifle and revolver cranks the most novel collection of shooting stunts ever programmed on the Coast.

The matches, open to anybody, any rifles, any sights and any ammunition, include team shoots at staked-out toy balloons, a la the Evans skirmish match at Camp Perry, where a man drops out if his particular target is hit; plate matches at 200 yards with revolver; "surprise fire," to see if the rifleman can unlock the safety of his rifle and shoot in three seconds, and two sorts of deer shoots.

Some pasteboard life-size deer have been secured. One of the deer is to be set up at 200 yards, fire five shots standing, time limit, thirty seconds. Another deer is to be set up distance not announced to the competitors. Five shots constitute a string at this target, time limit, one minute, any position allowed.

For the prize shoots, a fine sole-leather ammunition case; a pair of ear protectors; two Springfield carrying cases and two bulls-eye score books are offered.

The match is open to anybody, whether members of the club or not. All that is necessary is a rifle, ammunition and a trip to the Glendale range.

The full programme:

Deer shoot, five shots, 200 yards, any rifle. Time, thirty seconds. Deer shoot, five shots, 200 yards, any rifle. Time, one minute. 200-yard off-hand pool shoot, five shots, military target. 500-yard prone pool shoot, five shots, military target. Rapid fire kneeling 200 yards, five shots, twenty seconds. 200-yard sitting, prize shoot, re-entry allowed.

Surprise fire, target exposed 3 seconds at 200 yards, prize shoot, re-entry allowed.

Balloon match, six men to the team, two teams, targets, two sets of toy balloons tied to stake at 250 yards. When balloon is hit, competitor corresponding to that number must retire. Plate match, eight-man teams, same conditions as balloon match. Chicken shoot, two shots off-hand at 300 yards, re-entry. Market trophy, five shots with revolvers, 200 yards.

WOMEN LIKE CRANKLESS CAR.

Hudson Man Says Demand for Self-starter Is Great.

New Auto Era Is Here and Chauffeuses Are Glad.

Prominent Society Leaders Enter Motor Field.

Women, as drivers of motor cars, this spring have "arrived" in earnest.

Approximately twice the number of women drivers of automobiles will appear at the wheels of high-powered cars this summer, for reports from motor car headquarters throughout the country show there are double the number of women purchasers of new self-starting Hudson "20s" as there were for 1911 cars, which had to be cranked.

News to this effect, compiled from reports from all sections of the United States reached H. L. Arnold, the Hudson dealer, today.

In addition, it is stated that there has been a surprising increase in the number of motor car licenses issued by the authorities since the coming of the "crankless" automobile era.

The first American woman of national prominence to handle her own car was Mrs. Frank J. Gould of New York, a member of one of Gotham's oldest families. Mrs. Gould became owner and driver of a new self-starting Hudson "33" the first of the year, and since that time hundreds of women in many sections of the United States have assumed the same role.

WOMEN RULE.

While women are known to be the final factors in the decisions of heads of families to own automobiles, a woman driving her own car has been unusual up to a short time ago. Now, however, the drudgery that accompanied the work of starting the motor has been done away with by the self-starter and that has made it possible for women to drive their own cars, for there is no work to do. The mere pressure of a button starts the car from the seat. It is as easy as ringing an electric bell. There is no necessity in getting out in front of the car and going through the exhaustive work of cranking the motor a dozen or more times in order to start it.

The "crankless" automobile era, with its freedom from the cranking drudgery, has greatly enlarged the province of the automobile in modern transportation.

ARNOLD'S IDEA.

"It is an evolution of motoring conditions which has given women the role of motorist," said Arnold. "I find that the deciding factor in her family's ownership of an automobile is the women of the house, almost invariably. When it comes down to finality in purchasing a car, the woman's opinion usually rules.

"Consequently, it is not surprising to me that there should be an instant increase in the number of women drivers, immediately upon the elimination of the arduous task of cranking. One reason why the popularity of the Hudson has been great among women is because of its simplicity. It is easily understood because it has far fewer parts than has the average automobile; a fact easily shown by inspection. In accepting simplicity as a logical standard motorists are correct, for where there are fewer parts to adjust, fewer to look after, naturally the up-keep cost of a motor car comes down to a minimum."

Sounds Good.

HALLIWELL HAS NOVEL AUTO RUN.

TRIP TO PALMDALE LOOKS GOOD TO WARNER MAN.

Over the Hills to the Country Beyond the Mint Canyon Where the Roads Are in Fair Shape and a Tour Can Be Enjoyed—Route Is Named by Ardent Motorist.

"For variety of scenery I can suggest no trip to compare with the run from Los Angeles to Palmdale, crossing Mojave desert to the Victorville road and then over the Cajon Pass to San Bernardino," said C. E. Halliwell of the Halliwell company.

Halliwell is one of the most adventurous of motorists in California and he makes at least one tour a week to some out of the way spot.

"The trip of which I spoke can be made in one day, but there cannot be much loafing," continued Halliwell.

"Starting from Los Angeles, the route leads out the San Fernando road and through the Newhall tunnel to the towns of Newhall and Saugus. A short distance beyond Saugus where the road branches, take the Mint Canyon road, through the hill to Acton and Palmdale. At Palmdale cut across the desert to the east.

"There are a great many forks on the road through the desert brush and motorists must be careful not to bear out too far to the right. What seems to be the main road goes to Little Rock and the hills directly back of Baldy. The road across is almost a straight line and more or less bad spots will be encountered on account of washouts.

"It is not necessary to go directly into the town of Victorville. The main road coming from the town goes over the Cajon Pass and into the San Bernardino Valley. From San Bernardino to Los Angeles the road is ideal for touring."

RELIABILITY RUN.

H. A. Noble, general passenger agent for the Great Northern Railway, suggests that the A.A.A. 1913 reliability run for 1912 be a "Seeing America First" tour from the Twin Cities to the North Pacific Coast. It is proposed that the route be either through the Yellowstone Park district or Helena. The Grand Forks Automobile Club is interesting the North Dakota State Automobile Association and individual clubs in an effort to get the 1912 A.A.A. reliability run to pass through that State.

The Fire Commissioners of Richmond, Va., have bought a combination motor fire-engine.

NEW LOZIER TYPE REA

Added Refinements for Coming Season.

Nineteen-thirteen Models to Follow Soon.

Much Is Promised for New Year to Come.

A number of innovations for 1913 Lozier cars which will be brought out by the Lozier com announced last week by H. A. Lozier at Detroit. In discussing the question of the motor car in America Lozier said he believed the manufacturers of the automobile of our country are far superior to those of foreign countries. The new features of the Lozier are interesting because of their probable solution of some of the traffic problems which are being much discussed by the motoring public everywhere.

"Improvements which are being made from year to year, on American cars of the higher grades are more in the nature of refinements," said Lozier before the body of automobile users. "These all tend to add in comfort, safety and luxury in motoring. It is in this view, we have incorporated in our 1913 car a number of features which we believe will be highly appreciated. This season's model, known as type No. 72, will have the left-hand drive, automatic lighting system and triple ignition. While few of the manufacturers have given much consideration to the left-hand drive, tourists, who have studied the conditions of this country and abroad, agree that the law and road conditions in the United States favor the left-hand drive.

GREAT SUCCESS.

The great success of the Lozier four, type, closed car with the left-hand drive which we placed on the market early in last year, that we not only sold a great number of these cars, but soon a demand began to be in for touring models with left-hand control. This led to our adoption of this type of drive in the touring car with our 1912 type '32.' It is believed in our factory that the success of the left-hand drive the success of the fore-door problem has been solved.

When this type of control was first introduced in this country, engineers were confronted with the problem of placing the levers on the floor in such a position as to be convenient and at the same time, in accordance with the lines of the body. By moving the steering wheel to the left of the car and the levers to the center, we have succeeded in placing the operating mechanism in the most relative position to the driver. This allows the construction of a touring body design. A great deal of thought and work on the gear shifting problem has enabled us to perfect a device which we believe will be highly appreciated. This season's model which has been prohibited by the Legislature in most large cities. The new automatic-level oiling system is one of the most important improvements made in the Lozier in years and fits simplicity to be to bring it favorably before the public.

Troughs mounted in the bottom of the crank-case are constructed so as to receive a good supply of oil delivered by a positive-acting gear-pump. These troughs are so arranged with the accelerator that when the throttle is opened for heavy load or high speed the oil level is raised to supply necessary lubrication. This arrangement automatically reduces the oil supply at low speed and tends to prevent the fouling of valves and

STEP FORWARD.

The ignition, which is another step forward in the development of the Lozier car, is an improvement which can be directly traced to experiments in long-distance races on the speedway. The necessity of a spark after a car has attained a certain speed is a well-known fact to experienced racing driver. The Lozier has a Bosch double magneto and one set of spark plugs are used. The battery, forms three separate sources of ignition. The current sent out by the adoption of left-hand drive have enabled us to make added refinements

The regulation of the carburetor is from the driver's seat by means of a small lever on the dash. We have included three new body designs in our 1913 array of Lozier models, the Knickerbocker Berline type, a seven-passenger closed car; the Meadowbrook roadster, a two-seated car with an extra seat on the running board, and the Larchmont five-passenger touring car. The Briarcliff, Lakewood and Riverside touring cars complete the line of Lozier cars for 1913."

THAT SILENT JACKSON.

Charles H. Thompson, agent for the Jackson car, is trying to prove his hearing that he may hear the engine of the new Jackson "Forty-five" run. "I've never heard anything like, or rather not heard," says Thompson. "It's the quietest running motor that has ever been put under the hood of an automobile. Some day in an unguarded moment I'm going to slip up on it unaware and see if I can't catch it making some sort of a sound." Yes, Thompson is proud of his new "Forty-five," and rightfully so.

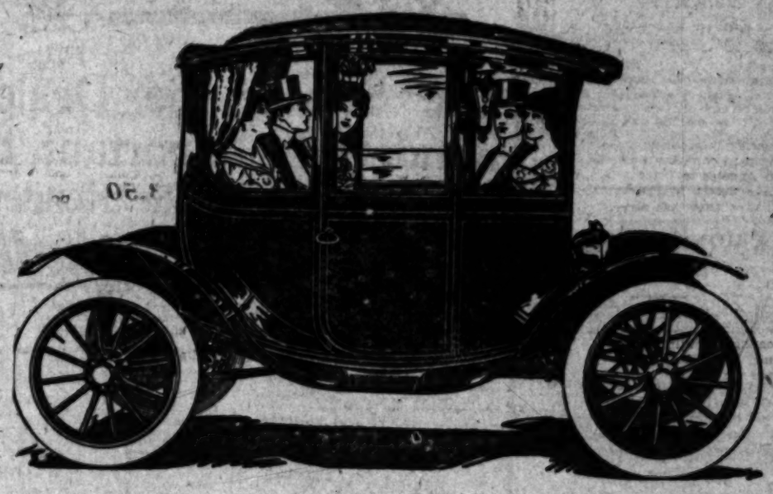
Flanders Colonial Electric



"Un equipage digne d'un roi" (freely translated: A carriage worthy of a king,) a coupe of exceptional beauty; seats five comfortably and rides without the least bit of sway to the body. Egress and ingress is a very simple matter in the Flanders Electric. The step is only 10 inches from the ground and the door is 23 inches in width. Has such exclusive features as worm gear drive—absolutely quiet—geared 14 to 1. Extra long wheelbase and long cradle springs give the Flanders Coupe exceptional steady riding qualities. Sashless French plate windows do away with the rattle so common to most electrics. A patent constant registering ampere hour dial shows just how much current you have used and how much you have left—a great help to the average operator. Finished in blue broadcloth or whipcord. FIAT THROUGH BAMBOO BRIDGE.

Tour Through Far East Is Replete With Adventure.

High-powered Car Travels Around the World.

Drops Into Stream but Is as Good as Ever.

One of the most interesting of automobile trips was that enjoyed by H. D. Lombard and wife and Fred Flint and wife. The party left San Francisco early in September, shipping their Fiat car, which was owned by Lombard, to the capital of Java. The tour covered many months and was through many countries. Harry H. Heard, drove the car, which carried the party on their long tour. He has much to say in favor of the Fiat car which did its work so well. It was put through some hard tests climbing grades, which in places were 30 per cent, and over and did not have to have one replacement. According to Heard one of the most interesting parts of the trip was through Java. His description of the country is as as follows:

"From Singapore the car was shipped to Batavia, the capital of Java. From there a tour was made to Sourabaya, which is a thousand-mile journey, with a side trip to Tosari. This entailed a climb of 9000 feet through many miles of jungle swarming with wild monkeys and other animals. Java is without doubt the wildest and most beautiful of all the tropical countries. The natives are accommodating and very polite, the Dutch having always required them to respect the white race and they squat and take off their hats to all white people.

"The roads were so narrow in some places and the grades so steep that in a storm I had once to tie the car to a tree and block the wheels to keep the machine from sliding off," says Heard. "In another instance when I was sent on the wrong road. I had to back the car two miles down the trail before finding a place to turn around.

BAMBOO BREAKS

"One of the most interesting of our experiences was that of a bamboo bridge, which cracked under us and when we were about in the middle it collapsed and we dropped thirty feet into a small river. Fortunately no one was hurt, but it took 150 natives five hours to get us out. The price for each person was 10 cents, which was considered good buy by them.

"From Java we shipped the car back to Singapore and traveled to Penang, crossing the pontoon bridge over the Parah River, said to be the largest in the world. After spending some time in Penang the car was shipped to Calcutta. We found the roads in India fine, and at one time counted seven steam rollers at work on one stretch of twenty-three miles. I did all the driving and taking care of the machine myself and in all my nine years of experience in this work I frankly say, I have yet to see the equal of this car."

NATIONAL CARS MAKE BIG HIT.

STYLISH TOURERS LOOK GOOD TO MANY MOTORISTS.

Earle Y. Boothe Is Kept Hustling Showing the Prospects Just How Good the New Models Really Are. The Cars Now Display at the National Motor Car Company.

Earle Y. Boothe of the National Motor Car Company has been the busiest man in town during the past week. The much talked of Nationals arrived and hundreds of interested people have thronged the salesroom and taken demonstrations in the new cars. The cars were exhibited for the first time last Sunday and on Monday, eight additional orders had been booked.

It is by far the handsomest car ever put out by the National factory and its completeness in every detail has aroused the admiration of all motorists who have examined it.

The first shipment consisted of a four passenger and a seven passenger model. The cars have the left hand drive with levers in the center. The motor is a marvel of engineering construction and there is not a single modern improvement that is not embodied in this car.

On account of the unusual rain, it has been impossible to take care of all who wanted demonstrations in these new Nationals, but Manager Boothe hopes to take care of all engagements this week.

An ordinance has been passed by the Common Council of Oshkosh, Wis., limiting the storage of oils to twenty barrels of kerosene, carbon oil or lubricating oil in a garage.

KNIGHT MOTOR STRIPPED FOR DAIMLER MAN HERE.

THE sectional Knight motor, which was exhibited at the New York and Chicago shows, will be in Los Angeles in the sales room of Smith brothers, No. 742-4-6 South Olive street, Tuesday. The Stearns factory expects to leave the motor here until May 10.

This motor has all the sleeves, cylinders and crank case cut open, showing the operation of the sleeves, eccentric shaft, connecting rods, silent chain, complete oiling system, and port openings. It is handsomely finished, all parts being polished or painted. It has, perhaps, attracted more attention than any other one single item in the automobile world this season, and if only from an educational standpoint alone, every motorist or any one who is interested in automobile motors, should thoroughly inspect and see this sectional motor in Los Angeles, while here.

At the two big eastern shows it was practically impossible for anybody to examine the motor closely at any time, due to the large crowds which surrounded this exhibit. The F. B. Stearns Company decided to send the model to the large cities of the United States that the people may thoroughly inspect the widely-discussed Knight type motor.

Harold C. Marston, one of the best Knight experts of the world, accompanies this motor and will be at Smith brothers' sales room in order to explain any details to interested parties.

Marston is an Englishman who was connected with the Daimler Company of Coventry, Eng., who has one of the engineers whom the Daimler people selected out of their efficient corps, to thoroughly test out the Knight motor. He was also one of the men who took the Daimler Knight motor through the Royal automobile trial, which brought world-wide renown to Charles Y. Knight.

Marston perhaps knows, due to these experiences, more regarding the Knight motor than any other man in the world, with the exception of the inventor. He is now in the employ of the F. B. Stearns Company, being one of the 200 men brought over from the Daimler factory when they decided to adopt the Knight motor in this country.

HENDERSON CAR NEXT TO COME.

GASOLINE MOTOR IS SOON TO MAKE ITS APPEARANCE.

Cole and Henderson Organization Has Many Calls for Demonstrations and the Prospects for Increased Business in the Future Are Better Than Ever Before.

The first model of the new Henderson gasoline motor pleasure car will soon make its appearance, according to the announcement made by R. P. Henderson, vice-president of the Henderson Motor Sales Company. The plans for building of this car are now completed and it is expected that it will be built in Indianapolis, although it is known that several outside cities are using their influence to locate with them.

Since the beginning of the Cole and Henderson organization, Henderson has had many calls for a car along this line and it has been contemplated for some time. The increasing demand for the Cole product and the inability to meet it has made it impossible to build two lines, separate in design and quality, in the same factory. The high standing of C. P. and R. P. Henderson in the automobile world has proved the foundation for the building of the Henderson car.

R. P. Henderson will head the new company. He is an able man, having been in the carriage business for a number of years. Among the stockholders in the company will be Charles P. Henderson, R. P. Henderson, Chester S. Ricker, Ira Carter and E. E. Rogers. Ricker, who will be associated with R. P. Henderson in the work, is a mechanical engineer of national reputation. The company is now building three classes in Indianapolis, each with different motors and parts, which will determine the car. The new model will have a 116-inch wheel base, self-starter and electric-light equipment. Unique arrangements have been made for carrying compartments and the gasoline tank will be peculiarly mounted.

The Service the Dealer Renders Is Important to the Service the Car Renders Insist upon knowing the ability, inclination and disposition of the dealer you buy your car from to make replacements, adjustments, repairs, etc. (free if you're entitled to it,) at least promptly and reasonably and also teach and post you how to take care of your car—even long after you have bought it.

"Long on promises and short on performance" is the regretful reputation of altogether too many dealers.

As you know, we have been in the Automobile business for eight years—we have sold the Mitchell exclusively and have sold thousands of them throughout California. There is not a disgruntled owner in the whole lot.

Of course Mitchell quality has something to do with that record, but we count our reputation for liberal care and treatment of our patrons one of our greatest assets as well as one of the most potent reasons why you should buy a Mitchell.

We present Mitchells to you entirely on the basis of efficiency, both in car service and dealer service. We guarantee the greatest value in both.

Mitchell

Efficiency is the watchword of Mitchell Agency service. It is found in every Mitchell department. It is that impulse which has driven the Mitchell car to the front in the moderate price field. It was efficiency that made the Mitchell the first four-cylinder car at $1250, away back seven or eight years ago, just as it has produced the Mitchell six-cylinder at $1900 today.

"Can't do it" was the taunt of many years ago, regarding the four-cylinder at $1250, and you'll hear it today concerning the sixes at $1500. History repeats itself—Mitchell efficiency has produced what inefficiency said could not be done.

We say without fear of successful contradiction that Mitchell cars offer greater value at their price than any other cars made and we know that we are absolutely unassailable in the claim to equally superior dealer service—in the liberal care of our customers.

Greater Efficiency in Our New Building.

Growth is the result of efficiency, but we are not yet content. We will soon move to our own new building at Twelfth and Flower, and it is to be the most complete automobile salesroom, garage and shop-service that efficiency can produce.

It will be a home every Mitchell owner will be proud of and to which every Mitchell owner will be welcome.

FLANDERS TWENTY

STUDEBAKER AUTOMOBILES

E-M-F THIRTY

A Timely Tip to Tardy Buyers

FLANDERS "20" TOURING CAR, $900

WE HAD HOPED that this season the usual spring scramble for automobiles would be averted in the case of Studebaker cars at least—but alas for well laid plans!

NOT THAT WE ARE COMPLAINING—not in the least. So far as we ourselves are concerned. Far from being unpleasant the condition that confronts the Studebaker Corporation this Spring of 1912 is well nigh ideal.

THAT IS SPEAKING from a manufacturer's point of view.

BUT FROM YOUR STANDPOINT—it is different. That's what we wanted to talk about—and to advise you how best to go about it to meet the conditions that obtain and ward off disappointment.

HERETOFORE AS YOU KNOW there has always been a tremendous—one might almost say a hopeless—shortage of Flanders "20" and E-M-F "30" cars in the Spring months—the rush season.

ONE OR TWO OTHER MAKES that were popular with buyers shared with us to an extent this pleasurable over-demand. Pleasurable, but disheartening at that. For one dislikes to disappoint so many good friends. Then too, when you know you make the best automobiles for the money you hate to see good friends forced to accept second bests.

THAT HAS ALWAYS BEEN THE CASE. We were powerless to remedy it. The E-M-F Company was young. Had made tremendous progress, but there was a limit to financial resources. And, anyway, factories can be equipped only about so fast. Machine tools can't be wished into form.

BUT THIS YEAR it was different. This big forty-five million dollar Corporation felt equal to the task of supplying the full demand for its two models—herculean tho it was.

WITH UNLIMITED CAPITAL at its command; with the largest and best equipped plants in the world; with an engineering and manufacturing organization second to none; contracts for material placed and deliveries assured; it seemed as if even our splendid sales force would be unable to keep ahead of the production department.

AND WE HAVE DONE ALL we set out to do. That is to say, we estimated that 50,000 cars (divided into 30,000 Flanders "20's" and 20,000 E-M-F "30's"), would surely supply the demand.

WE FELT SURE WE HAD NOT under-estimated the demand. We knew the unparalleled popularity of these famous cars not only throughout the length and breadth of America, but in all other civilized countries, but WE THOUGHT 50,000 CARS would do. Some of our competitors warned us it was too many—the rest of them didn't believe we would or could make that many.

WELL, WE'RE UP to schedule—a few cars ahead of it on April 1st and we carried over from March to April orders for 4722 cars. Most of them Flanders "20's."

LOOK AT THIS RECORD—it's almost unbelievable. In December, when would-be competitors were subsisting on snow balls and waiting for "the season" to open up, the Studebaker plants shipped 3800 cars. In January (inventory month), 4000.

IN FEBRUARY 4800; in March 4601, and the schedule for April is 6000—and, as we have said, we are a little ahead of the schedule.

IN THE WICKEDEST WINTER in fifty years, you'll recall. You'd have thought that would help us by retarding demand—it did leave other makers' cars on their floors. But seems as if the harder the conditions of roads and weather the more careful people are about selecting their automobiles.

6000 A MONTH IS THE SCHEDULE for April, May, June, July and August, and we'll make them, but as the little boy said, that's our almighty darndest.

WORKING OVER-TIME NOW—and men can stand only about so much of that. We don't like overtime at all. But we're doing our utmost to keep up with the demand—and we are still in sight of it, tho breathless.

THERE'S THE CONDITION as it stands today: It is up to you. What are you going to do about it?

ANALYZE IT: It means that a lot of people are going to have to wait for deliveries and a lot more will be disappointed—compelled to accept some other car—second best value—for all will not be able to get Flanders "20" or E-M-F "30" cars.

IT ISN'T SO BAD as it looks, in a way. The shortage of Flanders "20's" is more apparent than real—for our capacity is 50 more 20's per day than 30's. But it's bad enough. And it shows we have again fallen short of our ambition, hard as we have tried to realise it.

WE ARE TELLING YOU THIS because we have repeatedly asserted to dealers and the public that we would surely avert the Spring scramble. Now that we know that we have failed we feel that we owe you a frank statement of the facts.

OF COURSE IN TELLING YOU we cannot help telling our competitors also—and very naturally they will use it against us—try to persuade you to buy their cars on the same grounds as former years, "You can't get Studebaker Cars—either model." And that'll be true—unless you beat some other buyer to it.

WE FELT SURE we would be able to supply every possible customer with a Flanders "20"—but remember

THE ENGINEERS WHO BUILT the levee along the Mississippi were eminent and honest men and they were equally certain they would hold any floods that might ever come. But this has been an exceptional season—and the dykes have given way in places.

WE WERE EQUALLY CERTAIN we had gauged demand aright—thought we might be over-sanguine, in fact. But we under-estimated the flood of orders that have poured in increasing volume on us thru our big branches and dealers and our thousands of smaller, but no less alert representatives. We are swamped, despite our elaborate precautions!

IT'S MOST GRATIFYING to see how Flanders "20" has gained impetus with the years. It is the story of E-M-F "30" over again—and we have ceased to marvel at the way that car grows in demand, selling itself as fast as we can turn them out. And with scarcely any effort on our part.

IT'S THE ENDLESS CHAIN principle at work on mammoth scale. When we make a good car we state it. Every satisfied buyer tells three more—and each of the three tell three others—and it grows at a wonderful rate.

FLANDERS "20" ENJOYS that happy state today to an extent greater than any other car. And because there is more value—more automobile, more quality of performance, and better looks, than in any other 30 or 35-horse power car in the whole world at the price.

AND IT ISN'T CHEAP at any point. Better steel is not used in any automobile on earth. Get that—any—regardless of price. We use the best the science of metallurgy and of automobile engineering can specify.

IN APPEARANCE—it is just what you have been looking for, a smaller edition of a high-powered, high-priced car. It looks $3,000—it sells for $900.

WE FIND TWO CLASSES of people, mostly, buy Flanders "20" cars.

FIRST: DISCRIMINATING FOLK who will not have—will not be seen in—a poorly-made, noisy, under-powered and cheap looking car at any price.

THESE HAVE WAITED for years for the arrival of a car the man of pride but moderate means could buy and drive with pleasure. They found it in Flanders "20" as in no other light car. But these people are conservative too—they don't care to take risks or to experiment with new models.

SO THEY WATCHED Flanders "20" thro three seasons. The first, the usual discovery and corrective stage, was like most other new models. Then she struck her gait and for two seasons past, she has been steadily forging ahead till now she leads undisputed.

THERE ARE TWO WAYS to buy an automobile. One is to buy a cheap car because it is cheap in price and then pay in installments the difference between that and the value of a good car—in repairs and replacements of inferior parts—and then find you have nothing.

THE BETTER WAY is to determine just what is the lowest price at which a really first class 30 horse-power car can be made. Decide which car is backed by the best reputation for quality and service afterward. Then pay that difference in the first place and have not only quality but a car that in appearance as well as performance will be one your family will be proud to ride in.

THAT'S FLANDERS "20"—if you search the world over you will decide that way.

WHY, FRANCE BUYS Flanders "20's" to an extent greater than any other car made outside France. Germany also; Belgium, Italy, England. We exported 4,000 Flanders "20's" last year. Of what other American car can this be said?

EVEN THE GREAT E-M-F "30" does not enjoy the demand abroad that Flanders "20" does. The "30" is essentially an American product—made for American roads. The "30" accurately conforms to European ideals and engineering standards—and in competition with their own it sells as fast as we can supply them.

APPEARANCE is worth while—is worth all it costs. Beauty is more than skin deep in a motor car. Has to be made good to look good. A "tin car" cannot but look "tinny."

YOU'LL FIND IT'S CHEAPER by the end of the first year to pay the $150 to $200 more and own a Flanders "20" that looks the part as well as performs it—a car in which the repair and maintenance bills are practically nil—than to pay less and get so much less. And have everybody know it too.

BUT YOU'LL HAVE TO HURRY if you expect to get a Flanders "20" this Spring. There isn't an hour to lose. You may be too late now—your local dealer may be sold up to his full allotment. If so, we can't help him. Only way is to see him at once and get your order in.

AND DON'T EXPECT the dealer, just because you have know him so long, to take a verbal statement as an order. He can't. We won't permit him for one thing. If he hasn't bonafide orders for every car he has been alloted by a certain date, we insist on shipping such cars elsewhere to dealers who are heavily oversold.

FIRST SEE THEM ALL—hear all the salesmen's stories. Else you won't fully appreciate your Flanders "20" after you have gotten it. And you will never know how nearly you came to buying the wrong car! See them all. Then decide, and having decided delay no longer—else you will surely be disappointed, as more than 10,000 persons were a year ago.

REMEMBER THE STUDEBAKER GUARANTEE and Studebaker reputation and service goes with every car carrying the Studebaker name.

Of course you are coming to Detroit for Cadillaqua, the great water carnival, the fourth week in July. While here you will visit Detroit's famous automobile factories. We invite you to visit the Studebaker plants, the largest in the world.

Baseball.

Recreation ran up a score of 6 to 2 on Hazard the other afternoon at the latter's grounds and many witnessed the game. Hazard fell to the mercy of Recreation when they were defeated by a score of 14 to 7. Downey had a good game, but just couldn't get by, but let these Recreation boys have runs. These teams are generally rivals, but this game proved a big fall for Downey. They claim to be the superiors to Recreation and will show for a return game.

Baseball.

Sterling and Downey played on the latter's grounds one of the most exciting games that Downey has had this season. The entire game was fast and interesting. A large crowd witnessed the nine innings of ball tossing and every one was well satisfied with it, which resulted in Sterling's defeat by a score of 3 to 1. These teams will play outsiders if they wish games with these speedy little diamond chasers.

Next Wednesday at 3 p.m. Tufts-Lyons vs. Downey will be the first game of the season betwene these two teams. Tufts claims that they will make off with the candy and will not let Downey have a look-in.

Baseball.

In a closely-contested game, played last Sunday afternoon at Exposition Park, the Thirty-eighth-street team was defeated by the Hamburger boys by the score of 15 to 13. The contest was a hard-fought one, it taking thirteen innings to decide the affair. One side would forge ahead, only to be shortly tied and headed by their opponents.

Alexander, Fredericks and Paulsen composed the battery for the winners, while Moses was in the box for the losers. Dewey Paulsen caught a nice game for the Hamburgers and Capt. Fredericks of the same team registered a three-bagger.

Baseball.

Main-street defeated the Sixty-sixth-street boys in a hard-earned game of ball yesterday afternoon on the Main-street diamond. The score was 6 to 2, and Sixty-sixth-street went away looking sad. They will play the Main-street team a return game next Tuesday on their home grounds, and they claim that this game will be the honor of the Sixty-sixth-street boys if it takes a leg.

Basketball.

Custer was defeated by Recreation Center in a hotly-contested game of basketball played on the winners' grounds, by a score of 12 to 9. Recreation won by a few free throws which Custer let them have, otherwise they would not have gotten a score in the game, as Custer is a speedy team.

Baseball.

Custer won over Thirtieth-street in a game of baseball, which was played at Custer. The score was 1 to 0, and the game only lasted seven innings. As the game was called on account of darkness. It might have ended differently. Thirtieth-street fought hard to keep them from getting even one run, but a rally started and, when the bases were filled, a single was put into left field which let in the winning run.

Baseball.

Custer played Twenty-first-street on the latter's grounds and lost by a score of 10 to 9. Custer hopes to win from these sharks when they get a return game on their home grounds. The features of the game was the playing of Karson and Cole for the losers, while Bunny for the seniors made a hit with his team. Teams which want games will ask the captains of the players and assure themselves of good games.

Sunday-School.

The Baraca class from the First Christian Church won the championship series of games in the basketball league when they clashed for honors with the Calvary Baptist. The games were pulled off at the Y.M.C.A. courts, and much competition was witnessed. These boys also took the championship of the city in Sunday-school basketball, and are the proud holders of the title "Champs."

Baseball.

An eleven inning game was pulled off yesterday afternoon when the Fourteenth-street Intermediate and Avenue 21 Intermediate clashed for their rival game, which resulted in a tie score of 4 to 4. One would lead for a couple of innings, and then the other would tie and go ahead a run, and this kept up until finally they had to call the game off on account of darkness, but they will play it out on the first opportunity they get, for their honors are still outstanding. Their line-ups were as follows:

For Avenue 21 they were—Lord, shortstop; Schultz, catcher; Frink, pitcher; Adams, second base; Lehmer, center field; Lafferty, left field; Hawkins, third base; Puma, right field; Hasper, first base.

For the Fourteenth-street they were—Brayton, catcher; Hickman, pitcher; Broudy, first base; Eby, second base; Gotham, third base; Stieler, shortstop; Rayman, center field; Dudle left field; Erskin, right field. Mr. Jessen of the Fourteenth-street school acted as umpire, and made a hit with the boys of both teams, there being no trouble at all between them.

Baseball.

Steiner's and the Berlin Dye Works played a very one-sided game of baseball at the sand lot on the corner of Sixteenth and San Pedro streets last week, which resulted in an entire and helpless downfall for the Steiner boys by a score of 16 to 1.

Murray Haff is here. He will be the new manager for the Locomobile branch. He has a host of friends and will be welcomed into the local field of motoring. Murray is one of the famous automobile racing drivers and in the heydey of his pride defeated all comers. Now that he has settled down to being a modest business man Murray is ready to hand out a number of high-grade motor cars. He is trying to find a location for a handsome home for the Locomobile. If his ideas are carried out he will have a palace equal to the Packard.

Warren Vance has the inventive bee buzzing in his bonnet. He has applied for a patent on a self-starter and on several other devices.

He says he is troubled nights with brain fever and often has been known to awake feverishly, grab a pencil and dash off a sketch which when completed resembles nothing that he has ever seen himself. He expects that out of the chaos of undecipherable figures he has scratched that he can solve the puzzle which will mean an invention that will set the world by the ears. Warren is the new agent for the Case car but that is not the reason he has entered the field against Thomas Edison. The well-known autoist says he is convinced he has something great in his system. It may be an idea and if so his friend and partner, James J. Canavan, will locate the microbe.

Al Lusby is a druggist. At least he represented himself to be a pharmacist to Bud Rose, who was in need of attention a few days ago. The special desires of Buddie manifested themselves in a fierce longing for a drink of soda. Al was on hand to dispense the drink and now Bud says the Chalmers-Detroit man handed him a lemon, as the drink made him sick.

Capt. Harmon D. Ryus is raising a moustache. He looks fiercer than ever and more of a military genius. He has laid a wager with another prominent motorist that within three months he will have the largest hirsute adornment. It is a great race in which "Cap" has entered and the odds are in his favor. He is determined to win and the man who was first in three Baldy races should be there with the whiskers.

Charles Cotton was seriously hurt in the handball courts last week. He has a gash over his left eye in which several stitches were taken. Charley is one of the best players in town. He showed his grit and nerve and has not complained once, in spite of the fact that he is hors de combat for at least two more weeks.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

200,000 Adopt Them

Over one million of these tires have been used, on some 200,000 cars.

As a result, the demand today is six times larger than two years ago.

As another result, No-Rim-Cut tires now far outsell any other tire.

For all these users are advising others to adopt this patent tire.

126 Braided Wires

Vulcanized into the base of this tire are six flat bands of 126 braided wires.

These wires—by making the tire base unstretchable—give us a tire that need not hook to the rim.

So your removable flanges may be reversed—curved outward instead of inward. It is done in a moment. Then the rounded side comes next to the tire.

Our Patent Tire

These six flat bands of braided wires form the only way known to make practical tires of this type. And we control this feature.

That is why the demand for this new-type tire has centered on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

And that is why this tire has so quickly come to outsell all others.

Save 48 Per Cent

23 per cent of all old-type tires become rim-cut. This is shown by statistics.

No-Rim-Cut tires wipe out that loss completely.

Then we make these tires 10 per cent over the rated size. And that oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

You get both these savings in No-Rim-Cut tires. Yet they now cost no more than other standard tires. Don't you think such a saving worth while?

tatives and hundreds of automobiles had gathered in the shadow of the New Times Building awaiting the start.

THE VETERANS.

It was necessary to rope off Broadway for two blocks to hold back the crowds. The most excellent police regulations obtained throughout.

At six minutes after two o'clock a cheer went up from the throng as they saw the "Veterans' Division" step up to the line. Their gray hair was combed up stiff and aggressive and they smiled grimly as the looked at the younger runners seated on the side lines.

They ranged from 35 years to a mere youth of 49. They toed the mark for the long twelve-mile grind with a seriousness that boded ill for the younger runners.

R. E. Andrews, managing editor of The Times, stepped out immediately back of the line of eager waiting veterans and calling to the timers for the exact second of the start, sent the runners on their long grind.

Within a few minutes after the discharge of the first signal gun, a squad of eight men from Co. C of the Seventh Regiment hurried quickly to the starting line, and with quick military precision Col. Schreiber delivered a few short, sharp orders and before the spectators realized what had happened, the khaki-uniformed squad was swinging up Broadway at a slow doubtrot.

Immediately, the big automobile trucks began to disgorge themselves of the main body of the runners. Lithe youths with varicolored bathrobes and blankets began to take their place at the starting line. An Indian here, and a Welshman there, with a stolid German between them. A Japanese boy rubbed elbows with an eager long-legged son of an aristocratic family. The moving-picture men cranked their machines and recorded for all time the movements of the kaleidoscopic crowd.

Camera men from the newspapers rushed up to well known runners who were thought to be sure winners and secured snapshots. The great swarm of beautiful automobiles that were beaked about the starting point began to crank their engines. Policemen rushed back and forth, keeping the course clear. Harry Chandler stepped in front of the double row of waiting athletes and asked them if they were ready. The timers yelled their consent and with a sharp bark of a revolver, the main body of the Marathon runners were sent on their way.

As the white-clad figures trotted slowly up Broadway toward Temple the automobiles fell in line and followed. The long grind of Broadway and Temple was trying and the wise ones took it easy, just jogging until they reached the first down grade leading to Beaudry.

TWO LITTLE INDIANS.

As the big group of runners swung from Temple into Beaudry, there were little groups formed among them. Phillip Zeyouma and Guy Maktumo, two little Hopi Indian boys from Sherman Institute began to run in true Indian fashion, the one directly back of the other. They held this formation nearly the entire distance of the great race, Maktuma finally gave out and Zeyouma went on alone. Peter George and E. H. Lee, ancient rivals in Marathons, picked each other out and watched the pace. The young and inexperienced runners had scuttled fast at the head, but the expedienced men adopted a slower pace and saved their strength for the finish.

At the corner of Sunset boulevard and Beaudry, a great crowd had gathered and watched the runners toil up the grade. Many automobiles moved slowly by the sides of the runners and offered suggestions until warned away by the timers and checkers.

All of Sunset boulevard was lined with spectators as though for a carnival procession. At almost every dress street boys would run out and offer a wet sponge or half of lemon to the runner, keeping pace with him for half a city block.

It was several miles out Sunset boulevard and close to Vermont avenue where the first of the veterans' brigade was overtaken by the younger runners. Edward R. Warman, a 40-year-old youth, had lagged a trifle behind the veteran squad. He grinned amiably as the youthful runners flitted by.

At Western avenue, where the turn of the course sent the runners back on their loop to Los Angeles and half of the course was over, the younger squad found that they had overtaken all of the veteran squad but one man.

"Is there anyone ahead of us," gasped a sturdy youth as he loped by the timers' stand.

"Sure. That 49-year-old butcher passed by this stand twelve minutes ago," said one of the officials.

The word went back along the line of runners that one of the veterans had loped away in the lead and was sure to come in first unless better time was made.

AFTER THE VETERAN.

The two Hopi Indian boys heard the news and settled down to serious business. Paul Westerlund of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, Lee of the Pastime A. C. of San Francisco, and George of the L. A. A. C. suddenly forgot their rivalry and began to run to overtake the fleeting "veteran" who was leading them by twelve minutes.

Down Western avenue heading toward the city and between rows of automobiles the runners rushed. At each checking-point they appealed for information of the fleet veteran. At each point they heard that he had gone by, running smoothly and traveling fast.

The automobiles following the racers began to take an interest in the veteran ahead and the spurts between the youthful men were forgotten as they tore by the runners to locate the leading runner.

Coming onto Sixth street, the runner was first sighted. He was running smoothly and easily and neither looked to the right nor the left, but was employing every ounce of his energy in running.

THE FLEET BUTCHER.

The automobiles drew up by his side and they noted his smooth, elastic stride and the freedom with which he swung his arms. His white running trunks were not even moistened by perspiration and his red hair was waving crisply in the air. Down the big thoroughfare he loped and occasionally ran onto the sidewalk for a chasme, but kept to the middle of the road as a rule.

As he came near the finish and it was sure that he would win in his class, and establish a record for a man of his age for running the distance, the spectators began to offer suggestions as to his pace and advising him to take it easy.

Paying no attention to them with the exception of smiling easily as he jogged along, he trotted around the corner of Olive and Seventh street and was the first man to finish the Modified Marathon.

He was S. T. Stagg, aged 49 years, and the proprietor, among other things, of a meat market at Seventh and Valencia streets.

Stagg was hustled into the dressing-room of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and advised by a half hundred eager assistants to "have a rub," "have a shower," "take a nice rest on that cot" and other comforting suggestions.

SCORNS REST.

"Gee," said Stagg. "My darned foot hurts. Do you know that I had blood poisoning in my left foot a week ago and had to sew a bandage about it. The confounded thing is on the sole and I was worrying about it all the time," and he started to strip from his trunks and reached for his suit case, containing his street clothes.

"Surely you are going to take a rest?" a half dozen people asked solicitously.

"Not on your life," said Stagg. "This nice little run of twelve miles has given me a good appetite for dinner and what is more I have to get out to my meat market to see that my Sunday orders are filled."

And Stagg, 49 years old, and the first man to cross the line in the big marathon, hurriedly dressed and shook hands with his friends and rushed out to fill his Sunday meat orders.

MOTOR BRIGADE RENDERS FIRST AID TO RUNNERS.

Course Is Patrolled by Pageant of Late Model Nineteen-twelve Motor Cars, and the Marathoners Are Watched Over by Eagle-eyed Drivers, Who Are Ready to Lift Them Into Comfortable Tonneaus.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

FIRST, second and third aid, rendered by the automobile squad of The Times Marathon, was a feature of the best foot race ever held in this city. With a course patrolled perfectly by the latest model motor cars, and with the runners under the vigilant eye of well-trained truck drivers who followed the squads from the start around to the finish, the motor brigade rendered most valuable service.

There was not a moment during the race that a runner was in any danger of being neglected. If he had faltered, a motor car was at his heels and he would have been tenderly assisted to a place in the car. This would have disqualified the entrant, but it was comforting to know the machines were ready for an emergency.

J. S. Conwell, in the Columbia-Knight, led the emergency squad with two physicians. He was prepared for trouble, but fortunately no trouble marred the race. With Clarence Smith at the wheel, the Columbia was sent over the entire course and there was not one second during the hour and thirty minutes of fierce grind that the Silent Knight was not within call.

Ralph Hamlin with a Franklin went away from the start with the last runners and followed the men over every foot of the course. He also had two physicians and with him was De Witt Van Court, who kept tab on the runners and was the man in authority who could say just when a man had over-exerted himself.

The Franklin was close behind every runner during the entire race and the man who won second place in the long Phoenix road race saw the runners stick to the road clear to the finish. Though the Franklin was ready, Hamlin was proud to see that every runner refused aid and finished with a dash over the tape.

MOVING PICTURES.

P. A. Renton, with the Velie, had the unique position of the parade. It was necessary to take moving pictures. It was more necessary to keep out of the way of the runners. Renton did all of this and even more. He circled the entire course, enabled the moving picture men to wind out their films on Sunset boulevard along Western avenue and on Seventh street and reached the tape before the first man arrived.

Action pictures of every foot of the entire course were taken and when the Hopi Indian came swinging across the tape, Renton was there with the big machine and the little red man ran into the finish without a fear or a tremor. He had won and he was not even afraid of the rapid fire camera men who swarmed around him.

Warren Vance in a Case car was one of the willing motor car dealers to lend a helping hand. He helped to carry the officials around to the course, to their several stations and then followed the runners with his tonneau empty but ready for a faltering one. With him was James J. Canavan, who also was prepared to give first aid.

Tom Williams, of the H. O. Harrison Company, drove an Everitt six-cylinder over the course. He carried Photographer M. Rafart and gave the camera man a chance to snap the athletes on the turns and in the stretches. The Everitt was used to advantage during the race and Williams showed a willingness to do everything in his power to make the run a success and to secure pictures of the plucky men in the contest.

Harry Beachey at the wheel of the new Locomobile six-cylinder was also there every minute. He brought the big "Six" to the starting line just in time to gather up a squad of officials. He whisked them out along the course and then was ready to pick them up after the race. The Locomobile was needed every minute, but was there every second the call came.

BIG PACKARD.

The Packard touring car carried the official starters around the course. The comfortable tonneau of the big machine was given a place of honor and was well in the van of the racers as they wound their way around the course. The Packard is the latest model of the high-grade motor cars sent to the local agency and made its first appearance on the streets yesterday during the Times Marathon.

The car threaded its way through the crowded streets and when it was necessary to make a fast dash, Tommy Reynolds, the plucky little driver, kept the machine under perfect control, but made fast time in spite of the crowds, bringing Harry Chandler and H. E. Andrews, two of the starters, through to the finish in time to see the winner breast the tape.

Clarence Smith in a Stearns "Silent-Knight" was one of the motor car dealers who took a keen interest in the Marathon. He drove the car himself and reported exactly one hour before the start. He was there when the men went away and was given an official position with the clockers close behind him. The Stearns-Knight was one of the latest models just received from the factory and was shown on the streets for the first time.

S. T. Stagg,

Aged 49, who won the veterans' cup.

"This is a great race" was the comment of Smith as he drove to the line to receive his orders. He showed the control of his sleeve-valve motor by sending it almost at snail's pace through the throng only to let it out at top speed in order to reach the leader of the great race. Clarence was one of the yeoman who are to be thanked.

Frank Howard, local agent for the Buick, was one of the dealers who offered a handsome Buick "Forty." This car was sent out in charge of Howard Tuttle and was at the start ready to render first aid. The Buick kept its place in the long pageant of motor cars and was also at the finish where several checkers were carried.

RUESS THERE.

"Wild Bill" Ruess was one of the Trojans who took an active part in the race. When every man had left the starting line Bill opened the cut-out of the Pope-Hartford and raced for Temple street. He caught the runners at the crown of the hill and then cut across Flower street and intercepted them again at Sunset boulevard.

Bill took a keen interest in the old man's division. He was there every second of the race and timed the older runners. Prof. Warman was timed at Edgemont street and Hollywood boulevard and to that place his time was 49 minutes 28 seconds. He was making a gallant run. Prof. Warman decided to finish and his running was sensational.

S. T. Stagg, the fastest man in the old men's division, was caught by the Pope-Hartford at Western and Melrose avenues and Ruess clocked him in 50 minutes and 55 2-5 seconds from the start. At this point the plucky butcher looked like a winner. This 49 year-old runner had a stride that was wonderful even to experienced runners. He took to the sidewalks and kept plugging along.

With the Pope-Hartford racing along at a terrific clip Bill had to keep moving, after his many stops, to be in the van of Runner Stagg, who came through like a mill race. "This man looks like a winner," was the comment of Ruess, as the nervy runner neared the home of the famous winner of the Baldy race. The Pope-Hartford was stopped at Fourth street and Western avenue, just eight miles from the start and four miles from the finish.

At this point, when eight miles had been covered, not a runner was in sight on the Hollywood stretch and Butcher Stagg went racing across the intersection where Ruess clocked him in 58m., 6 3-5s. This was a run that made even Wild Bill sit up and take notice. Stagg was in line for first place at this point.

Here he took to the sidewalks. This seemed to be a mistake, but the runner went on to the pavement

SCHOOLS LOSE FINE ATHLETE

Many Will Be Graduated End of Term.

Many of Boys Hold Coa Track Records.

Retirement Will Give Ne Blood a Chance.

Perhaps never before have so many the track athletes graduated from the high schools in any one season as are to receive their sheepskins this coming June. The very cream of the southern cinder-diggers are getting ready to their prep. schools and the majority of them are on their way to the different colleges of the Coast.
It is certainly to be hoped that these athletes will not give the southern institutions of learning the go-by until they have made a thorough investigation of the conditions, for it is certain that the advantages of the northern universities over the local colleges are becoming fewer and fewer as the days go by.

The galaxy of stars, who leave prospects this year is so big that it is a hard job to know where to begin. The biggest losers by graduation this year will be Citrus Union High School athletes of the Coast, and Occidental Academy, both of these institutions losing practically their whole team.

The man who graduate from the Citrus High School at Azusa are Hamilton Whitted, Stonewall Jackson, Hendricks and Daniels. Herb Whitted, the auburn-headed beauty, is the holder of one world's and one Coast interscholastic record. His best efforts are as follows: 120-yard hurdles, 15 3-5s.;
220-yard hurdles, 25 2-5s.; high jump,
5ft.; broad jump, 21ft., and discus throw, 114ft.

Stonewall Jackson is almost as talented as his classmate having records of 10 flat in the 100-yard dash, 23 1-5 in the two-twenty, and 54 4-5 in the quarter. Hendricks holds the Coast interscholastic record for the hammer throw with 161ft.
9in., while Daniels has made the quarter in 53s.

While these four men show more class than usually leaves school in one year, they form only the beginning of the bunch of stars who get into college athletics this time. Coast Seminary loses three men who are practically in the same class as the men from Azusa.

Bill Annis, Coast champion in the 440 and mile, and generally admitted to be the peer of any man in the game by the shorter race, is one of the luminaries the Tiger Cubs will lose, he holder of the world's high school record for the fifty-yard dash of 5 1-5, and an equally fast man in the other dashes, with his team-mate, Homer Cook, will also receive their diplomas in June.

The graduates from these two institutions alone would form a track team which would make the best of them hump, but there are lots of just like them from all over the high schools in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles High School is also to be numbered among the victims. Bill
Ruess, one of the greatest all-round athletes ever produced at the institution, now the hill, and captain of the team this last year, heads the list of graduates. Bill put the shot somewhere over 40ft., threw the discus over 120ft., high jumped 5ft., not to mention being able to do several other stunts.

Arnold's veteran sprinter of the 100 and 220, and White is another who will be "no more" at the school next year
Ralph Berger, who runs the quarter in about 51 seconds, and Dick Coleman, shot putter and discus thrower, are also lost to the school, that is to lose track stars who are liable to be heard from next year, as Redlands High, Frank Wiggins has made an enviable record as track coach down there this year and one of the men whom he has developed and who graduate this summer is Hentsche and Laird.

Hentsche is a husky youth who can put the weights to no small advantage, not to mention being a bear on the football slayer. He is one of the best hammer throwers in the league and should do better as he gets older. Laird is the real thing as a sprinter and hurdler, being the man to lower the colors of the fleet Whitted in the low barrier event and being a consistent 25-seconder.

Pasadena High is another school that produces a holder of a national record, the distinction of this up-country town is no less a person than the long-legged wonder of the pole-vault away from all comers in the south in the A. A. U.
meets over twelve feet, one and Bergstrom is also a good broad jumper of no mean ability.

Pasadena High is sending out
Jack Keenan, a lengthy youth who can do just about any event on the track, but whose chief ability seems to be in the hurdles and high jump, he does 5 ft. 10in. in the high without any particular form and excels in the low sticks and in the long.

Santa Paula High is providing the Brothers, all-round athletes of note after their brother, who held the high jump record for serveral years and who hailed from Pomona. These lads make the jumps look easy, but there are lots of just like them from all over the high schools in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles High School is also to be numbered among the victims. Bill
Ruess, one of the greatest all-round athletes ever produced at the institution, now the hill, and captain of over 120ft., high jumped 5ft., not to mention being able to do several other

Arnold's veteran sprinter of the 100 and 220, and White is another who will be "no more" at the school next year
Ralph Berger, who runs the quarter in about 51 seconds, and Dick Coleman,

GOODRICH TIRES

Goodrich—the Original American Clincher—started right 15 years ago, by adopting and perfecting the integral

Molded Construction

Tires "built as a unit, cured as a unit" proved greatest in strength, —cohesion, —mileage service, then, as now.

Today, the strongest adherents of other methods are turning to the molded process. They know now it is the best way to make a good automobile tire.

We did the experimenting long ago—and offer users a two-fold benefit:—

Sound construction to begin with and more than a decade of improvements—including the inimitable White Tough Tread

Goodrich Tires are made in all styles, to fit all rims, and to suit all purposes.

There has never been a season when the direct, unforced demand for these tires did not exceed by thousands the utmost capacity of our factories. The issue has been met this year by a tremendously increased capacity which will enable us to care for both dealers and users to the fullest extent.

Now is the time to decide.

Will it be — good value?
— organized service?
— a square deal?
or——"just tires"?

SIGNAL OF DISTRESS.

Oakland Motor Car Company Adopts S. O. S. for Flashing News to the Factory.

"S. O. S." flashing through the air from wireless equipment has more than once sent consternation into the hearts of thousands of people along the Western Coast this winter, for the signal means "Save our ship" and indicates that a vessel is in dire distress and greatly in need of aid. It is the signal for men to get busy and exert their mightiest efforts in bringing relief to the senders. So great heed is given this appeal that the Oakland automobile agents here have adopted the signal in sending to the factory for more machines, the interpretation given the initials by the Oakland people being "Send on shipment."

In explaining the matter yesterday Gilbert Woodill, sales-manager here for the cars, said: "Our telegrams to the East are of such frequent occurrence that the tolls have amounted to high figures, and as we have made arrangements with the factory at Pontiac, Mich., to rush machines here on the slightest notice, we have adopted the 'S. O. S.' to save both time and money. When the message reaches the factory it is the signal for everyone to get busy and rush a shipment of cars to us."

The city of Benson (Neb.) has purchased a fire truck and plans to equip the fire department entirely with motor apparatus in place of horse-drawn equipment.

MOTOR BRIGADE.

only two miles away, and his stride showed him to be in such fettle that Bill sent the Pope racing to the line, only to reach there a few minutes before Stagg, the first man to finish, came swinging down Seventh street.

F. W. Reynolds was one of the men who was clocked eagerly by Rhem. He was up in the van of all the runners for nine miles of the race. As he made the run into Western avenue his stride was excellent and he was less than half a mile behind Stagg. Reynolds showed a wonderful sprint as he neared the pavement on West Seventh street, but his feet were blistered and it was hard going for the plucky runner.

HEAVY BRIGADE.

The heavy brigade of trucks was the feature of the finish. Just how the big White truck looked to the soldiers it will be hard to say. When the men of the Seventh Regiment came swinging in with their guns they were tired. What could have looked better than the bed of the big White truck which was open and ready for them?

The Kissel-Kar was another commercial vehicle which rendered excellent service. Donald Butterfield sent his two and a half-ton truck and it was sorely needed. He offered the truck for anything the management of the race might suggest and the officials suggested many things, but the Kissel was equal to the task.

The Mais truck, sent by P. A. Renton, was on hand every second and helped to cart the athletes away from the finish after they had been rubbed down carefully in the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The Mais looked good to the tired boys and the well-balanced truck proved a bed of ease for the men who had fought their way through the twelve-mile grind.

PACKARD TRUCK.

The big Packard truck, the largest of the commercial car brigade, was a feature of the race at the start. The truck was given a job that many drivers would have balked at. Started at 1 o'clock, just one hour before the racers were sent away the Packard's task was to deliver the checkers at every checking point and then finish the race around the course before any of the men had started.

Earle C. Anthony offered the truck and he knew what he was doing. The Packard went swinging away from First and Broadway at 1 o'clock. It must cover the twelve miles, make many stops, arrange for the checking and then complete the trip in at least fifty minutes to be there at the start. Well, to be explicit, the Packard finished with minutes to spare and was at the finish to help in the glad work of removing the runners to their several places.

W. H. Halliwell, the Warner Autometer man, had full charge of the timing. With his brother, Charles Halliwell, manager of the local Halliwell branch, and with five expert clockers, Halliwell came to the starting line in his Hudson "thirty." He was one of the men who was welcomed most heartily. On him depended the time of the winner.

When the first squad was sent away the big Warner chronometer was started and the time of each man was tabulated. Not until the last man had left the tape could the Hudson be sent over the course. Then it was that Halliwell computed the time and shot across to the finish where his hard work commenced.

When the plucky little Indian bounded like a scared cotton-tail across the tape Halliwell was prepared for the surprise which the megaphone man handed the crowd. Before the little Hopi Indian was stretched on the training table Halliwell announced him the winner and the crowd went wild.

The Warner man smiled blandly. He praised his clockers and then was ready to clock the second, third and fourth man right through to the soldiers. He kept tab on every runner in the race.

Charles Swiggett, U.S.C.

Finished seventh.

Soldiers.

COMPANY C. MARCHING TEAM WINS HARD TEST.

THE marching team from Company C won the military event and captured the Otis Trophy. This soldier feature was one of the thrillers of the great race and it was not till the last half mile of the stretch was entered that the winners could call the race their own.

Three members of Company A broke away from their squad and made fast tracks for the finish. Private John B. Waite won first and landed a button for finishing within the time limit of two hours. Private Warjley was second and England was third man to claim military-athletic honors.

Young Waite showed that he was in a class with the lighter clad athletes who finished earlier in the race, but was greatly handicapped on account of the weight of rifle, belt and bayonet as well as the heavy uniform and marching shoes.

Company A's squad was a great disappointment to the armory rooters but they were not there with the exception of the three soldier boy stars above mentioned.

At the start Company F took the lead with a stretch of double time up North Broadway and the lead was held for two miles. At this point, another command slipped the fighting men into the high and the gap was increased to a good half mile.

Company A came to life at this point and went after glory in a charging run which landed them on Western avenue before the other two squads had passed Vermont.

Capt. Anderson of C was leading his men at an easy pace, but the space eating strides of the Irish Brigadiers kept them in sight of their rivals till Sixth street was reached, and tore out a little of the double and caught Capt. Frank McReynolds and his band, before they arrived at Westlake.

The boys were well spent when they turned into Seventh street but they kept up the pace and fought for every inch of the course.

Lieut. Sidener led out with some double-time at the top of Seventh-street hill, but it did not last long and the re-action caused the squad to slacken down.

Capt. Anderson was suffering so much that he staggered and it was necessary for two of his men to support him. Capt. McReynolds stood the pace well up to the last mile, but here he was forced to lean upon the shoulders of two young soldiers.

This cut down the speed of the F company squad and they were soon passed by C. For a short distance the C bunch ran and carried their captain, but when they neared the finish they were too near exhausted to show much fight.

None of the men fainted, but the strain was a hard test on their nerves and some were hardly able to walk after they had once given up. The Co. F squad came in with their captain smiling, but being supported by two privates. The losers, too, took their defeat in a sportsmanly manner and congratulated the boys who had won.

It is not often that an officer will go out on such a march as yesterday's, but Captains Anderson and McReynolds as well as Lieut. Sidener are to be congratulated upon their iron nerve.

Capt. Anderson had undergone an operation the day before and one of his feet was incased in a bandage under the shoe. At the finish, the officer was treated by Maj. Decker and a corps of trainers, who were surprised to see the condition of the man's foot.

The showing made, and the nerve displayed by the officers and men in The Times Marathon yesterday, places the Seventh on the athletic map and gives evidence of efficiency of the command.

Col. W. G. Schreiber, was on the course as military referee, accompanied by Maj. Decker, ranking surgeon of the regiment. Both officers were well pleased with the performances of the boys and expressed themselves as delighted with the race, the greatest athletic event ever staged in the West.

Compare Such Simplicity With Other Motors

Here is where simplicity counts most. An inaccessible motor, or one that is not dust proof, or one that hasn't sufficient power, or one that is not quiet, will interfere greatly with your motor car satisfaction.

You won't find such another motor as this. It is in Howard E. Coffin's greatest automobile, the

New* Self-Starting HUDSON "33"

The simplicity of this motor is typical of the entire car.
The car has approximately 1000 fewer parts than are used in the average automobile.
Every vital part of the car is instantly accessible.
This means lower cost in making, lower maintenance cost, because there are fewer parts to get out of adjustment and there is nothing to interfere with quick attention to any portion that might need it.
Every detail of finish—development of beauty—quietness, smooth operation and power is noticeably evident in the New Self-Starting HUDSON "33."
The self-starting device is in itself in accord with the rest of the car.
It has but twelve parts and weighs only 4½ pounds.
Contrast that with other starters.
This one is 98 per cent right as shown in hundreds of tests.
Other cars have some of the advanced features of the self-starting HUDSON "33," but none other has them all.

Compare with any car—regardless of price.

Fully equipped with Disco Self-Starter, top, Demountable rims, BIG tires, windshield, head lights, oil side and tail lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank, and all the price is $1750 f. o. b. Los Angeles.

Speedometer adds immensely to the pleasure and safety of automobiling

The Stewart is the most efficient speed indicator manufactured. It never makes a mistake; never misses a second to the hour or an inch to the mile; others may cost more but they cannot do more.

Four out of every five speedometers in use are Stewarts.

The plants that make the other 20 per cent haven't the same facilities; haven't the same production; so they can't manufacture as well or as cheaply.

Stewart Speedometers are built the strongest and last the longest.

Magnetic principle, employed in 85 per cent of all speedometers, making possible the use of skew moving parts; no wear; ball and jewel bearings; beautiful workmanship; remarkably accurate; 100,000-mile season odometer; 100-mile trip register, can be set back to any tenth of a mile; positive drive; no springs; unbreakable flexible shaft; drop forge swivel joint that will outwear car; noiseless road wheel gears.

INDIANAPOLIS RACERS READY.

Marquette-Buick Added to List of Starters.

Rumor That Race Is to Be Postponed Is Denied.

Practice for the Big Speed Event Is Started.

William Thomson of Battle Creek, Mich., has entered a Marquette-Buick in the 500-mile international sweepstakes race, to be held on the Indianapolis Speedway, May 30. The car will be driven by Billy Lisman of the same city. The racer which is entered is an improvement on the old type of Marquette-Buick, which Burman and Chevrolet drove in their first days of motor car racing sport as one of the fastest American-made cars. The car is rated as 100-horse-power, and has 894 cubic inches displacement, which is only six inches under the limit of 500 inches placed on cars in the race.

Although it has been rumored that the 500-mile race was to be postponed, it is given out on the Speedway, by the management, that the race will positively not be postponed for any reason, except that in event of bad weather the contest will not be held until Saturday, June 1. Entries are coming in steadily, and there is sure to be thirty cars ready for the start, which is the limit placed on the race by the promoters. A greater crowd is expected than ever before, and plans have been carefully laid for the care for the mass of people.

Practice for the long grind has started, and many of the cars are to in each day on the brick oval in their tests. The National and Stutz cars have been speeding on the track and witnesses say that last year's record will be a joke when the next classic race is over. Most of the entries will be in Indianapolis May 1, in order to make their tryouts. Those who are already there say that the track is in much better condition than ever before at the opening of the season. When Starter Warner gives the word on Decoration Day, it will probably mean the starting of the greatest race ever pulled off.

While the Marmon racer won the great International Sweepstakes Motor Speedway classic last year, there will be no car from the Indianapolis factory this year entered in the big race. Notwithstanding this fact, the stock Marmon "32" cars are having a real test of the racing service as one of the most popular trials of every Marmon car is not includes a two days' workout on the big two and one-half mile brick track.

The Marmon testers have orders from the factory not to indulge in racing, but the temptation is usually too great, and the racing men who are out early for practice on the Speedway are treated with an exciting contest with the test cars. The Marmon cars are not built especially for speed, but the Nordyke & Norman Company have found that two and three days' work on the Speedway track are better in giving a stringent test to the machine than twice the time spent in ordinary driving.

DIAMOND HOME MOST ORNATE.

BUILDER NELSON IS IN THE NEW TIRE HEADQUARTERS.

Handsome Structure Is Completed and Concern Moves With Large Force to Headquarters Which Represents Down-to-date Railroad Office—Many Improvements Shown.

One of the handsomest salesrooms in Los Angeles is that of the Diamond Rubber Company at Eleventh and Olive streets.

The past week has been a busy one for Manager F. Q. Nelson. He has been moving a big job, and despite the fact that the work on the mahogany woodwork in the office and salesroom had not been finished he moved his business from the new quarters. The new quarters of the Diamond Company has several new features. On the floor there is a large counter enclosing the office force, much like the office of a railroad office. Office business can easily be conducted on the counter without hanging over a railing or peeking through a small window.

The sales department is on the right side. There is a counter and behind this wall is a large mahogany case. This looks like a cabinet, but when the signal is given, doors open and it comes as an elevator from the floor with whatever tires are ordered. With this system it is not necessary to disfigure the salesroom with piles of tires. The casings can be kept at all times in a properly ventilated cellar, where the tires will be at the same temperature all the time and will not deteriorate as tires do when improperly stored.

During the past month, Manager Nelson found it necessary to increase his sales force, and during the next few weeks will increase his outside force. The Diamond business has reached a tremendous figure during the past year, but Manager Nelson's motto will be: "Keep on Going," and he will never be satisfied that every man but one used Diamond tires. Nelson would want them all.

GOLDEN CONTEST FOR CRAFT GOLF MEDAL.

A. C. Perley won the Craft golf medal for which the women of the San Gabriel Country club have been playing in a series of matches since October, last.

Miss Porter has the best average of 96 net for the whole series. Her handicap, which was 23 when the tournament began, has gradually been reduced to 18 during the contest.

Yesterday was the last match of the series and took place on Saturday morning over the nine-hole course, with Miss Clark acting-captain. Miss Porter and Miss Marion Clark tied for first place, with 98 net, and will be set for one another, but in any case the CONTEST FOR CRAFT GOLF MEDAL.

Mrs. Perley was the Craft medal for which the women of the Gabriel Country Club are playing in a series of matches since October, last.

Mrs. Perley has the best average for the whole series, which was 93 when playing, has gradually risen to 94 during the contest.

The final match of the series was played Saturday morning over the Alhambra course, with Miss Marion Craft acting-captain. Mrs. Perley with 90 net, and Miss Marion with 99 net, for one hole. Mrs. Perley's result will not affect Mrs. Perley's ultimate win of the medal for permanent possession.

The other players were Miss Shirley Burns, Mrs. and Miss Pierce, Mrs. and Miss Roberts, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. A. C. Scales, Miss Halsted and Mrs. Gabrielle Elliott.

Miss Constance Clark is also organizing a ladies' match for which competitors are asked to hand in three duly-indorsed score cards during the month for handicapping purposes. In fact, the ladies of the San Gabriel and Victoria country clubs certainly set a fine example of enthusiasm in the game. They are the only two that can claim any sort of organized sequence.

Mrs. Perley's home score for yesterday's match was particularly good, and is as follows: 6, 6, 6, 5, 5, 6, 6, 5, 4—53.

It gives considerable promise for the future. Mrs. Perley has only been playing golf a few months, and finds this medal a most encouraging testimony to her perseverance.

Miss Marion Clark ranks second for the best average scores with 91.

The sunshine has made a marked difference in the length of the grass in the bunkers, so the ladies got up a polite, shy, tentative little petition to the effect that it might be cut. When asked to sign it, Mrs. Gabrielle Elliot gave a characteristic reply: "I never get in the bunkers, so I did not notice it. And if I did, I should be grateful to the grass for concealing my disgrace!"

WATCH YOUR CLUTCH.

Two Reasons Given for Slipping Habit Which Annoys the Nervous Motorist at Times.

There are two reasons for a slipping leather clutch. The first and more common is that the leather has become coated with oil. The second cause is the lack of sufficient tension on the clutch engagement spring. When the clutch slips the operator should disengage the clutch and then feel the leather. If it is damp the trouble is that the clutch is covered with oil. The cure is to absorb the oil from the clutch leather. This is accomplished by powdering it thickly with Fuller's earth and allowing it to stand about three hours.

A pint of gasoline poured over the clutch leather will also soak up the surplus oil. When the slipping clutch is caused by the weak pressure of the spring it will have to be remedied by changing the adjustment. If there is no adjustment nut on the spring the pressure may be increased by placing a washer between the spring and its seating. This will tend to compress the spring and to push the clutch into a closer engagement. In case the spring seems weak or defective so that changes of adjustment do not suffice the owner of the car should send to the factory for a new spring.

Overland

THE greatest difference in popular priced cars today is the difference in price. And this entirely due to the size of the plants that produce them.

Our thirty-five horsepower touring car is priced at $1200. You seldom find a car of this size and type much below $1500, for the very simple reason that no other factory can produce it for this price. If they could they would. So why should you pay the difference?

Compare values and you will quickly realize the utter folly of paying $1500 for a car that can offer no more than our Model 60 at $1200.

Cross Country Model Far Surpasses All Predictions

In the light of what the "Cross Country" model is doing, our early predictions and claims are smashed to smithereens. It establishes a new standard. It has all of the refinements, comfort and luxury of cars selling up to $4000. It has ample power and is supremely quiet. No car at any price is built of better materials and it is no wonder that the Rambler factory has adopted a 10,000-mile guarantee as their measure of faith.

GREAT HITS BY WILD SCHULTE.

Star Slugger of Chicago Has Fine Batting Record.

Forty-eight Homers Made Off Big League Heavers.

New York Giant Pitchers Are His Pet Aversion.

While no one knows just what information regarding F. Wildfire Schulte is contained in C. Webb Murphy's promised history of the noted home-runnist and distinguished poet, it is almost a moral certainty that the Cub president has not obtained a list of the men the Cub right fielder has landed on for home runs since he has been in the National League. F. Wildfire, from September 24, 1904, to September 27, 1911, inclusive, has poled four-baggers off the deliveries of thirty-five flingers, ten portsiders having yielded one or more circuit smashes.

The only sets of slabmen whom Schulte has found difficulty with in accumulating homers are those of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati clubs. Each corps has limited him to two, and it was not until July 4 of last year that the bridegroom succeeded in hoisting the ball out of the lot when facing a Red gunner.

FORTY-EIGHT HOME RUNS.

Schulte, since he has been in the National, has hit for the grand tour on forty-eight occasions (really on forty-nine, for last year an official scorer seemingly went out of his way to deprive him of a circuit rap.) Schulte has paid particular and unwelcome attention to the offerings of the New York artillerists, having made twelve of his four-base smashes at their expense. Boston's pitchers have yielded nine home runs; Brooklyn's, the same number; Philadelphia's, seven; St. Louis', seven; Pittsburgh's, two, and Cincinnati's, two.

Thrice has Schulte obtained a brace of four-base drives in the same controversy. To send the ball to the limes and bring in the three runners on the bases also is no novelty for the Cub right fielder, for last year he hit for four furlongs four times when the sacks all had occupants, the pitchers who suffered being Marquard of New York, Keefe of Cincinnati and Tyler and Brown of Boston.

LIST OF CIRCUIT CLOUTS.

Below will be found a list of the home runs made by Schulte since he has been in the National League, together with the names of the men off whom these four-baggers were obtained:

Season of 1904—two.
Season of 1905—one.
Season of 1906—seven:
May 4, off Leifield, Pittsburgh; May 24, off Lindaman, Boston; June 7, off Ferguson, New York; June 11, off Pastorius, Brooklyn; July 15, off Fichtz, Philadelphia;; August 17, off Scanlan, Brooklyn; September 24, off Mason, Brooklyn.
Season of 1907—two.
Season of 1908—one.
Season of 1909—four:
May 14, off Crandall, New York; May 18, off Sparks, Philadelphia; June 30, off Bell, Brooklyn; August 8, off Rucker, Brooklyn.
Season of 1910—ten:
May 25, off Sparks, Philadelphia; July 27, off Lush, St. Louis; August 6, off Ames, New York; August 4, off Crandall, New York; August 26, off Drucke, New York (two;) August 28, off Ames, New York, and Crandall, New York; September 15, off Moore, Philadelphia; October 10, off Hearne, St. Louis.
Season of 1911—twenty-one:
April 12, off Sallee, St. Louis; April 20, off Golden, St. Louis; April 23, off Golden, St. Louis; May 19, off Stack, Philadelphia; May 29, off Moore, Philadelphia; June 3, off Marquard, New York; July 4, off Keefe, Cincinnati; July 15, off Perdue, Boston; July 18, off Tyler, Boston; July 26, off Ewing, Philadelphia; July 26, off McTigue, Boston (first game;) July 26, off Perdue, Boston, second game; August 2, off Rucker, Brooklyn; August 4, off Burgess, Brooklyn; August 12, off Steele, St. Louis (two;) August 16, off Brown, Boston; August 17, off Perdue, Boston; August 19, off Mattern, Boston; September 7, off Gaspar, Cincinnati; September 27, off Marquard, New York.

COBB FACES REAL RIVAL IN JACKSON.

Ty Cobb is slated to have a rival this season. He is Joe Jackson, the sensational young slugger of the Cleveland Naps. Jackson recently announced he is going after Cobb's record in all departments of the game—base running and fielding, as well as being the champion batsman of the country.

Connie Mack, manager of the world's champion Athletics, is one of the critics who have figured out how this is going to happen. Mack claims Joe is a faster man getting to first base than Tyrus, "and the only reason," says Mack, "Ty has had it on Joe getting to the other bases in the past seasons is because of Ty's greater experience.

"Now that the Naps are in charge of one of the headiest baseball men in the game, Harry Davis, who will encourage Joe to take bigger leads off first base, he will show him how far he dares get away from the bag, and then Joe will be burning up the base lines."

"As a slugger Joe has led every league he ever batted in until last year, when he was second to Cobb, with 408 per cent. Ty got all the advantage from the scorers, who properly figured that Ty's great speed drew many wild throws in efforts to beat him out, and that therefore he earned a hit on such plays. But Ty is hardly likely to break his own world's record, and Jackson will be better this year now that he knows the American League pitchers better."

BUES PASSED UP.

Art Bues, the sticking prodigy of the Northwestern League, who rapped out something like twenty-seven home runs during the season, and whose heavy hitting resulted in his sale to New York, has been disposed of to the Buffalo club of the Eastern League. He could not hit the major-league heavers in the same style that he sampled the work of the flingers in the Northwestern League.

The R. & L. Control Is Safer Than Any Other

No fiddling with two similarly placed levers, one to steer and one for power—its confusing—its dangerous.

The R. & L. Control is positive—it has the "off lock" which throws the power off in any position.

Draw it slightly back—the Electric Brake is on and you don't have to sprain your ankles on a foot-brake every time you stop.

VAN THINKS CAPRON WILL SURELY STICK.

Reports from the training camp of the Pittsburgh National League Club say that Ralph Capron, the former Gopher star, is undoubtedly one of the fastest youngsters ever seen in a Pirate uniform. He is not yet through with his education, and the Pirates had a hard time landing him, as his parents were opposed to his taking up professional baseball as a means of earning a livelihood.

What makes many fans believe that Capron will make good is that he was recommended to the club by George Van Haltren, the former National League star, and at present located on the Pacific Coast. Van Haltren has been a scout in the employ of the Pirate owner for three years, in all of which time he never recommended the purchase of a player until he advised Col. Barney to grab Capron.

President Dreyfuss has many times commented on Van Haltren's record as a scout, and said that the veteran earned his money not by grabbing players for the club, but by steering it away from men who were worthless. Now that he has smashed his record by advising a purchase it seems certain that he knows considerable about the caliber of the young man, and feels certain in his own mind that Capron will stand the gaff.

FORD SETS WORLD RECORD.

Immense Shipment for Twenty-seven Days Exceeds All Previous Marks.

DETROIT, April 20.—Another world's record for automobile shipments has been broken in Detroit. The Ford Motor Company for the past month has exceeded even its own world-beating records, having shipped 8004 cars in the twenty-seven shipping days. This is an output absolutely unprecedented in automobile history anywhere in the world—and is a matter of much comment among the automobile contingent of Detroit.

N. A. Hawkins, commercial manager of the Ford company, is authority for the statement, that the tremendous Ford schedule of 75,000 cars to be manufactured in 1912, will be produced on scheduled time as planned. There are indications, however, that the demand will far exceed the supply and that the entire Ford output will be sold before the season is much farther advanced. The company has not been able to keep pace with its bona-fide orders. Long ago it made preparations to produce a definite allotment of cars each month of 1912, and it will not exceed this allotment, even at the determined instance of dealers, because it will not run chances of lowering its high standard of production. Hawkins expects, however, in the current month to see another record smashed.

Automobile dealers and garage owners of Lynn, Mass., have increased their general storage rates.

Road races under auspices of the Minnesota State Automobile Association are possible for next fall as a result of the announcement by the State Fair board that one afternoon only will be reserved for automobiles and that the feature will be a decorated machine parade.

Thomas — NOTHING COUNTS LIKE SERVICE

Thomas Declarations

A NUMBER of special features of Thomas Construction have been given prominence from time to time in the Thomas advertising. In this advertisement we group seven positive declarations which we believe will show California motorists that the product of the Thomas organization merits the serious consideration of every intending purchaser of a high grade car.

Thomas Declaration No. 1

We assert that the 1912 Thomas "Six-Forty" has the most powerful and effective brakes of any car of its weight and class, insuring the utmost safety to passengers.

Thomas Declaration No. 2

We assert that the upholstery of the 1912 Thomas "Six-Forty" is deeper, softer, better shaped, more luxurious, more restful for touring than in any other car made in this country or abroad.

Thomas Declaration No. 3

We assert that by the judicious combination of three quarter elliptic springs, secondary springs, shock absorbers, and recoil straps, the 1912 Thomas "Six-Forty" goes farther than any other car toward the riding comfort of the passengers, regardless of whether there may be but one passenger or five in the tonneau. This is especially conducive to comfort on long and strenuous tours.

Thomas Declaration No. 4

We assert that the 1912 Thomas "Six-Forty" goes further than any other car into the important details, known as refinements, which are intended to enhance the pleasure, comfort and convenience of the owner, the passengers and the operator.

Thomas Declaration No. 5

We assert that the carburetion and ignition of the Thomas "Six-Forty" is unexcelled in motor car construction. With seven passengers aboard it will throttle down on high gear to the remarkably slow speed of three miles per hour. This is on magneto operation and without slipping the clutch. One single miss-fire of a cylinder would stall the motor. Five miles per hour on battery is supposed to be the minimum for cars of the same weight, power and class.

Thomas Declaration No. 6

We assert that the low center of gravity of the Thomas "Six-Forty," made possible by suspending the gasoline and oil tanks from the chassis frame, gives the Thomas a decided advantage over all other American and foreign cars in holding the road, at high speeds, on sharp turns or on slippery pavements, and that this is a unique and distinct advance in 1912 construction.

Thomas Declaration No. 7

We assert that the 1912 Thomas 3-disc Clutch enables the operator to make an easier engagement and insures a more positive drive than any other type or kind of clutch in use at the present time.

Our Demonstrator is at your service to prove the absolute truth of these Declarations and to enable you to compare the Thomas with other cars of the highest grade.

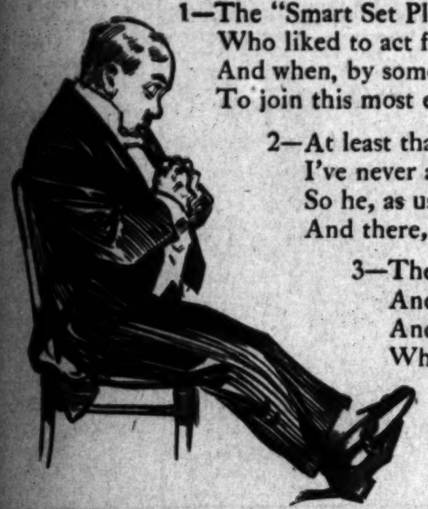
THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST. DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS



1—The "Smart Set Players" they were called—some of the younger crowd
Who liked to act for "Charity," as well as plaudits loud;
And when, by some kind freak of chance, the Jump-Ups were invited
To join this most exclusive club, of course they were delighted.

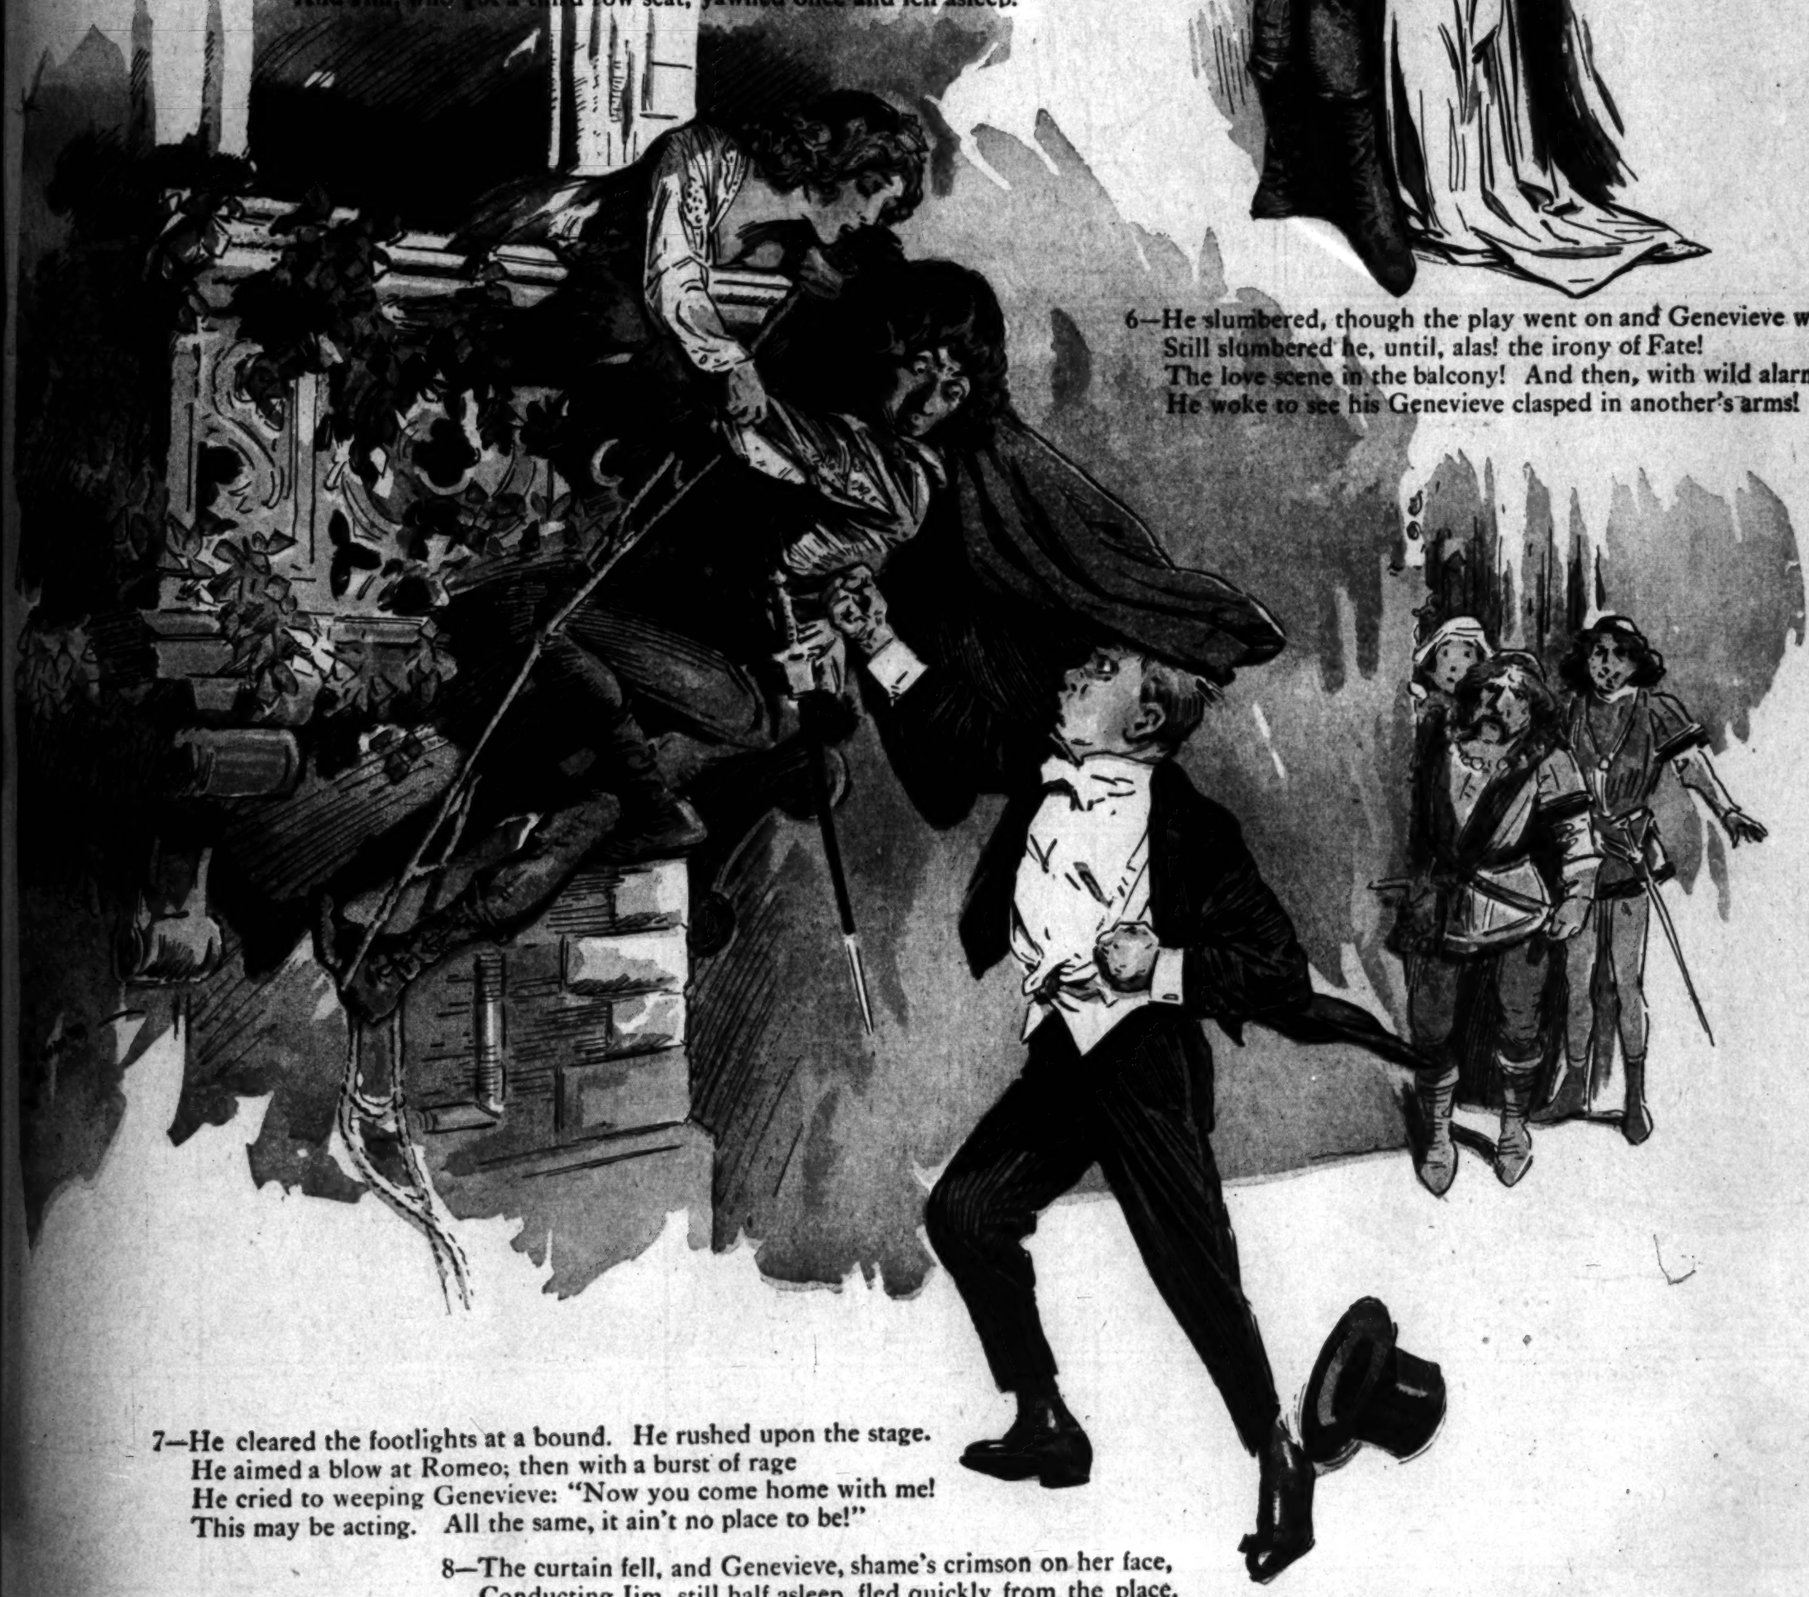
2—At least that's true of Genevieve. Jim said:—"Not me, old gal!
I've never acted on no stage, and gosh! I never shall!"
So he, as usual, stayed at home, while Wednesday nights she went,
And there, in real Society, such heavenly hours she spent!

3—Then still more joy! The time approached to give another play,
And "Romeo and Juliet" they chose without delay,
And Genevieve, to her amaze, was cast for Juliet,
While Romeo was young De Scadds, the year's cotillon pet!

4—Rehearsals now took up her time. She scarcely saw poor Jim,
And thought it useless, when she did, to tell the news to him
Until the night the play came off. Then, "Jim, dear, you must go!"
And Jim said:—"Well, if you insist; but gee! I dread it, though!"

5—The Swelldorf's ballroom was the place, and in the throng were seen
The Fuller-Coynes, the Gobbs A. Golds, the Pluncks and A. Long-Green,
White diamonds flashed, and wealth seemed piled in one gigantic heap,
And Jim, who got a third row seat, yawned once and fell asleep!

6—He slumbered, though the play went on and Genevieve was great.
Still slumbered he, until, alas! the irony of Fate!
The love scene in the balcony! And then, with wild alarms,
He woke to see his Genevieve clasped in another's arms!



7—He cleared the footlights at a bound. He rushed upon the stage.
He aimed a blow at Romeo; then with a burst of rage
He cried to weeping Genevieve: "Now you come home with me!
This may be acting. All the same, it ain't no place to be!"

8—The curtain fell, and Genevieve, shame's crimson on her face, Conducting Jim, still half asleep, fled quickly from the place.
"You wretch!" she cried. "That was real Art! Yes, Art—which you don't know!"
"Perhaps I don't," said luckless Jim, "but I know huggin', though!"

THE importance of the details of a toilette can never be overestimated by women who are well dressed. This season the accessories are more lovely than ever, and play an important role in the great scheme of fashion. They are the little touches that any one can add to a costume. Many of them can be made by a clever needlewoman, and pin-money intelligently spent on the manufactured ones will give individuality and style to the summer outfit.

The scarf gives comfort and beauty to the wearer. It is a new changeable silk tissue edged with a plain silk woven hem and fringe. Its silvery blue tone is like moonlight, only a little warmer, and the scarf, once made a part of the outfit, will be used innumerable times and enjoyed thoroughly.

The new bell parasol is one of the extras that can be raised with modistic safety. Its edge is curved upward and a cord is used to decorate the top. The under surface is lined with rose silk, casting a soft glow over the wearer's face. There are many sections on the top, and a long carved wooden handle colored to match the lining finishes the useful article.

Neckwear has taken unto itself the features of other days. Collars are now pleated in Pierrot style. Deep valenciennes lace vies with shadow lace in popularity. The stock is of insertion and beading, headed with a black velvet band. Cuffs of pleated lace finish the set. These are worn with the new long sleeves in dress or coat, giving a touch to a costume that is new and attractive.

The new breakfast or boudoir cap is of lace and made like a baby's cap, with a ruffle at the front and back. The model shows a band of colored ribbon under the lace and caught in a knot and loops at the side.

Net, a lace veil or rows of insertion combined with ribbon can be used to make an attractive little cap as a gift or as an accessory to the summer wardrobe.

The circular cape of embroidered silk comes straight from Japan. It is for cool evenings, protecting the shoulders and arms and adding an exquisite note to the costume. There is a straight high collar and a border of silk fringe. The chrysanthemum pattern is in white, and the all-white effect makes it possible for a harmonizing with any color of a gown underneath.

Do not forget the stock sash of velvet. It is adjustable, and one end is pulled up and over the other. Roses in either ribbon relief or woolen crochet decorate the ends. It gives a delightful touch of contrast to any dress for the afternoon or evening. The girdle or sash must be added to your list of etceteras if you would be entirely up to date.

Etcetera! The word opens up a realm of possibilities. The wisdom of choice will make or mar a costume. Let these hints determine the lines along which you will be guided in the making or purchasing of the important accessories for the spring and summer.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME

EDITED by MARION HARLAND

CO-OPERATION OF HEAD, HEELS, AND HANDS.

"MAKE your head save your heels."

"Carry as you go."

These two axioms were recently declared by a housekeeper to be the guiding principles of her domestic career.

The first has been one of my own pet proverbs for a long time, while I have practiced the second if I have not quoted it. It is a close kin to the idea of letting your brain spare work to the feet and hands.

Many are the ways in which the saying can be put into service. The effort to coordinate your work so that the head will save the heels brings a regulation of plans. Let me illustrate!

When I sit down to my desk I arrange everything in the order in which I will need it. Pen, blotter, pad, paper, envelopes are within easy reach, the stamp box close at hand, the slips holding letters to be answered, each marked in blue pencil with the department for which it is intended. As I run my eyes over the array my thoughts naturally group themselves and stand at attention. If I have to stop in the midst of the work to hunt up something needed, a degree of mental confusion ensues, and if I hold my thoughts steady to the subject it is at a cost of a strain which detracts from the force I wish to put into the business in hand.

This habit of order applies to my work alone? Not in the least. It runs through all the conduct of one's daily employment. Not every woman has to spend most of her days at her desk. See for a minute how the principle works in the kitchen.

Ways of Untrained Worker.

Did you ever watch the untrained worker undertake a piece of cookery—like the making of a cake, for instance? If the first call in the recipe is for cream, butter, and sugar, she goes to the ice box for the butter, to the pantry for the sugar, and brings them separately to the mixing table. Another journey to the closet for the mixing bowl, and perhaps still another for the spoon. Now she has something to begin on, and she creams her butter and sugar, and then turns again to the cook book. The next need is for beaten eggs. Back to the ice box for the eggs, to the closet for another bowl, the knife drawer for the egg-beater.

The eggs are broken, and beaten, and mixed with the butter and sugar. Another dip into the cook book and to the ice box for milk. Then once more to the pantry for flour, and perhaps again for baking powder. The cake finally mixed, the pans must be made the subject of search and the ice box again visited for butter or lard for greasing. There is a chance that meanwhile she has kept track of the oven's whether coal or gas, but there is also a possibility that she has to wait after the cake is in the pans until the oven is hot enough to bake.

An exaggeration? O, no, not at all! We have all seen just such experiences as this in our observation of the untrained worker.

Compare this with the housekeeper who has learned to make her head spare her heels. When she seeks the icebox for the butter she bears in mind the later need of milk and eggs. She marshals these on the table with the flour and sugar and baking powder before she begins mixing. All the utensils she will need, bowls, measuring cups, measuring and mixing spoons, egg beater, tins, are ready and the tins are greased. Not until all are at hand does she start in on her work, and then she goes on with it steadily until it is finished.

Can you see the difference in the amount of wear and tear induced by the two processes? Can you understand how the orderly habit of mind which the latter method encourages helps to simplify and lighten the mental as well as the material part of the work?

* *

Valuable Asset of Housekeeper.

This orderly habit of mind is perhaps the most valuable asset of the busy housekeeper.

"I run around after my work all day," complained a young homemaker to me only a few days ago. "I am at it from the time I crawl out of bed in the morning until I tumble back into bed at night. I hardly take a moment for play or for rest, yet nothing ever seems to get really done."

I could readily understand it, for I had seen her method—or lack of method—and that of others like her. She did her work as it came, without planning, without system. She never knew just how she stood with regard to any part of the conduct of her house. Instead of doing one line of work and finishing that, she would begin washing the dishes after breakfast, go up stairs for something, and stop while there to make a bed or two, go back to the dishes, recollect before she had finished that she had a pudding to make, and fly away to that, and while in the kitchen be led on to something else! No wonder she never felt as if anything were really done.

I have preached system all my life, early and late, but there always seems room for a word more about it. Even with those who have practiced it new lights are likely to arise. Now that the theory of scientific efficiency is abroad in the land and we are told the wisest principle is to save ourselves by making our heads spare our feet and hands, we may feel that our judgment is backed up by that of the men who have made a study of conditions of work.

Illustrations of this idea will occur to every housekeeper. The habit of grouping work has been formed by all of us who have learned saving our heels by our heads. If you are going to clean your attic you put aside a day for that and do not attempt to do anything of importance in other parts of the house. The day devoted to getting the cellar to rights is not interrupted by duties to be performed in the bedrooms and upper stories. You take such arrangement of tasks as a matter of course.

Think About Other Lines.

If you have not carried the principle into other lines of occupation, think about it now. Do you make your head save your fingers in the charge of your linen? Do you have your work basket at hand when you are sorting the clothes as they come from the wash and sew on the missing button, but the stitch that makes the difference between a little break now and a big hole later on? Then do you carry the idea to its legitimate conclusion by putting together all the larger pieces of mending in one place, so that you will lose no time looking them up when the chance comes to sit down for a couple of hours with your needle?

You see how the two items of the same theory work in together—the making your head save your hands by setting stray stitches as they are demanded by occasion and permitted by opportunity and the assembling of the other and more elaborate pieces of work so that you will waste no time in searching for them when you are ready to do them.

Go further with this and try it in your cookery. I know women who do much of their preserving and jellying in odd moments. The fruit that is left over from a meal is stewed and put up, the stray bargain of a few baskets of berries is utilized as it comes and helps to lighten the big work of putting up the winter's store of conserves. In the same way a good cook will make use of the time when she is waiting for the bread to rise before going into the oven to prepare the mayonnaise which will be needed for dinner the next day, the pastry which will keep for a week on ice, and when she may not be ready to put into pies for forty-eight hours.

"I NOW AROUND AFTER MY WORK ALL DAY."

So she compounds white and brown thickening for soups and gravies, maitre d'hotel butter—or lemon and parsley butter, as some cooks call it—so that when she wishes dressing for her fish or her boiled potatoes she has it at hand and does not have to take the time to prepare it. She has divers toothsome cake fillings which she has concocted at leisure, and materials served to produce variety with little cost of effort or time.

As the period draws near when we must concentrate our thoughts and labors on spring dressmaking there is especial need for making our heads spare our heels and our hands. We must get out in advance the list of the materials we shall require for remodeling and making over our last season's frocks as well as for lining and trimming new garments. If we delay until the dressmaker is in the house we lose in her time in our own effort and patience, and must use our heels and our hands as well as our heads to a fatiguing extent to gain the same result a little forethought would have won for us at much less cost.

Putting Up Woolens.

Again, when it comes to the dreaded business of putting up woolens we must use headwork. I know few more disagreeable experiences than that of toiling in a warm day to put away heavy clothing we feel at the moment we shall never wish to see again. Nothing can make it really easy, but many things can make it harder. Did you ever start on the task unprovided with all you wish in the way of pins or newspapers, or cotton cloth, or moth balls, or gasoline, or boxes, or strings?

Did you ever get everything in sight put up and all your materials exhausted only to discover in a dark closet three or four more bulky pieces which must be brushed and beaten and done up when you had nothing left in which to put them and were too far away from shops to supply what you need, and so had to let the hateful business drag on into another day? If you have ever undergone the experience you will think no expenditure of headwork too lavish which will spare you a repetition of the trial.

"Carry as you go." I hope you have long since learned how this saves both head and heels.

Years ago I had a worthy nurse in my employ who had brought the principle of "carry as you go" to a science. She never went up or down stairs or the length of the hall unladen, and she had one phrase in which she expressed her habit. "I just thought I'd bring it along in my hand," she would explain when she came in bearing some article which might not be needed for a couple of hours to come. "Just let me take it along in my hand," she would offer when she started for the upper or lower floor. Countless were the steps she saved herself and by others by her philosophy.

The merit of economy is that it saves you something which you then have the option to make use of in some other way. On the principle the values of the fifty cents you have spoken of are great. You have saved your heels and you have preserved strength you can expend in other directions. So carry as you go and the next time you are free to carry something else that is wanted. All helps in that conservation of time and force which is the great object of the study nowadays of wise men and women in the nation, in industries, in economies and in the home.

Flowers of Ner Ribbon.

Exquisite flowers are made from the narrow ribbons. From a short distance it is impossible to tell them from the real. They are artistic enough to delight the most fastidious, and are used for the coiffure, the hair, or for table decorations.

A pretty hair band is made of gold gauze ribbon sewn with flat pearls. The edges are rolled over, while the joining is effected under an exquisite poppy of deep pink satin ribbon. These poppies are an unusually handsome, some being made of deep pink and others of brilliant red satin ribbon two and one-half inches wide, cut into pieces four inches long. Each petal has four petals; each piece of the ribbon has the upper corners rounded off so that the raw edges turned under, forming a semi-irregular half circle. The entire curved edge is gathered on a silk thread, which slightly ruffles it, stimulating the delicate fluting of the real petal. The lower edges of all the petals are then gathered, forming a center or bunch of stamens. The leaves and buds are artificial, a little fluff of satin ribbon being inserted into the top of each bud.

Lilies are made of one-half inch satin ribbon. The petals, each about two and one-half inches long, are made of a double piece over loop of the ribbon, which is slightly shirred at the tip. Between the two pieces of ribbon in each petal a loop of fine wire is tacked, which permits the petal to be curled inward and gives body to it. Also a dozen of these petals are joined in a close base of a bunch of yellow stamens mounted on a wire stem. The stem is rolled with one-half inch wide green grosgrain ribbon, and the leaves of same are made of the same. These petals, first cut in number, form a collar around the petals. They are made by doubling over a five inch piece of gros grain ribbon, overhanding the edges on one side near the bottom and forming a long sharp angle by mitering the ribbon into a long point. The base is gathered and attached under the full head of petals

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

WE host off today with a lot of practical recipes written by a South Omaha, Neb., member. She evidently understands herself and the needs of fellow house mothers.

"If pie crust be made according to this recipe it can hardly be distinguished from the finest French puff paste:

"To one cupful of flour add one half-cupful of butter and iced water enough to flour to make a stiff dough. The butter should be chopped into the flour with a knife, and the water added slowly. The dough should never be touched by the hands. Roll out and leave in the icebox for twenty-four hours. This quantity is just enough for one pie.

"PUMPKIN PIE—Instead of taking so much time to cut up and peel the pumpkin, running the risk, also, of cutting your fingers, halve the pumpkin, remove the seeds, set in the oven and let it bake while you are going on with your work. When it is done remove from the oven and scrape out the pulp. It is of a much better flavor than when stewed. Mash it to a smooth paste and it is ready to be seasoned and made into pie. If one prefers to stew it, cut it up without peeling and cook. The rind gives it color and flavor.

"TO IMPROVE BOILED FROSTING—A little vinegar or cream-of-tartar greatly improves boiled frosting. If either be added, the frosting will not be so liable to grain while boiling and will be smoother and more creamy than if made in the usual way.

"NEWPORT SANDWICHES—Between thin slices of bread, from which the crust has been cut, lay a leaf of crisp lettuce, a slice of Roquefort cheese, cut as thin as a shaving, a layer of caviar, a slice of Spanish pepper, and then another crisp, cool lettuce leaf.

"PICKLED FRUIT SALAD—Chop or cut into cubes an equal quantity of pickled peaches, pickled pears and pickled green figs. Mix them well with a silver fork, taking care not to break or crush them, and cover with a rich French dressing. Serve upon crisp romaine leaves, with grated allspice over the surface.

"MRS. J. A. D."

It is so late in the season now that pumpkins are dear and indifferent. The cook saves time and labor by making the pies of canned pumpkin. The best pumpkin pies that appeared upon my table last winter were made of the canned vegetable.

* *

Strawberry Icing.

"As strawberries will soon be here, perhaps you can use the inclosed. It is the easiest and nicest formula for icing I have ever tried.

"STRAWBERRY ICING—Stir together a cupful of confectioner's sugar and six or seven large ripe strawberries. Beat to a cream and set on ice for half an hour before putting it upon the cake.

"MRS. W. H. C."

Are you sure you have not left out the cohesive property in the recipe? According to my notion, the strawberries and sugar would make a strup that would run over the cake and leave it wet and bare. The white of an egg, beaten to a stiff meringue, with confectioner's sugar before the berries go in, would be more likely to stick to the cake. Please let us know if you have tried this easy method for yourself, or if you have taken it upon the word of another. We are obliged to omit scores of recipes we would gladly publish because of some flagrant omission or absolute absurdity that is instantly apparent to the practiced eye.

Recipe for Planked Fish.

"Please let me have a recipe for planked fish—especially for small fish. Must it be split?

"Can you tell me what to do with magazines, all in good condition? Can you give me the addresses of persons who may want them? ELEANOR."

PLANKED FISH—The rules are the same for large and for small fish. The latter, however, are seldom cooked in this way.

Clean and wash the fish and split down the back as for broiling. Have at hand a clean board of oak or hemlock (never of pine) that will fit easily into your oven. Set it in the oven to heat, turning it several times and watching to see that it does not burn. Rub the fish on both sides with butter—plenty of it—and salt and pepper to taste. Lay the fish with the back downward and the open side uppermost upon the board and put a tin tack into each of the four corners. Lay the plank upon the upper grating of the oven, shut the door, and bake.

Rub it every five minutes with butter until it is done. Test with a fork, and if there is no sign of rawness in the thickest part withdraw the tin tacks carefully and slip the fish upon a hot platter. Send around melted butter with it; garnish with sliced lemon and parsley sprigs.

As to the magazines, we could send you addresses by the dozen if you had given us any name in addition to "Eleanor." A stately name, but a letter could not be depended upon to go straight that bore no other.

Since we cannot distribute the magazines for you, I advise you to drop a post card to the headquarters of the Salvation army nearest to you and ask that the store of magazines in good condition be sent for. Your request will be promptly complied with.

How to Clean Felt.

"Here is a wee scrap of information that may save some member, or members, a few cents:

"FELT HAT CLEANER—After I had paid 50 cents to have my daughter's white felt hat cleaned by 'the profession,' a milliner's apprentice confided to me that the cleaning was done with the moderately soft inner part of a loaf of stale bread (wheat bread). I find upon making the experiment that it does the work perfectly. Mrs. G. W. H."

White felt hats may likewise be cleaned with block magnesia. I made the discovery—not through the incautious talk of a milliner's apprentice—but when a hat was sent home from the cleaner's with traces of chalk or magnesia on the under side of the brim. I began experiments, based upon the discovery, and with such success that I have never had to send felt out of the house to be cleaned since then. Gray felt may be cleansed with pulverized fuller's earth. Being gray in color, the powder does not show upon the felt.

Pineapple Pudding Good Dessert.

"I want to tell 'Mrs. J. F. McC.' that if she will put a tablespoon of melted fat in her pancakes she need not grease the griddle, and the cakes will be better.

"Can you let me have one or two recipes for heavenly hash?

"I inclose a recipe for a nice dessert.

"PINEAPPLE PUDDING—Soak half a box of gelatin in half a cup of cold water for half an hour. Then add to half the juice of a can of pineapple enough water to make it a pint. Stir into this a cup of sugar and boil three minutes. Pour, boiling hot, upon the gelatin. Let it stand until it begins to thicken. Then beat it until it looks like white cream. Let it harden sufficiently to hold up the fruit. Then add half a cupful of chopped canned pineapple. Set in the ice to harden. Turn out of the mold and serve with whipped cream. It is good without this.

"You may make this dessert with any other fruits, canned or fresh. I have many more good recipes if you would like to have them. Mrs. A. N. N."

If our generous readers will send in recipes for heavenly hash you shall have them. Will that do?

By all means let us have the recipes, if the quality is as fine as that with which you favor us today.

We are to have it for our Sunday dinner, using the incomparable Hawaiian pineapple, which is canned, ripe and fresh, in the field in which it grows.

Hasenpfeffer Recipe.

"HASENPFEFFER—Cut a rabbit into small pieces; add an onion, minced, and a few bay leaves. Cook in enough water to cover it until tender.

"For dressing cut three or four slices of fat bacon into small dice and fry brown and crisp. Add a tablespoonful of browned flour; keep stirring to keep from burning; add a teaspoonful each of sugar and of salt, a tablespoonful of vinegar, and a few whole cloves. Next add the rabbit with the liquor in which it was boiled, and you have your hasenpfeffer.

"I had the recipe from a German family. "Mrs. C. A."

The recipe is so much simpler than a majority of those offered for the preparation of the many syllabled dish that I gladly insert it, although we have printed several for the same viand recently.

* *

How to Make Swedish Bread?

"May I prefer a request? Can you or some member of the Helping Hand supply a recipe for Swedish bread, or hardtack?

"Our sole knowledge of it is of the commercial article which is sold in packages weighing fifteen ounces. It is made of rye flour, I fancy, and no yeast is used. Sometimes it is flavored with aniseed. The batter must have been thin, as the bread is in thin, waferlike sheets.

"I should be grateful for this recipe. "H. W."

Unless you mean what I buy as "Swedish wafers," which are round, as thin as writing paper, and stamped all over, I do not know to what you refer. It is more than likely that some of my colleagues are wiser and that the recipe will be contributed.

Four Recipes Requested.

"Kindly give me a recipe for putting up fruits whole, also crystallized fruits. I should also like a good recipe for angel cake. Can you give me a recipe for candied orange peel?

"I am much interested in the Helping Hand and will gladly send in any recipes that I have found useful. Mrs. H. K."

I offer a recipe for canning pears whole, which may be taken as a guide in putting up all fruits whole. The rules are the same in every instance.

CANNED PEARS, WHOLE—Wash and core large, firm pears, dropping into cold water as you core each. Drain and put into a porcelain lined kettle, cover with cold water and simmer gently until they are tender but not until they break or crumble. Drain off the liquor and return to the kettle, spreading the fruit upon bread platters to cool. Allow to the water in which they were cooked a pound of sugar to each quart, and boil hard for five minutes. Then add the juice of two lemons. Return the pears to the liquid in the kettle and bring to a gentle boil. Take them out and pack in scalded jars set in hot water. Fill each jar to overflowing with the boiling syrup. Have ready in scalding water the tops. Fit the rubbers upon the jars, and on the tops and seal instantly.

N. B.—More acid fruits, such as peaches and apples, plums and cherries do not need the addition of the lemon juice.

CRYSTALLISED FRUITS—Make a syrup of a pound of sugar and a gill of water. Boil, without stirring, until a drop falling into cold water becomes brittle. Remove the saucepan from the fire and set at once in an outer pan of cold water. Add to the syrup a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Run the juice of a long black or silver pin into the fruit to be crystallized and dip each piece into the hot thickening syrup.

Spread upon buttered or waxed papers to dry.

ANGEL CAKE—Sift a teaspoonful of cream of tartar six times with a half cupful of flour. Whip the whites of six eggs until they stand alone; then gradually stir into them a half cupful of granulated sugar and the sifted flour. Beat hard and turn into a clean ungreased pan with a funnel in the middle. Bake in a steady oven until a straw comes out clean from the thickest part. Turn the pan upside down upon a clean towel and as the cake cools it will slip out of the tin. When it is cold cut the bottom and sides of the loaf.

CANDIED ORANGE PEEL—When pealing the oranges cut the rind into quarters, then into long strips. Put into a saucepan, cover with cold water, and set them over the fire. As soon as they lightly boil drain off the water and lay the strips upon a platter to cool.

To the pulp of six oranges allow one and a half cupfuls of granulated sugar and a cupful of water. Put these together in a porcelain lined saucepan and bring quickly to the boil. Strain the liquid and pulp through cheese cloth and return the syrup to the fire. Drop in the orange peeling when the boil begins again and cook steadily, watching to keep it from burning.

When the strup has boiled down to one-half of the original quantity take the saucepan from the fire and stir in a cupful of granulated sugar. Do not put it again over the fire, but stir until it is almost cold. The peel should be thoroughly rinsed in then. Pick it out with your fingers, a piece at a time, and lay upon waxed paper to cool and get firm.

TROUSSEAU

ACCESSORIES count for much in calculating the success of a trousseau of a bride today. The girl who is planning what she is to have and how to expend the money at her disposal to the best advantage will put almost as much thought into the little things as she does on the best gown itself.

Happily for her, the majority of the little things are handmade and can be fashioned by the girl herself at odd moments or during the leisure evening hours.

Her sachets, for example, are all made by the girl herself or by devoted friends. Twenty, even ten years ago, the bride's girl friends would make large sachets of quilted satin, covered with pink satin that was decorated with elaborate embroidery or hand painting.

Fortunately for the bride of today that fashion is no longer with us. Dainty sachets are now made of the thinnest china silk or fine handkerchief linen.

They are cut double, of course, and have a sheet of very thin wadding between; but they occupy such a small amount of space that several, with their contents, can be carried in a suitcase with room to spare. A very lovely one is designed to hold dainty lingerie, is made of pale blue china silk thirty-six inches long and eighteen inches wide, doubled. Between the two pieces of silk is laid the cotton wadding, thickly sprinkled with the bride's favorite sachet. The silk which is to be the inside of the sachet is caught to the wadding at intervals with tiny stitches to hold the wadding in place.

The outside piece of silk is embroidered with a large bowknot, having long ends that ripple over the length of the sachet. The embroidery is done in white floss.

The edges of the silk are turned in and sewed together by hand, then bound with narrow blue satin ribbon. Next the sachet is folded over on itself until fifteen inches and the edges caught together with a loose buttonhole or cross stitch, leaving three inches at the top. This fold over like the flap on an envelope. This had a piece of the ribbon in the center held down by a flat bow;

TROUSSEAU ACCESSORIES

ACCESSORIES count for much in calculating the success of the trousseau of a bride today, and the girl who is planning what she is to have and how to expend the money at her disposal to the best advantage will give almost as much thought into the little things as she does on the dress itself.

Happily for her, the majority of these little things are handmade and can be fashioned by the girl herself at odd moments or during the leisure evening hours.

Her sachets, for example, are all made by the girl herself or by devoted friends. Twenty, even ten years ago, the bride's dear friends would make large sachets of quilted satin, covered with plain satin that was decorated with elaborate embroidery or hand painting.

Fortunately for the bride of today, that fashion is no longer with us, for sachets are now made of the thinnest china silk or fine handkerchief linen.

They are cut double, of course, and have a sheet of very thin wadding between; but they occupy such a small amount of space that several, with their contents, can be carried in a suitcase, with room to spare. A very lovely one, designed to hold dainty lingerie, is made of pale blue china silk thirty-six inches long and eighteen inches wide, double. Between the two pieces of silk is laid the cotton wadding, thickly sprinkled with the bride's favorite sachet. The silk which is to be the inside of the sachet is caught to the wadding at intervals with tiny stitches to hold the wadding in place.

The outside piece of silk is embroidered with a large bowknot, having long ends that triple over the length of the sachet. The embroidery is done in eidelweiss.

The edges of the silk are turned in and sewed together by hand, then bound with narrow blue satin ribbon. Now the sachet is folded over on itself for three inches and the edges caught together with a loose buttonhole or cat stitch, making three inches at the top to serve as the flap on an envelope. The end of the ribbon in the same fold down by a flat bow; the under part is fitted with the same, so that when the lingerie is slipped into the silken case the sachet may be tied together and laid in the bottom of bureau drawer, trunk or suitcase, protecting its dainty contents from dust.

Smaller sachets are made, exactly on the same principle, of linen or pretty flowered lawn, the flowers matching the color of ribbon used.

Ribbon trimming the sachet should match in color and shade that which is run through the lace beading on the lingerie.

Another useful accessory to the trousseau is a throwover of china silk.

This is made from a square yard of silk, and many and varied are its uses.

It may have a plain hemmed border or a two-inch hem can be feather-stitched all around with silk floss matching the color of the china silk.

Fit one side of the "throw" with pockets made of squares and oblongs of silk, machine stitched on, and into these slip the articles most needed at the end of a journey when you stop at a hotel overnight—a change of underclothing, the night robe, a fresh blouse, lace jabot, belt, handkerchief, gloves or whatever you will require first. Then when the trunk or suitcase is packed, the "throw" is laid on top, folded neatly and tucked in at the edges; then everything is conveniently at hand when needed.

It can also be used as a trunk cover or to toss over the lingerie when laid upon a chair at night.

Nimble fingers will also take delight in making all the dainty dress accessories in which every bride delights.

Girdles of ribbon and silk, jabots of lace and linen, satin and velvet bows for the neck, embroidered collars in varying sizes and shapes, besides the hundred and one other pretty things that suggest themselves as the bride-to-be works on.

Almost indispensable are oblong bags of bright colored chintz or gingham, made perfectly plain, to slip the shoes, overshoes or slippers in when they must be carried about from place to place.

It will not be difficult to fashion any of these things, and with each stitch will be woven into these dainty things some happy thought of a golden future.

THE embroidered belt on linen or military belting holds a place in the summer wardrobe that no other kind has been able to take. Fashions may vary, but the white belt in its tailored effect will go on for years to come. And then it is so delightfully easy to make. Have you ever priced hand-embroidered belts? Try it and then come back to this page. I am giving today a variety to suit all tastes. The French knot design is very quickly done; the buckle in French knots surrounds your own initial or monogram, and regular embroidery stitches are used in the rest of the ideas.

Spirea is always effective.

French knots in white can be made as large as you wish, or in two sizes; of course, the size of any knot depends upon the thickness of thread and the number of times that it is wound around the needle. Work the stems in a corded outline and the leaves in outline or half solid. If you are blessed with much time, an entire solid leaf is even better. This design is effective in colors selected to match the stripe in the shirtwaist or the main color in the suit with which the belt is to be worn.

Daisies are always favorites. They can be relieved by the addition of yellow centers. The forget-me-nots have been added for a new feature. Remember that an all-white treatment increases the wearing possibilities of any embroidered work. Work the petals of the blossoms in solid stitches and use outlining for the slender stems. French knots fill the centers very effectively and quickly. The leaves are so slender that I would recommend solid work for them also.

When working the diamond design in forget-me-nots, use solid stitches for the leaves and, just for a change, make the petals by grouping a few French knots to form them. If your thread be very coarse, one large knot will suffice. This is a very neat, dainty design. Blue for the flowers adds a delightful color note to this belt. Any pale color could be used, with white for the leaves.

Bowknots are used on the next belt. The buckle-shaped shield should be outlined and then filled in with French knots. Add your initial or monogram by either drawing, padding and working or using the small forms so much in vogue.

Pad the bowknots and work in solid stitch. The blossoms should then be worked solid, with a small French knot in the center. Finish the design by outlining the stems and filling in the slender leaves.

Wild roses with just a touch of solid work on the turned edges are the last flowery offer. Work as you see, and fill in the center of each flower by solid stitches surrounded with small French knots. The leaves should be solid and the stems in outline.

I know of one woman who is making her Christmas gifts now. She is enthusiastic over belts, and says that she is going to make them while the sun of leisure shines. They are easy work and show the hand touch so beautifully that you ought to trace them and prepare for the gift-giving day when the personal touch is so thoroughly appreciated. The time is now!

Embroidered Sashes

THE revival of the directoire fashions marks the return of the inevitable sash.

This is a welcome fact to most women, who realize what an improvement sashes are to any frock.

Black velvet or satin is a favored material for the directoire sash-girdle.

These are not difficult to make and are inexpensive if fashioned at home. It requires three yards of three-inch ribbon velvet. Three-fourths of a yard forms the waist belt. To this attach three hooks and eyes to fasten at the side.

The longer sash end should be cut 1¼ yards and the shorter one yard long. The ends are bordered with a deep silk fringe.

If black satin is used, it requires 1¼ yards. Cut the strips bias, the desired width of the sash.

Form the waist belt of soft folds. The ends are effective if embroidered either in black or colors. If the latter are preferred, select an Arabian design.

The ends may be rounded or diagonal. Sashes of wide ribbon require very little time to make. It requires three-fourths of a yard for the waist belt and the balance for the ends.

It will not be difficult to fashion any of these things, and with each stitch will be woven into these dainty things some happy thought of a golden future.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Washable Linen Bows

THERE is nothing quite so dainty and becoming as a touch of white at the collar of a dress. When the frocks are of dark linen, this adds much to their attractiveness.

Not every one can wear large jabots or frills, but a small bow always looks well.

These charming bows are easily made and, what is still better, they are easily laundered at home.

Small pieces of linen are used for these bows, measuring 6½ by 9½ inches. The edges should be buttonholed in small scallops.

Pleat through the center and finish with a narrow fold of the linen.

If a pattern is first cut from paper, it is much easier to cut the linen in the desired shape.

Variety may be gained by making the pieces of linen square, or the corners may be rounded.

Two pieces of material may be used for a bow, cutting one slightly smaller than the other, forming a double bow.

Any dainty spray of flowers or design may be embroidered upon either end, adding to the beauty of the bow.

This is a clever way to use small odds and ends of linen. One can never have too many small bows for warm-weather wear.

Colors may be used to embroider and buttonhole the edges, matching any frock you desire to wear the bow with.

FACING FOR YOUR HAT

THIS season straw hats are to be faced either with velvet or silk, declares one of the famous makers of millinery fashions in Paris. Facings on the under brim of hats are beautiful and usually very becoming to the wearer, provided they fit properly and are put on without the slightest crease or wrinkle.

Few women who trim their own hats have the slightest idea of how to adjust a fitted facing, and this work is either left undone or put into the hands of an experienced milliner, for it is deemed a difficult task, and yet, when one knows how, is not so hard after all.

When you have selected your summer hat, take a sheet of tissue paper large enough to cover the entire brim. Lay this flat on a table and put the hat on top of it.

Have at hand plenty of sharp-pointed pins—steel pins are the best—and draw the paper up over the brim, pinning it fast to the edge at intervals of one-half inch all the way around.

This done, cut the paper outside the edge to a point one-half inch above the brim's edge, then turn the hat over and slash the paper in the center of the crown to a point one-quarter of an inch inside of the brim line. Make eight or ten slashes across the diameter of the crown, so the paper will fit up into it without wrinkling.

Between the slashes the paper will be pointed; cut off one inch from each point.

With great care remove the paper from the hat. You now have a correct pattern from which to cut the material for facing.

With a pencil mark the center of the front and the center of the back on your pattern, so that when you cut out the material the grain will run properly. Velvet must be cut so the nap runs from back to front, and silk must be cut so the straight of the goods follows the line from center front to center back of the hat.

Cut your facing exactly like the pattern and lay it on the hat's brim, taking care not to stretch it in so doing.

Pin it securely to the brim's edge, as you did the pattern, then smooth it into the crown and pin at frequent intervals at the crown line.

Be sure the facing lies smoothly before you begin to sew.

Beginning at the center back, turn the edge of the facing to meet the edge of the hat's brim and sew it fast with a small slip stitch—that is, running the thread under the edge of the velvet and catching it to the straw.

If you use satin or taffeta for a facing, it will be necessary to have an interlining, cut exactly like the facing, cambric or some thin, firm lining material.

This is not necessary when the facing is of velvet.

With the hand, smooth the facing from the edge of the brim toward the crown and, if necessary, readjust the pieces to make it fit without a single wrinkle. This done, sew the facing to the crown line, using a long-and-short back stitch and strong cotton thread.

The hat's lining is also sewed around at this point, concealing the fine stitching on the facing. Then the hat is faced, ready for the trimming. It does not sound so terribly difficult after all. I am quite sure that the woman who can trim her own hats can face them if she follows these directions.

Summer Bedspreads

THE sleeping apartments during the summer should be made to appear dainty and cool.

This is an easy matter and little expense is attached to it. After all the draperies used during the winter have been stored away and the unnecessary articles of furniture dispensed with, clothe your room in its summer garb.

Purchase plain, barred or figured dimity, any color your taste may dictate. From this fashion a cover for your bureau, dressing table and the window draperies.

Measure the length of the bed and allow three or four widths of material according to the size of the bed. This may be finished by a ruffled flounce, pleating or by a deep hem. Fourteen inches from the hem, or bordering the ruffle, stitch bands of barred dimity.

Cut these bands from a wide-striped design, which may be had in a great number of varieties.

These spreads are easily laundered and may be kept fresh and clean throughout the hot, dusty summer.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS of WELL-DRESSED FOLK

Elizabeth Corinne Hauk

WITH THE DRESSMAKER

MADGE MY DEAR:

Are you, too, deep in the intricacies of dressmaking? I have found out that I am a blue-ribbon winner in making two dresses grow where only one grew before; but that is due to a clever little seamstress who really is an artist and the leniency of fashion with regard to the use of remnants in summer frocks.

Bob's sister is staying with us and availed herself of my new treasure. She had an exquisite little batiste frock that suggested Dresden shepherdesses and all that. The bodice was shirred, with a round yoke of ecru net. The lower line of the yoke was edged with embroidered pink roses. At the bottom of the skirt was inset a deep band of net, its upper line curved and trimmed with roses. The "stock" sash was of black velvet, fringed and rose-trimmed. These are quite the thing, my dear.

Of course, the sleeves were slightly full, with net cuffs and pink roses on them. The whole effect was exquisite.

Isabel Gowen dropped in to cheer us up with her accounts of society. Her lavender frock was stunning. It was a combination of plain and striped marquisette. Sleeves and an underflounce were striped. A plain shield fell over the front and back of the bodice. This was edged with deep lavender silk in scallops. Buttons and simulated buttonholes trimmed the plain overskirt. She wore with this a pansy hat, with two wired loops of iridescent purple-and-green taffeta at one side.

I held sway at the machine, but I felt comfortable in my pretty little lawn frock made with long button-trimmed coat sleeves and trimmed with pique collar and cuffs.

This combination of heavy pique or duck with thin material met with Isabel's approval, who, you know, is well informed concerning the little touches that make our dressmaking world go 'round.

I must not forget the little seamstress. She wore an attractive little one-piece frock of green linen, buttoned down the back. It had a stitched tunic cut in points, and was simply trimmed with a deep collar and cuffs of pleated white batiste. She changes these for fine embroidered ones and for net, she says. It is just the ideal frock for all-day work, and she says that she feels as well dressed at the end of the day as at the beginning.

I confess that I have enjoyed this sewing circle, for it has been profitable and delightful to make beautiful (and, need I add, inexpensive) things.

Goodby. Your devoted sister,
